Tentative pact with teachers

By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON—Negotiators for Newton teachers and the School Committee reportedly reached a tentative contract agreement early this morning following a 10-hour marathon bargaining session and a week of unrest in public schools.

Teachers reported to classes on opening day Wednesday but decided not to put in any time after school until a settlement was reached. About 300 teachers demonstrated in front of the Education Center Tuesday night to protest the lack of a new contract. The old teacher contract expired Aug. 31.

Additional job action was threatened by Warren Priest, Newton Teacher Accociation (NTA) president, if the new contract remained unsettled.

School Committeewoman Sandra Fleishman said at 4:30 this morning that the two sides drafted a "memorandum of understanding." She said no terms of the potential pact would be released.

The potential agreement will now be presented to the members of the Newton Teachers Association for ratification. No time for that ratification session was announced.

NTA President Priest said earlier this week that "Money is the major issue." He added, "Its is a problem that has faced every bargaining table in the country in 1980.

Another labor dispute, involving custodians, almost kept Newton Public Schools from opening on time this morning.

According to Bob Robards, president of Local 454 representing the Newton school custodians, the school administration told custodians that if they showed up to work this morning without their uniforms, they would be sent home.

Custodians did not wear their uniforms yesterday as a protest against the city's withholding their uniform allowance.

The custodians do not yet have a new contract with the city and are following the example of the Newton teachers by following a strict 40 hour week with no overtime as a reaction to their not having a contract.

Rep. Mofenson call it quits, endorses Frank for Congress

By STEVEN BURKE
Staff Writer

BOSTON — "How many times can you get kicked and like it? It was just a look at the realities and not being able to compete."

This is the way Rep. Joe DeNucci described his friend Rep. David Mofenson's withdrawal from the 4th District Congressional race Thursday.

Mofenson, the senior representative from Newton, made the announcement to withdraw from the race and endorse his liberal opponent, Back Bay Rep. Barney Frank, at a Statehouse press conference Thursday morning.

David Mofenson

Frank will now face Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, a self-described conservative, head on in the Sept. 16 Democratic primary for the seat vacated by Rep. Robert Drinan after an edict from the Pope.

The painful decision for Mofenson to drop out of the race came after a 90 minute meeting Wednesday between officials of the Mofenson and Frank campaigns at the Red Coach Inn in Newton.

DeNucci, one of Mofenson's strongest supporters, said Mofenson's fading prospects, including the depletion of Mofenson's campaign treasury and other issues which Mofenson is concerned about, were discussed at the Red Coach Inn meeting.

Mofenson met with campaign supporters in a meeting closed to the press Thursday morning at his campaign headquarters on Washington Street in Newton to announce his decision to supporters.

Mofenson looked tired and disapointed as he entered the head quarters to the applause of supporters.

One Mofenson supporter leaving the campaign headquarters had a tear in her eyeas she said, "It is very sad. There was a lot of pain and agonizing."

The supporter said, "I feel our concern was for David's political future if he stayed in the race and Clark got elected. He would never get any liberal support again."

She added, "However, this is politics and if you are going to be in it, you have got to realize it."

DeNucci said that Clark campaign officials urged Mofenson to stay in the race.

DeNucci, who said he will now support Clark, discussed Mofenson's withdrawal in an interview Thursday.

DeNucci argued, "I really feel that David was done in unfairly by by the media and parts of his constituency."

Criticizing The Boston Globe for endorsing Frank, DeNucci said, "The media painted an unfair picture from the start that David couldn't win."

Mofenson was disillusioned and angered by liberals who felt that the split of the liberal vote by and Frank would result in a Clark victory.

DeNucci said, "How the hell do you compete with the Boston Globe endorsing Frank?"

"I think that the reality of the situation which made David come to the conclusion was that he does not have the resources to compete."

DeNucci explained, "I am very disapointed in the liberal establishment, particularly in Newton. They leave their wounded and that is sad."

Noting that Mofenson "fought a good fight," DeNucci said, "It angers me that certain people felt David was a spoiler. He did not move to the district . Frank did."

DeNucci said he was relieved by Mofenson's withdrawal from the contest. "It pained me to see him go through the past four months," he explained. "People that he fought for and with over the last 10 years, turned their backs on him."

"I am very proud to call him my friend," he said. "I just hope there is something in the future in public life for David Mofenson."

Mofenson never really regained his balance after the Drinan endorsement of Frank. Mofenson claims that Drinan said he would remain neutral and has not spoken to Drinan since the endorsement.

In an interview last week before he withdrew from the race, Mofenson called Frank's decison to enter the race "rank opportunism."

When he was asked if he had lost respect for Drinan and Frank since the race began, Mofenson said, "I would rather not comment on that."

Mofenson gave no indication of his withdrawal from the race in the interview. In fact, he said, "Head on against either one of them, I would win the race a lot more easily than I am going to win it here."

When Mofenson was asked if heregretted making the run for Congress, he said, "It has been a very epic experience, I guess is one way to describe it, It has been a powerful experience and has been good for me personally."

Local 800 in Newton ratifies city's offer

NEWTON-Mayor Theodore Mann announced on Wednesday night that Local 800 members ratified "overwhelmingly" the city's contract offer.

The offer provides for a seven and a half percent increase for each of the next two years.

Last week, two other major municipal unions in the city, the Foreman's Union, Local 2243 of Council 93 AFSCME and Local 3092, City Hall Associates both accepted identical offers with the city.

Mann praised the good working relationship that he says exists between the city's collective bargaining team and the municipal unions.

Six other unions have yet to sign agreements with the city. These unions represent the policemen, fire fighters, traffic supervisors, building department, nurses and engineers.

The Newton teachers unions also have not reached agreements with the Newton School Committee, which handles those negotiations.

McGrath drops out of state rep. race

NEWTON-Democrat Richard McGrath announced on Wednesday that he is withdrawing from the state representative race in the 12th Middlesex District.

The Newton alderman cited the expansion of his personal business as the reason he decided to leave the contest.

McGrath's firm installs underground irrigation systems. He said his firm was recently awarded two major contracts.

According to McGrath, he made the decision to leave the race because he could not give it the kind of attention he thought it deserved.

McGrath said he was disappointed, but he would have had to lay off workers in his firm if he stuck to the campaign and did not accept the new contracts.

McGrath is a four term alderman who served one term in the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1975-1976.

McGrath did not say if he has selected another candidate in the race to support, but said he would back a Democrat.

Ald. Paul Daley, Ald. Susan Schur and Teresa Walsh are the other three Democrats still committed to the race for David Mofenson's state representative seat. Nick Nardone of Auburndale also announced this week he will run as a Democrat.

One of McGrath's prime concerns in his campaign is the weakening of the environmental laws because of the energy crisis. In the state legislature, McGrath served as chairman of the House committee on solid waste disposal.

McGrath had also been stressing his ability to "stand up and fight" against the Democratic leadership in the House. He said when he was in state government, he had no "blind obediance" to the leadership.

There are no names on the ballot in this race, instead all candidates are relying on stickers or write-in votes.

The Sept. 16 primary will be a unique election because of the complicated sticker/write-in process. Newton Election Commissioner Alan Licarie predicts a lcw voter turnout in the race.

Outreach: Help for the troubled teen

By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON-Where can Newton's teenagers go if they have a problem with alcohol' family, jobs or sex? To whom can they turn for guidance and help? Who will be an ally and confidant to troubled youth?

Outreach counselors who are part of the Newton Streetworker program are the answer.

Started in 1973,as a response to vandalism problems, the streetworker program has evolved into a means of providing solutions to common adolescent problems. Outreach counselors are professionals to whom teenagers can turn in . times of trouble.

Nancer Ballard, director of the streetworker program, sees a counselor as "a liason between the community and kids."

Ballard describes counselors as people who are sincerely interested in helping kids. Counselors are aware of the variety of services available to teenagers and can often recommend sources of help for youth.

"A key aspect of the program is to develop a relationship with the kids. They develop a trust with the workers. Workers respond to the needs of kids who won't respond to 8 other agencies."

Ballard cites flexibility as being a major advantage of the program. Kids will trust a counselor more readily than they would a guidance counselsor who is associated with a school.

Counselors meet kids at various places throughout the city. Drop-in centers, lunchrooms, and playgrounds are some of the places where contacts can be made. Referrals are also made to counsel8ors by friends of kids, as well as parents and other agencies.

"When kids see that you're nonjudgemental about their problems, then you get accepted," said Ballard.

Counselors will not involve themselves in any illegal activities, but will use discretion when they hear about such things. Often counselors will discuss the potential consequences of illegal acts with a teenager and help him or her to establish ideas of what should be done.

Adolescents are subjected to any number

. of problems and the outreach worker will try to offer advice whenever possible. Ballard says that a lot of kids have just a single problem, in such cases both the worker and teenager "look for what's best in the long run."

This summer,a group of teenagers were spending most of their time just sitting around and getting high. Although they wanted and needed jobs, they did not put much effort in finding employment.

Enter the outreach worker, who got the teenagers motivated to secure a softball field for a regular game. A rule was established that kids could not get high before the games, a rule that was stuck to and policed by the kids themselves.

The outreach worker got the kids to talk about the difficulties of finding jobs. The youths decided to create a booklet about the often frustrating experience of job-hunting, written in terms that other kids could identify with.

The research into the creation of the job-hunting booklet paid off for six of the kids who found jobs for themselves. The city will be printing and distributing the booklet soon.

Outreach workers deal with more serious problems as well. When a kid runs from a broken home, a worker helps to find shelter, or helps to mend the situation.

Kids who have trouble with alcohol or are depressed talk with workers who can evaluate their problems and help arrive at solutions.

The difference between the outreach worker and other counseling services is the worker works from the standpoint of the youth' searching for what is best for each individual.

Counsel8ors are highly trained individuals who either hold advanced degrees or have had a lot of experience in counsel8ing. Newton's four workers are paid by funds from the federal government and the city.

Alcohol, drugs and jobs are high on the list of problems the workers deal with. Questions of sex, family matters and police matters, as well as simple recreation and community organization are also

Briefcase

Civil versus criminal law

By PETER HARRINGTON

To paraphrase Caesar, all law is divided into two parts, the criminal law and the civil law.

If you break the criminal law, you may be punished by a fine or imprisonment. If you violate the civil law, you may be required to pay money damages to the injured party.

In a criminal matter the state prosecutes the case, while a violation of the civil law is prosecuted by the party claiming to be injured or damaged.

There are certain instances when a person may commit an act which violates both the criminal and the civil law. For example, after the close of business on Tuesday, Nov. 31, John Manager and Bill Stockman returned to their place of employment and removed $5,000 worth of merchandise. The following weekend they sold the goods at a flea market and split $3,000.

Eventually they were caught and charged with larceny, a violation of the criminal law. Their case was tried in the Newton District Court and they were found guilty and sentenced to six months in jail.

While he was in jail, Bill Stockman received an inheritance of $25,000. When his former employer learned of the inheritance he sued Bill to recover his lost $5,000.

As a defense Stockman claimed that he was placed in double jeopardy under the 5th amendment of the United States Constitution which says, in part, "...nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb..."

As a second defense Stocka Stockman claimed that the evidence at his criminal trial showed he only received $1,000 as his share of the merchandise and he asked the court to limit his liability to $1,000.

How would you rule on Bill Stockman's defenses?

After a long hearing and extensive arguments from the lawyers for the employer and for Stockman, the court declared against Stockman.

Double jeopardy is a protection that applies only to criminal cases and is intended to protect Americans from being tried twice in the criminal courts for the same act. It is intended that the state with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged criminal offense.

The concept of double jeopardy was not designed to be used to avoid one's civil law obligation to reimburse another for harm done.

Concerning his defense to limit his responsibility to $1,000 the court said that as a participant in the larceny, Stockman is equally responsible to reimburse the employer for his loss. The fact that the goods were sold for less than full value or that the defendant only received a portion of the money does not reduce his responsibility. The rule of the civil law is that one who harms another must completely reimburse the injured party for his loss and this rule applies equally to all who joined in causing the loss.

Mason-Rice after-school care program

NEWTON — Following a year and a half of work by parents and cooperation by principal Gene Gray, after school care is coming this fall to Mason-Rice School. In doing so, Mason-Rice moves in step with neighboring Brookline schools, as well as ten other Newton elementary schools.

In response to the needs of growing numbers of working parents in the Mason-Rice community, a group of parents researched and nurtured the hope, then the reality, of an independently run after school program within the elementary school itself.

When space became available because of declining enrollment, the group formed a non-profit corporation, hired its teachers, and solicited enrollment. Now, rather than being transported in different directions the kids can continue their day with their own friends, have access to the resources NewtOn Centre has to offer, and be available for other school based programs developed by parents, teachers and the kids themselves.

Anticipated activities are arts and crafts, music, reading, sports, woodworking and playing.

The creative and experienced teachers will offer the kids a stable environment which combines the opportunity for "unwinding" and for expressing themselves.

The program will operate from school closing to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Full and half time enrollment is available. Those Mason-Rice parents who are interested should contact Susan Cantor at 964-6255 for an application to the Mason-Rice After-School Program Inc.

Carroll Center wins Kresge grant

NEWTON — The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Michigan, has awarded a challenge grant of $100,000 to the Carroll Center for the Blind for major renovations of their facility for rehabilitating blind adults.

Chosen among 1,349 applicants, the Carroll Center will use the grant funds for the renovation of an 18th century replica carriage house to provide adequate classrooms and training facilities for the newly blind adults of the New England area. Renovations will also be made to the St. Paul's building which will serve as the sleeping quarters.

The Carroll Center established the first civilian training facility of its kind in 1954, and continues today, to provide for the changing needs of the blind population by establishing a facility which will satisfy new federal guidelines for accessibility.

Construction is planned to begin almost immediately, and should be completed by this time next year.

The Kresge Foundation, created by Sebastian S. Kresge in 1924, has appropriated over $383 million to organizations of health services, higher education, arts, social welfare and conservation. These grants usually involve construction and major renovation of facilities. The Carroll Center was one of 208 organizations selected in 38 states, District of Columbia and Canada, to receive a grant this year.

The Carroll Center has a goal of $600,000 for this project, to be raised, or pledged, by June 1981. The Kresge grant will be paid after the initial $500,000 is raised.

Tentative teacher pact set

According to Robards, at 4 p.m. yesterday, the director of support services for the school department, Roy Cornelius, assured the Local 454 members the uniform allowance will be made available to them within three weeks.

The custodians then agreed to don their uniforms and schools opened as scheduled this morning. There were other difficulties involving the custodians.

Last night, the union picketed in front of the Lincoln-Eliot School where a public Community Development Block Grant meeting was being held.

Robards said the custodians were protesting the fact that a non-union person, in this case Planning Department Director Barry Canner, opened the school building.

The union president estimated that 80 custodians were involved in the protest.

Robards said,"This is an attempt to intimidate us, to say that anyone can open the school. We feel this meeting could have been held at City Hall or a library."

Mayor Theodore Mann, who was at the opening of the meeting, apologized to the audience for the presence of the pickets. He said he had just become aware of the situation right before the meeting.

Planning Department Director Canner said the meeting place could not be changed. He said that by law the meeting had to be advertised and scheduled at least a week in advance. A cancellation of the meeting would risk delaying the application schedule for more than $2 million in federal funds.

New England Nuclear reassures aldermen

NEWTON-A New England Nuclear official and other state and local health officials assured the Aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee on Wednesday night that the nuclear research firm presents no extreme hazard to the community.

New England Nuclear manufactures radio-pharmaceuticals for use in medicine and research. The firm has offices in Boston and a manufacturing plant in Billerica. The Newton facility would be used for research and manufacturing.

Charles Killian, environmental control director for New England Nuclear, showed the aldermen the packaging that is used when its products are shipped.

Its products are normally shipped in glass vials are about one and a half inches high and packed in hermetically sealed, damage-resistant containers.

Gerald Parker, assistant commissioner for environmental health for Massachusetts, also assured the committee by saying "We do not believe there will be any radiation detected outside of the building."

Nuclear pharmaceuticals have been transported through the city on a regular basis for a long time. Both Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Boston College use the products.

New England Nuclear's Killian explained that the only waste produced by the firm is in the form of paper gowns and gloves used by employees. A 50 gallon barrel of this waste is expected to be produced each week.

Killian also assured the committee no waste would be emptied into sewage systems. more ./

The only radioactivity that could enter the drains would be that washed off of employees' hands. New England Nuclear monitors toxic levels in the drains as a control.

Perhaps the most reassuring news about the firm was the fact that the city ordinance restricting transportation of hazardous materials through the city will not apply to New England Nuclear because the amount of hazardous materials being transported is so small.

New England Nuclear will train Newton firefighters and police so that they will know how to deal with all possible hazards. The firm has already developed a training program for the Billerica authorities.

Killian demonstrated the form of packaging protection that the products receive as well as the warning labels that accompany each shipment. The company expects to ship 50 to 100 packages each week to its customers.

New England Nuclear is in the final stages of buying the Cramer Electronics building at 85 Wells Ave. in the 128 Industrial Park. Killian said it would take from five to six months to renovate the building for New England Nuclear occupancy.

The city of Newton first became concerned about New England Nuclear in early July when James Hickey, Mayor Theodore Mann's administrative aide, wrote a letter to various New England Nuclear officials and Health authorities to get information about the firm and its operations.

Mann has invited members of Newton's Police,Fire and Health Departments and representatives from the Board of Alderman, to a Sept. 10 meeting to discuss the firm and to "scrutinize every element of risk," according to the mayor.

President-elect Merrill advises, "the Department of Veterans' Services within every city and town is established for the purpose of furnishing such information, advice and assistance to veterans, and dependents of veterans, as may be necessary to enable . hey may be entitled relative them to procure the benefits to which t to employment, vocational or other educational opportunities, hospitalization, medical care, pension and other benefits."

"Close to 80 percent of our residents have actual or potential veterans entitlement, the field of veterans affairs, including the work of the Department of Veterans' Services, is now a major activity of our local, state and federal governments."

Mann says extra cash may cut tax hike by $8

NEWTON-Mayor Theodore Mann and the Newton Board of Aldermen's Finance Committee met on Wednesday night to discuss the allocation of surplus funds. Mann speculated that the application of the surplus funds will help decrease the projected property tax increase by as much as eight dollars.

The previous predictions for the tax rate had ranged from $15 to $22. The final property tax rate is set by the Assessors and is expected to be known within two weeks.

Mann said "We are using virtually all the free cash to lower the taxes placed on the citizens."

According to Ald. Edward Richmond, chairman of the Aldermanic Finance Committee, on July 1,1980 Newton had $3.89 million in free cash. The Board of Alderman appropriated $1.1 million of that money.

The remaining $2.79 million was spoken for in a closed door executive session between the mayor, his aides, and the aldermen. Most of that money will be going to defray the expenses incurred by collective bargaining, pending litigation against the city and other items.

Ald. Richmond said $2.635 million was allocated in the session, leaving $)55,000 in free cash.

This year, an allowance from the State Bureau of Accounts has allowed Newton's tax revenues for the months of July and August to be applied to the free cash account. That is $330,000 according to Richmond.

Now the city has $485,000 in free cash until March 1, 1981. The money may be applied fur overtime expenses in event of a heavy snow season .

2 Newton unions sign pact

NEWTON- City Hall Associates and the Foremen's Union, two major municipal unions in the city have signed a two year labor pact with the city.

The new contract calls for a seven and a half percent wage increase each year for the next two years.

John Calderone, President of Local 800, said his union has not yet reached an agreement with the city and that contract negotiations are continuing.

Commenting on the completed negotiations with the two unions, Mayor Theodore Mann said the agreements "reflect concern for the taxpayer as well as dealing fairly with city employees."

Mann added,"It is hoped that other bargaining units of the city will continue to meet with the city's negotiating team in good faith so that we can eliminate the tensions and high emotions which ususally usually accompany the period of bargaining."

Murdock Fraser, president of Local 3092, City Hall Associates, said "I am pleased with the negotiations, for both management and labor."

Louis DiRienzo, President of the Foreman's Union, Local 2443 of Council 93, American Federation of State, County, and Municipal employees, said, "On behalf of our union, I am very proud of the relationship we have had with Mayor Mann and his administration, and find that the contract just signed is a fair and satisfying document."

Rte. 9 design

The Board of Alderman should seriously reconsider approving the current redesign of the Rte. 9-Eliot-Woodward Street intersection that will be before them Monday.

The current state plan proposes eliminating a cut in the Rte.9 median strip that allows people traveling west on Rte.9 to turn left into the Purity Supreme parking lot. In addition, the Purity curbcut on Rte. 9 would be eliminated, meaning all shoppers wishing to reach the supermarket would have to use Eliot Street or Ramsdell Road.

Over the past few years, Newton has witnessed the demise of several supermarkets, most notably the closing of the Finast on Washington Street last month.

Why should we choose this moment to make it more difficult for shoppers to reach yet another supermarket..

As we see it, there are two main problems with this intersection, and neither involves Purity Supreme.

The first is the fact that motorists on Rte. 9 east or westbound consistently ignore the red light. As anyone who regularly uses Woodward or Elliot Street knows, drivers must expect at least three, if not more, cars through the Rte. 9 intersection after the light has turned red.

This is a habit that needs attention from the state police.

The second is that woebegone island on the Elliot Street side that does nothing more than create a knot of cars pointing in a variety of directions to the complete confusion of everyone involved.

It would be better for all concerned if left turns off Rte. 9 were by arrow at the corner. The cut in the median could be left and used only to enter the Purity Supreme parking lot from the westbound lane, or could be eliminated. In either case, the curbcut should remain.

Then that miserable island could be eliminated and the corner completely redesigned with enough room for a "right turn only" lane.

Retaining the Purity Supreme curbcut on Rte. 9 should help alleviate to some degree what is destined to become a bottleneck on Elliot Street if it becomes the main entrance to the heavily used market.

Better signalization, less confusion and more traffic law enforcement would serve us better in the long run than making it harder for a business to stay in Newton would.

My Turn

A disillusioning campaign

By STEVEN BURKE

It was a long, grueling, disillusioning and disappointing campaign for Newton Rep. David Mofenson.

The battle for the Fourth Congressional District seat has left Mofenson with many scars that will not heal quickly.

Mofenson, who announced his withdrawal from the race at a Statehouse press conference Thursday morning, gave up certain reelection to the state legislature to make the run for Congress.

Mofenson gambled. The political stakes were tremendous and he lost. Now, he finds himself out of public life, at least for a while.

There is little doubt that the senior representative, who has served 10 years in the legislature, will be missed by both his colleagues and Newton residents, who he has served well.

From the outset of the long race, Mofenson seemed to be fighting an uphill battle. No matter how hard he tried, the political dice seemed to roll the wrong way every time. For Mofenson, the first twist of political misfortune in the Congressional race occured' when Back Bay Rep. Barney Frank, who did not reside in the district, entered the race and quickly challenged Mofenson for the large liberal vote.

Mofenson, who grew up in the district and has little substantive differences with Frank on he major issues, had a solid hold on Newton and Brookline without Frank in the contest.

The Frank candidacy also spurred many defections from the Mofenson camp. People who had consistently supported Mofenson throughout his 10 year political career, were now turning their backs on him.

The most stunning setback for Mofenson occurred when Rep. Robert Drinan endorsed Frank after promising to remain neutral. This hurt Mofenson very deeply, both personally and politically.

The Drinan endorsement was the turning point of the campaign. Mofenson, who has not spoken to Drinan since, never did regain his balance after this.

Mofenson felt betrayed. He faced strong pressure throughout the campaign from liberals who tried to force him out of the race, arguing that a Mofenson and Frank split would mean a win for conservative Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark.

People were calling Mofenson a spoiler, but he was quick to point out that it was Frank who moved into the the district. He recently said, "Dammit, I am not the one who moved into this district. I have lived here."

Compounding his problems at the tail end of the campaign, letters were being circulated to Mofenson supporters . throughout the city saying that even if you can not publicly support Barney Frank, you can still vote for him.

The favorable media coverage for Frank also hurt Mofenson. The Boston Globe endorsed Frank and then ran a column headlined, "Born to be a Congressman," which praised Frank.

Mofenson's withdrawal from the race and his endorsement of Frank is really nothing more than facing political reality and securing his future in politics. But it has got to hurt. This is the same David Mofenson who called Frank a "kamikaze liberal shackled to the rhetoric of the sixties" less than two weeks ago.

Before his withdrawal from the contest, Mofenson reflected on the strange twists of the 4th Congressional race from his campaign headquarters in Newton .

In a somber tone, he explained, "I have worked very hard for this community and I've done a lot for this community, and that does not mean that somebody has to vote for me or anybody else, but I think there are some basic questions that have to be asked about the way in which people respond to today's problems."

Mofenson clearly has become disillusioned with the liberal establishment. He said, "I think the liberal community has itself to blame for a lot of its problems."

He adds, "Its the way it is because liberals are developing a reputation for disloyalty and frolics."

While phones were ringing and volunteers scrambled around, Mofenson sat in a makeshift office in the midst of the confusion.

"The integrity of the political process is at stake," he explained. "There will be other legislators who have compiled good records and are challenged by outsiders and people have to remember it cuts both ways."

Speaking about the many misfortunes of the campaign, Mofenson philosophized, "We are all human beings and we have got to start treating each other as human beings...There is a lot more that connects us than divides us. I think a lot of people ought to begin to understand that."

Does Mofenson have any regrets about the campaign? He pauses before answering the question. "I can't say I have any regrets about the campaign. I am extremely heartened by the support of a large number of people, many of whom I did not know four months ago and who I am very close to today."

He continues, "I regret that certain people did not see it appropriate to help me in this campaign, who I helped in the past, publicly and personally."

The campaign was a trying experience for Mofenson who learned how quickly the brutal political tide can change.

"You learn who your friends are," he said. "I've learned after 10 years in politics who I can count on and who I can't."

Attacking the 'marriage tax'

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Our income tax system is marred by many inequities, but perhaps the most glaring is the so-called marriage tax.

It seems inconceivable that a nation that places such tremendous emphasis on the value of family life could actually penalize married couples by making them pay extra taxes. And yet, due to a quirk in the tax laws which has existed since 1969, many married persons who work pay substantially higher taxes than if they were single. As a result single people are discouraged from marrying and married people are encouraged to get "tax divorces."

For years I have sponsored and cosponsored legislation to correct this abuse. Now, growing public outrage and an increasing congressional awareness of the problem make me confident that the time for a solution may be at hand. The solution which I support, and which I advocated in recent testimony, is income splitting. Based on the assumption that married couples share a total fanily income equally, income splitting would attribute one-half of the couple's combined income to each spouse.

This easily-administered approach would insure that couples earning the same combined incomes would pay the same income tax, while at the sane time maintaining the progressive rate structure.

I will be actively advancing the concept of income splitting for married couples in any tax bill the House of Representatives might consider this year.

Nurse Training Act

There is currently a critical shortage of trained nurses in Massachusetts and throughout New England. A Medford Hospital recently sent an urgent request to a Texas recruiter for registered nurses. The U.S. Department of Labor predicts that by 1985 there will be 45,000 positions in health service in New England, many of them for nurses.

Through my work on the House Committee on Aging, I have become aware that as the average age of the American population goes up, so too will our need for more home health care and more nurses.

But tuition costs are also going up, and many of the 10,000 people in Massachusetts studying to be nurses may be forced to drop out unless financial aid is available.

The Congress will consider legislation to supply that aid. Amendments to the Nurse Training Act will authorize grants to nursing schools, particularly in areas where nurses are in short supply, as well as providing loans and grants to nursing students. This legislation has my strong support.

Fort Deve N s

In the very near future the House will consider the Military Construction Authorization for fiscal 1981, which includes $1 million in capital improvements monies for Fort Devens in Ayer.

This money is important for a number of reasons. For the last decade the Department of Defense made only minor investments in New England's military facilities, while concentrating the bulk of its funds on bases in the sunbelt. I and the other members of the state congressional delegation have fought this trend, and as a result have succeeded in securing funds for the improvement of Fort Devens in each of the past three fiscal years.

The fort has proven its value and its cost— effectiveness. Each dollar that the Pentagon invests in Fort Devens increases its usefulness, and insures its viability for years ahead.

Madrid Confefence

In November the nations which signed the Helsinki Accords in 1975 will reconvene in Madrid to review compliance with the human rights agreements. The American delegation will be headed by former attorney general Griffin Bell.

I have drafted a letter to Mr. Bell asking him to press for the immediate release of Soviet human rights leader Anatoly Shcharansky. Shcharansky is currently serving 13 years in a Soviet labor camp for his activities on behalf of Soviet Jews. In my letter to Mr. Bell I state that the American delegation has an obligation to press all parties at the Madrid Conference to resolve that Scharansky's release would help fulfill the spirit of the Helsinki Accords.

Already nearly 70 members of Congess have joined me in signing this letter, which I intend to mail this coming week.

Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Newton.

Reagan: crashing on takeoff

Commentary
By Arnold Sawislak
National Columnist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's campaign began like that famous New Yorer cartoon showing a crashed airplane and a studious-looking fellow with a slide rule walking away with the comment: "Well, back to the old drawing board."

That Reagan let himself get involved in a flap over Taiwan is incredible.

China policy is extremely important to the United States and the world, but it is not likely to be the political pivot of the 1980 U.S. presidential election.

Compared to unemployment, inflation, taxes, crime, drugs,abortion, race relations, defense spending and specific foriegn policy issues, such as release of the U.S. hostages in Iran, the problem of the two Chinas is practically out of public view.

Reagan has one big advantage in this campaign: he has not been in charge during the last four years. As the challenging candidate, he can accuse President Carter of causing everydisaster from inflation to the Mount St. Helens eruption.

That is an "attack campaign" and that was the GOP plan. But the China flap put Reagan on the defensive, much as Democrat George McGovern let himself be forced into the trenches eight years ago with his proposals for welfare reform.

So why did Reagan get into it .

One reason is that China is important to certain of the Republicans candidate's most avid supporters.

To this group, the process of "discovering" the Communist government on the Chinese mainland and backing away form the Nationalists on Formosa was an outrage from start to finish.

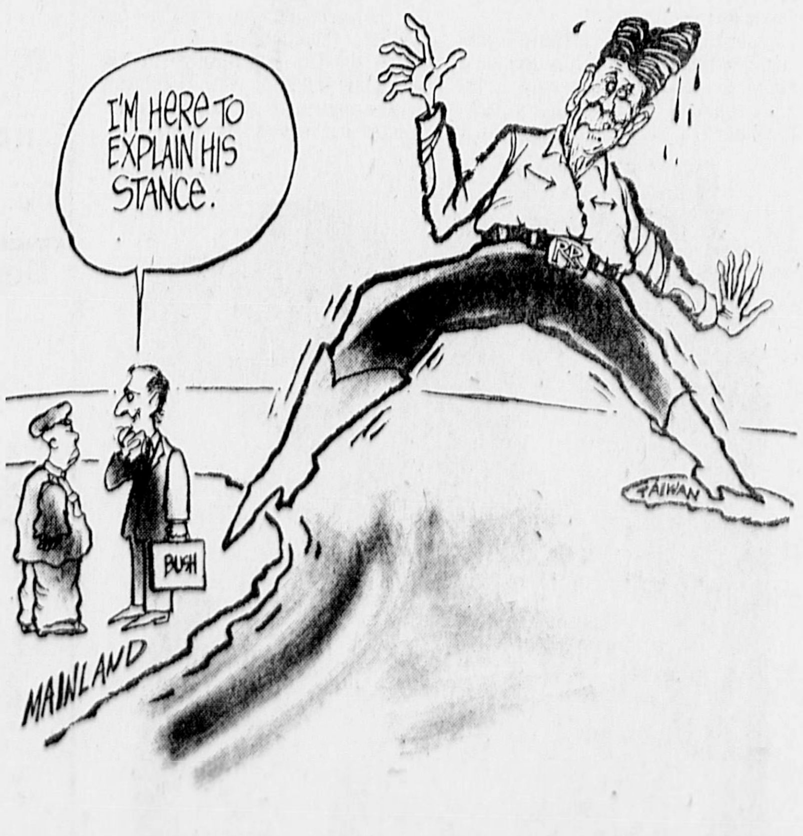
Reagan pleased his pro-Taiwan supporters by saying he would like to see some kind of government-to-government relations with the Nationalists. This kind of non-specific comment has been a staple of Reagan rhetoric for years, and generally caused him no trouble.

But this time his words raised dust from Foggy Bottom to Peking. The Democrats leaped on his statement as proof thatReagan was ready to undo everything that Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter had done in establishing relations with the Mainland Chinese.

That might have been shruged off as campaign hyperbole, but then Reagan sent George Bush off th Asia to give the Republican campaign the image of being in touch with world affairs.

Taht brought the Chinese into the act and they were in no mood to be jollied by Bush, which was his contribution to the situation. They said flat out that Reagan was a menace, which provoked Barry Goldwater to charge the Chinese with meddling in the U.S. campaign.

By the time Bush got back from the Far East, the image had been firmly fixed of a presidential candidate saying one thing, his staff saying another and his running mate a third.



I'M HERE TO EXPLAIN HIS STANCE.
BUSH
MAINLAND

Reagan's news conference statement that he was only suggesting that his administration would hew to the law passed by Congress in regard to relations with Taiwan had the look of an attempt to mop up the kitchen after the pea soup hit the exhaust fan.

The China flap delighted the Democrats, who think they can provoke Reagan into defeating himself. He can be sure that Carter and his campaigners will be looking for more of the same in the next eight weeks.

Opinions

Consider Mofenson

To the Editor:

Ambition is a characteristic possessed by most politicians. Other basic and inherent qualities should also be compared when we are given the privilege to choose our representation.

Unfortunately, we (the masses) often neglect these comparisons, failing to consider these qualities.

We are lay people, not politicians. Consequently we strive to nake the right decision when casting our vote. Our lay ignorance regarding the artful and sophisticated subtleties employed by some politicians, some newspapers, some political columnists, some special interest groups, some of our neighbors, and even some of our peers has too often been exploited.

We become easy prey "joining the bandwagon," giving up our individualism, and voting for the one who has been made to seem nost popular. Later, much to our chaqrin, we realize that we were duped into thinking we were making the right decision.

David Mofenson, to date during his campaign for Congress in the Fourth District, has exhibited the same intelligent, unemotional political demeanor that earned him the respect and support of political and lay peers in his district where he has lived for 25 years. He has represented his people (from all walks of life) as a state legislator for 10 years.

He has earned, through his ability and leadership, the respect and support of people with diversified political views' Democrats, Independents and Republicans. He has earned his way quietly, compassionately, intelligently, seriously and effectively by being a peoples' candidate (his peoples' candidate). He is not a special interest group candidate.

His repute of carefully listening to and of being genuinely interested in the problems of his constituency and acting upon them, of having the guts to tell it as he believes it without fear of antagonizing and alienating powerful and arrogant special interest groups, serves him in good stead.

I respect his tenacity and his compassion for his constituency.

A lesser man would have succumbed to the well-financed pressures of special interest groups attempting to have him step aside for their handpicked choice because they knew he would be the most certain choice for the office.

Boston Globe political columnist David Farrell's biased column of July 28, "Endorsement and A Jab" epitomized misuse of journalistic power in my opinion.

It defiled the very principles of journalism. He used his article to plug Barney Frank while demeaning Mofenson's accomplishments and Massachusetts House Speaker Thomas W. McGee's endorsement of Mofenson. The Globe then refused "Within Its Right" to publish my letter to the editor in rebuttal, possibly because of my vehement protest and personal indictment against Mr. Farrell.

I believe we, the lay masses, are discerning enough to read between the lines, regardless of how politically unsophisticated we may be. I intend to vote for David Mofenson and urge all voters to consider him as well. He has never attempted to enhance his personal political career at the expense of the very same constituency that elected him by interloping into another district. He is a fighter who does not concede defeat.

In the face of unfair and sometimes appalling chicanery used against him, he continues ahead, doing his job as a peoples' candidate.

Aging fast

To the Editor:

Many thanks for the article on myself and the Professional Service Guild. A new business venture needs all the exposure that it can get, and you have helped to put me in front of the consumer.

By the way, I did find one thing in the article that was greatly disturbing. Having gone through the traumatic experience of reaching my 30th birthday at the beginning of August, I was dismayed to learn I had aged 2 years in less than a month. I'm sure it was a "typo" and I forgive you.

A man for the times

To the Editor:

In the long history of man and his government in a free society, destiny, it seems, sometimes has a striking and providential way of singling out the one man who alone can best lead the people, all of them, the little and the great, in their hopes, in their needs and yes, often in their very survival.

In this crucial year of 1980 the man is now here for the cii citizens of the important 4th Congressional District to send to Washington to promote and protect the entire district.

Mayor Arthur J. Clark is considered by many national authorities as an outstanding mayor who has led his people in one of the best managed small cities in the entire country for six successive terms.

The prestigious national United States Conference of Mayors, recognizing his legislative prowess, has chosen him to be its legislative chairman.

He has been prudent and efficient, honest and fearless and deeply dedicated to every one of Waltham's 67,000 citizens, the worker, the business man, the young and the old, the sick and the handicapped and this, above all, a man who has a deep respect for all humanity, born and unborn.

Here indeed is a man who walks humbly with his God, truly a man for all seasons.

Prefers Carr School for library site

NEWTON — The Newton Main Library is located near the edge of the city, in a business section complex (New Newton Corner), in a high real estate area. It has restricted access, is in heavy traffic, has very little parking area, the building is too small, and is antiquated.

Although the current building is not conducive to efficient utilization as is, it does have great sale potential for a hotel, business or commercial building, etc. And from such would be a source of employment, taxable revenue, new real estate tax money and other concomitant values.

The Carr School complex, now defunct as a school, is more centrally located, is vacant, available, is larger and more spacious, is of less real estate value (not business zoned), and has ample space for parking.

If made into the main library it would keep the neighborhood preserved and content, would open the library to more use, and is accessible from four approaches. Also, the playground and gym could still be neighborhood-utilized with the property under city management.

Fuel assistance bill becomes law

BOSTON — Legislation co-sponsored by State Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) providing for emergency home heating fuel assistance, financial assistance to prevent evictions and utility shutoffs, and temporary shelter in the event of natural disasters and fires, has been enacted into law.

"The lack of a satisfactory emergency assistance program forces some people to make a choice between eating and paying their rent. This bill helps families avoid that untenable situation," Cohen said.

The Newton lawmaker continued, "Over the past several years, inflation has forced the cost of living skywards. Families, compelled to live on incomes which have not increased at the same rate as inflation, are left without enough money to meet the costs of basic human necessities. Ultimately, the stress brought about by this condition, and the family discord which frequently accompanies it can only put an added financial strain on the state's already overworked social service programs."

"Previous regulations denied home heating assistance to some families in the most severe circumstances by withholding assistance until a utility had already been shut off or until the oil tank was empty. This bill responds more appropriately to the problem by empowering the state to help before these crises occur, rather than forcing it to wait until after the damage is done.

"I believe that this is the most significant portion of the bill. It is a timely response to the inevitable physical and emotional problems posed by the high costs of energy and other necessities. Moreover, it allows the state to head off the family turmoil which almost inevitably accompanies these crises," Cohen said.

The representative concluded that, "there is no question that promoting the stability of family life is a value important to us all. This bill focuses on pressures which are brought to bear when people are forced to live without the basic necessities of life. By fostering an atmosphere more conducive to family stability we are effectively responding to a critical human problem while in the long run minimizing the financial burden upon our social service programs."

Impressions of China display on exhibit at main library

NEWTON CORNER — "Impressions-China 1979" is a one-person show of photographs by Rosemary Fortin on exhibit during the month of September at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre Street.

The black and white photographs taken during Fortin's 1979 trip through the many regions and cities of China are a kind of visual diary of the day to day experiences in Mainland China. Some shots are dramatically straightforward, documenting observations of distinct scenes of Chinese life. Their subject matter is foreign to the viewer and demands explanation. Yet others are hauntingly universal. These photographs evoke a human quality that defies all cultural or national boundaries.

Fortin sees with the eye of a receptive visitor. There is a spontaneity in her work that only enhances her use of black and white film. She says of her role as photographer, "my camera has surely become a most intimate part of my life, expanding my self-awareness and that of the world about me."

There will be a reception for the artist on Tuesday, Sept. 9, 7:30-9 p.m. Main Library hours are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; and as of Sept. 20, Saturday 9-5; Sunday 1-5. Call 552-7145 for more information.

This is the season for home repair schemes

NEWTON — This is the season for homeowners to be wary of questionable home repair schemes, Police Chief William Quinn said this week.

"In the past citizens have been victims of drifters and unqualified repairmen who offer to perform such services as roof, chimney, siding, driveway and general home repairs as well as auto body repair work," Quinn said. "These services are usually offered at very cheap prices that the homeowner finds very appealing, . but the work more often than not,is usually not even worth the very cheap price."

A reputable Newton roofer reports that due to the rising costs of material, labor and insurance, it would cost somewhere in the vicinity of $50 to perform a minor roof repair job, Quinn noted. This does not necessarily mean that someone has to pay this price, but reports of roofing jobs being offered at $10 have been received by the police, and this price appears to be way out of line, according to the information received from legitimate businesses.

The chief said it is always advisable to contact the Better Business Bureau or the attorney general's Consumer Protection Agency, when in doubt.

"Usually the victim is a single or widowed woman who lives alone, although this is not always the case," Quinn said.

He recommended that any homeowner who is approached at the door or by telephone by someone offering to perform a service, should contact the police by calling 552-7240 or in the case of an emergency, by calling 911, if in doubt as to the legitimacy of the offer.

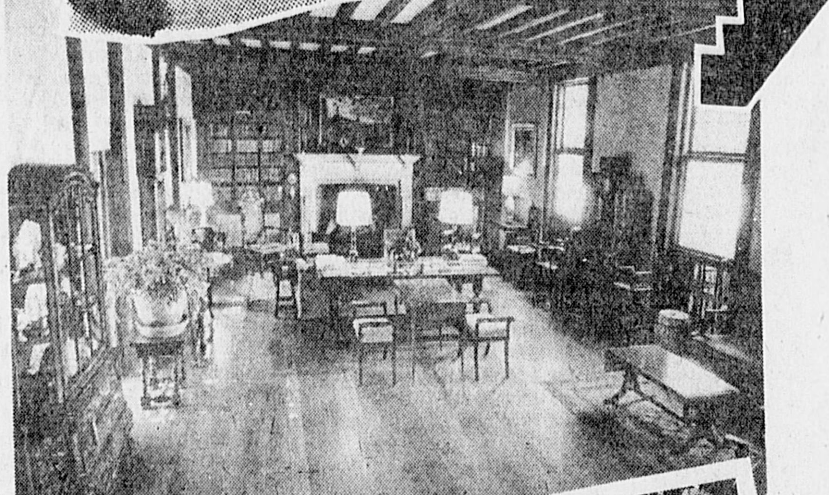
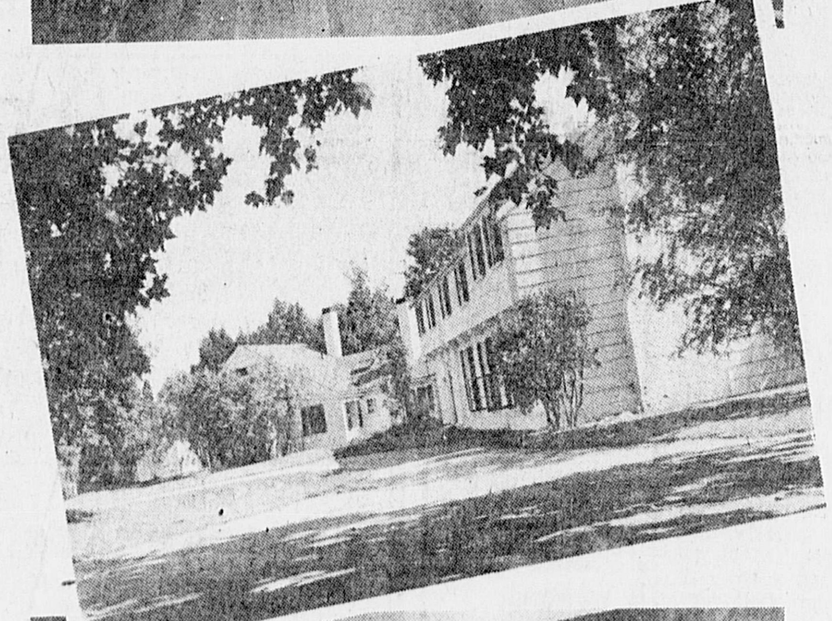
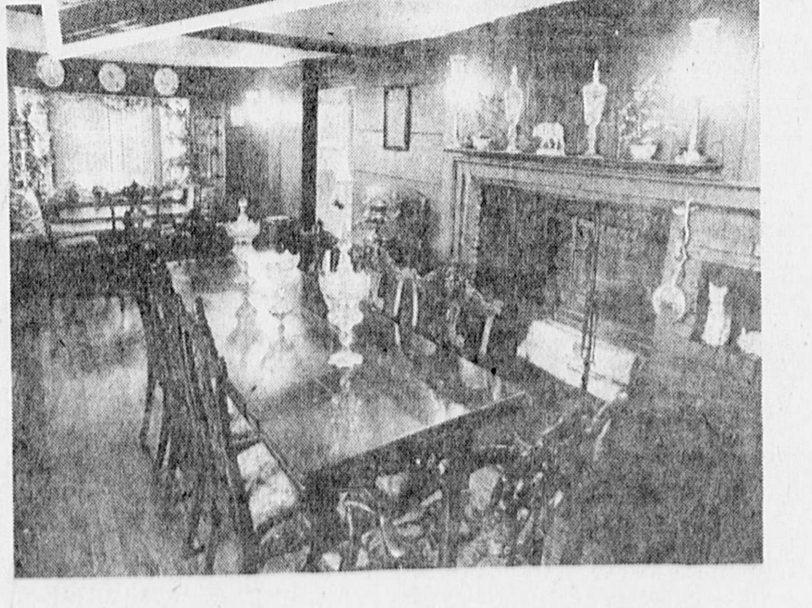
Dedham estate boasts 7 fireplaces, 9-bedrooms, caretaker cottage, barn, stable and plenty of local color







By Paul Romary
Staff writer

DEDHAM — It is reputed to be the highest priced Dedham home on the market in years.

At an asking price of $450,000, it won't be mistaken for a Cape ranch.

The floor of the foyer is marble-tiled. The "music room" has seated up to 75 formal diners. At least six of the seven fireplaces are in working order. Five sizeable bedrooms, three and one-half baths and voluminous closet space mark the main house.

Delicately etched glass globes complement sterling silver wall sconces in the dining room. A bell system connects 12 rooms to the caretaker's quarters.

For the asking price, the roughly 14-acre estate across from Queen of Apostles seminary on Common Street includes the main house of the late Henry G. Nickerson, an attached two-bedroom cottage for caretakers, unusual trees dotting landscaped gardens, a three-bay garage, a barn with stables for four horses and a separate, rentable two-bedroom cottage.

Mr. Nickerson passed away last February at age 68 in the room he was born, the last of three generations this century who have called the place their family home. Early last month, his surviving daughters, living in Dover, Walpole and Chestnut Hill, listed the property with six realty firms.

The house has been visited by only one prospective buyer to date.

Frances Brooks, a Dedham real estate broker for 25 years and one of the agents handling the property, a nine-bedroom estate has limited market appeal. But she doubted that anyone with the ability to purchase the property would have trouble financing it.

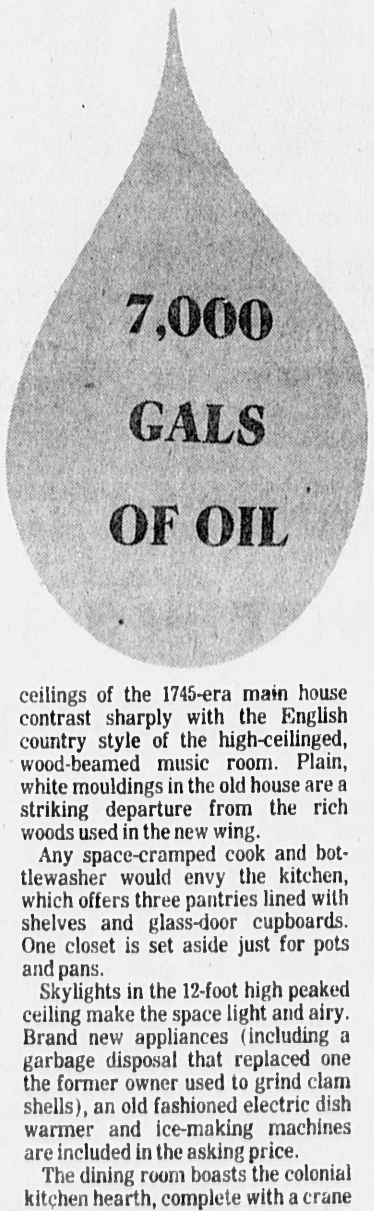
"Anyone who can afford the house probably can obtain credit without any problem," she said.

Blair Cobb, caretaker for the estate with his wife, Hilda, recalled that the late owner felt the same way. Noting that it took 7,000 gallons tc heat the house last winter, Cobb said Nickerson stopped his efforts to weatherize the house several years ago with the comment, "If you can't afford to heat the place, you can't afford to live here."

Len Chatel, a broker with Cedar Realty in Boston, which also offers the listing, said high-priced buyers are apparently around, since his firm has sold a dozen Wellesley homes in the $200,000 and higher bracket just this month.

When the Nickersons bought the property the first decade of this century, it was an abandoned two-bedroom farm house. They soon added the two-bedroom caretakers quarters and a three-bedroom wing complete with a magnificent music room designed by Henry Hobson Richardson, of Trinity Church (Copley Square) fame.

The main house is a study in historic architecture. Low colonial ceilings of the 1745-era main house contrast sharply with the English country style of the high-ceilinged, wood-beamed music room. Plain, white mouldings in the old house are a striking departure from the rich woods used in the new wing.



Any space-cramped cook and bottlewasher would envy the kitchen, which offers three pantries lined with shelves and glass-door cupboards. One closet is set aside just for pots and pans.

Skylights in the 12-foot high peaked ceiling make the space light and airy. Brand new appliances (including a garbage disposal that replaced one the former owner used to grind clam shells), an old fashioned electric dish warmer and ice-making machines are included in the asking price.

The dining room boasts the colonial kitchen hearth, complete with a crane for hanging pots and a baking oven set in the brick. Its windows look out over the enormous backyard that slopes down to the Charles River.

The home's two septic systems are so deep a flashlight beam cannot reach the bottom, the caretaker said.

An antiquated car wash machine hangs rusting from the ceiling of the three-bay garage. Rooms above the barn could be refurbished as an apartment.

Throughout the yard, trees rare for this area stand as tall as 70 feet. Caretaker Cobb pointed out a katsura, London plain and a European beech. An arbor in front of the house supports one mass of wysteria. Three types of grape vines border a formal garden. One slope sprouts daffodils and narscissus plants in the spring, Hilda Cobb said.

About four acres of the estate next to the Charles River lie in conservation flood plain easements under control of the Army Corps of Engineers. Because the house and barn take up most of the Common Street frontage, town zoning regulations will make it difficult to subdivide the rear without spending considerable money, real estate broker Brooks pointed out.

Drainage problems on the area's rocky ledge would make installation of septic systems on those potential lots more difficult.

But despite its lack of subdivision potential, Brooks and five other brokers have lined up to sell the property for the estate, including some non-Dedham brokers who consider the property more valuable than the actual asking price.

It is a house with history and the character of an earlier era. Next door stands a fallow polo field, a tribute to when leisurely, wealthy Boston Brahmins made their country homes in Dedham.

Prior to the Nickerson purchase, the farm house served as a clubhouse for a now defunct nine-hole golf course on Common Street.

The estate once ran along both sides of Common Street up to the Dedham Common. The Queen of Apostle seminary land was once Nickerson property. Job's Island, in the middle of the Charles, was once a pasture when the estate was a working farm. The castle-like dormitory at Noble and Greenough was once a Nickerson home.

In the early 1900's, the daughter of a Protestant Nickerson married an upstart Catholic. Although his neighbors were distressed by the religious abomination, the elder Nickerson was so taken with the arrangement that he donated land next door to the African mission order still headquartered there.

In the caretaker's quarters is a bell board with twelve pointers that swung around when family members rang for service. The name "William" marks one of those rooms.

According to the Cobbs, William was banished from the house around 20 years ago in a dispute over money. Nevertheless, his name still haunts the house that another family could someday inherit.

Dining alone? Make dinner in the toaster

THE SLIM GOURMET
RECIPES
By BARBARA GIBBONS

Toaster ovens are great energy savers for dine-alone cooks ... the energy saved is yours as well as the utility company's. It takes far less time and electricity to bake a single-serving main course in a miniature toaster oven than it does in your full-size appliance. If you have to be calorie conscious, the toaster oven is an ideal place to make your single-serving diet dinner. The kind of low-fat food you're likely to eat is not the greasy fare that toaster ovens are unsuited for.

Here are three of the simplest low-calorie main courses to make for yourself in your toaster oven. They're table-ready in 20 minutes or less, time enough to toss up a great salad side dish and fresh fruit dessert.

TOASTER OVEN
SPICY FISH FOR 1
2 tablespoons lemon juice
(or 1 tablespoon vinegar)
2 teaspoons mixed pickling spices small dressed fish (about 5 ounces)
2 or 3 thin slices onion
(or 1 teaspoon dried onion)
salt or garlic salt

Tear off a sheet of aluminum foil. Spray the shiny side with no-stick cooking spray. Sprinkle the middle of the foil with lemon juice and pickling spices. Roll the fish in the lemon mixture, place on foil, then arrange the onions under the fish. Season to taste. Fold over the foil, enclosing the fish loosely. Crimp the edges of the foil to seal. Place the foil packet on the metal tray of a toaster oven. Place the tray in a cold toaster oven. Set the thermostat on high (or at 450 degrees). Depress the "Bake" button. Bake undisturbed for 15 minutes. Remove tray from toaster oven. Wait 5 minutes, then open the packet carefully. Makes one serving, under 160 calories.

WINE AND HERB-SEASONED FISH — Substitute white wine for the lemon juice, minced fresh dill or thyme for the pickling spices. (Use 2 teaspoons fresh herbs or half-teaspoon dried herbs.)

TOASTER OVEN
CHICKEN CUTLET
SOLO MIO
2 or 3 thin onion slices half of a bell pepper, in thin strips
3-ounce chicken fillet
(one-half skinned, boned breast)
three-quarters cup
(6 ounces) tomato juice quarter-teaspoon dried basil, oregano or pizza herbs
2 teaspoons grated sharp Romano cheese

Tear off a square of aluminum foil. Spray shiny side with cooking spray. Arrange onion and bell pepper in the middle, with chicken on top. Pour tomato juice over chicken. Sprinkle with herbs and cheese. Fold over foil to enclose chicken loosely; crimp the edges to seal. Place packet on toaster oven tray. Set temperature on high (450 degrees); depress "Bake" button. Bake undisturbed 10 minutes. Remove from oven and wait 5 minutes before opening packet. Makes one serving, 175 calories.

TOASTER OVEN HAM 'N' PINEAPPLE
4 ounces lean ready-to-eat ham steak
1 unsweetened pineapple ring (juice-packed)
3 tablespoons pineapple juice (from can) half-teaspoon prepared mustard (or more, to taste)
optional: pinch of ground clove, allspice or mixed apple pie spice

Cut a ham steak into single-serving pieces (wrap and refrigerate remaining pieces for other meals). Spray toaster oven tray with cooking spray (or line it with foil, if desired, and spray with cooking spray). Arrange the ham steak and pineapple ring in a single layer on the tray. Stir the pineapple juice, mustard and spice together; brush over ham and pineapple. Put the tray into the toaster oven. Close the door and set the thermostat to high (450 degrees). Weekly mothers group offers parent education

BRIGHTON — St. Elizabeth's Hospital offers a weekly Mother's Group, where area residents may come to discuss whatever is of concern to them and their children.

The free, parent education program is guided by the interests and wishes of attending mothers, with hospital personnel and other experts supplementing information as needed.

The Mothers Group meets every Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at St. Elizabeth's Nursing School with transportation, child care and refreshments provided.

According to Health Educator Terry Vecchione, R.N., who initiated the program more than a year ago, the "mother to mother" exchange can be a much more understanding resource. Though some questions call for a strictly medical answer, "Why did my baby cry all night?" or "Why does my nine-month old refuse a favorite food?" may be solved with common sense, trial-and-error experience of another parent.

At the moment, the group is exploring with the aid of child psychiatrist, special problems such as raising a youngster in the city and the single parent.

St. Elizabeth's Mothers Group just celebrated its first anniversary with continuing enthusiasm from original members and welcomes new additions. For more information call Terry Vecchione, 782-7000, ext. 2440.

Smart money. Interest-only loans.

Harbor Equity Funds introduces an innovative second mortgage arrangement with unique advantages for you, the borrower.

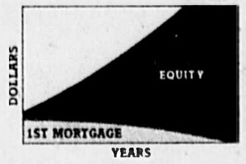
Interest-Only Payments.

A very practical idea in inflationary times – but one which is usually not available. Your monthly payment during the term of the loan is of interest only – the full amount of the principal is due only at the end of the term of the loan. As a practical matter, this means your monthly payment will be lower than alternative lending arrangements, and each payment is totally tax deductible.

And with continuing inflation, just as your property has increased in value, the value of the principal owed at the end of the term will be substantially reduced.

The combination of your low-interest first mortgage and an interest-only Harbor Equity Loan may be the smartest way to finance your home today.

To find out how smart, call Mr. Schaub at 542-6600, or complete and return the coupon below.



Through Harbor Equity Funds, Inc., you can convert the equity in your home to cash now.

Please provide additional information about your interest-only loans plan.

Program registration begins at Newton community center

WEST NEWTON — Registrations for all activities of the Newton Community Service Centers Inc. are now underway according to Anthony J. Bibbo, executive director of the agency.

In commenting on the activities for the new program year, he stated that many of the activities which have become popular traditions of the centers will be continued, while a large number of new offerings will be provided based upon a wide community demand.

The centers' fall brochure is now available to all interested persons by dropping in at 429 Cherry Street in West Newton or receipt through the mail by phoning 969-5906. The Centers' staff has put together a varied activity list and offers something for everyone.

A general sampling of programs described includes: Infant-Toddler Care housed at the Auburndale Congregational Church; two Pre-School Day Care Centers located at 84 Eldredge Street in Newton and at 80 Crescent Street in Newton Centre; After-School Care for Kindergarten at Pomroy House; After-School Care for children in first through fifth grades at Underwood School; Family Day Care to be held in various small home based group settings throughout the community; and for those with a special need for Tuesday and Thursday afternoon care only, a special program is being offered. Full day services will be provided during school vacation periods for youngsters enrolled at the after-school or Tuesday-Thursday programs.

Saturday camp for latency age youngsters begins its 10th season this fall. This program is designed to encourage self confidence and a natural awareness of the environment. The setting for the program is the rustic campsite at Sever Hale Reservation in Westwood. The staff ratio is two to one and transportation is provided from schools throughout the city.

Early education volunteers needed

NEWTON — Volunteer home visitors are being recruited now for the eleventh annual Parent-Child Home Program, an early education program for very young children offered to low-income families by Family Counseling Service (Region West), Inc.

The United Way agency serves nine west suburban towns including Newton. Home Program families have been located in past years in Waltham, Newton, Wellesley, Natick, and Brookline. Social agencies in Sudbury and Wayland are being asked to refer families to the program for the first time this year.

The program is a replication of a pilot study done in Nassau County, Long Island, which showed that a combination of twice weekly home visits by a trained and supervised home visitor, together with provision of carefully selected books and toys, over a period to two school calendar years, could produce long-lasting gains in learning readiness of toddlers from homes characterized by low income and lack of advanced educational background.

The home visitors, who need not have had prior experience in the field, are given preliminary training in four three hour seminars, then matched with one or two families. They are supervised on a weekly basis by professional social workers.

Their role in program families is to model for mothers how to use the gift books and toys to help their children develop vocabulary and cognitive skills. The families participate on a voluntary basis and do not pay a fee.

Persons interested in learning more about the program should call Peg Espinola, Program Coordinator, at Family Counseling Service ;Region West), Inc. in Newton at 965-6200. Training starts in mid September; the program year runs from October through May.

Terence Elkins (center) of Newton Centre is congratulated by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown (right) as Secretary of the Air Force Hans Mark looks on during ceremonies in which Elkins received the 1979 Harold Brown Award.

Newton man presented award from Air Force

HANSCOM, MASS. — Dr. Terence J' Elkins of Newton Center received the United States Air Force's highest scientific honor, the Harold Brown Award for 1979.

This award is presented annually to an Air Force civilian or military scientist whose achievement in research and development improved the operational effectiveness of the Air Force.

Dr. Elkins, a physicist in Rome Air Development Center's Deputy for Electronic Technology at Hanscom Air Force Base, was specifically cited for work relating to an over-the-horizon backscatter radar. He adapted existing theoretical techniques and computer programs that evaluated the radar's performance under a variety of operating conditions.

The Award was presented to Dr. Elkins by Secretary of the Air Force Hans Mark in a ceremony held at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, who established the Award after serving as Secretary of the Air Force, was a special guest at the cerenony.

Dr. Mark described Dr. Elkins' research as "vital to the development of a reliable ballistic missile warning system." Secretary Brown said that Dr. Elkins' work "contributes in a direct...way to U.S. military capabilities."

Dr. Elkins has been associated with the Air Force since 1967. At present, he is a supervising physicist in the Electromagnetic Sciences Division's Propagation Branch. He earned his bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering at the University of Melbourne in Australia. He later received master and doctoral degrees in both physics and astronomy from Boston University.

Walker pleased with initial scrimmage

Newton North offense purrs

By JONATHAN GREENSPAN
Staff Writer

"We got alot done,'' said Newton North Coach Norm Walker of Saturday's opening scrimmage against Milton. "It was a typical first scrimmage. Everyone played and we lacked some intensity. But this will come in time. We don't expect it of the kids at this stage."

For Walker and staff, the most pleasing aspect of the afternoon was the effectiveness of the relatively inexperienced offense. The Tigers are returning no offensive starters from their 6-4 club of a year ago and must "really build" offensively if they are to enjoy a solid campaign.

The core of the offense will be behind the helm, where junior quarterback candidates Bob Billings and Joe Deasay are competing for the number one slot. Billings, a lean 6-2 footer is expected to throw, and to throw often. The smaller Deasay contrastingly is compact and more of a running quarterback than Billings.

In Saturday's contest, each candidate faired well, completing between them 60 to 70 percent of their passing attempts. In addition, each junior passed for a touchdown, Deasay's toss to Paul Howley covering 50 yards.

"Offensively, Armando Proia at tight end ran well with the ball and halfback Phil Jennings had a good day, commented Walker. Yet, the coach did express disappointment with the Tiger's offensive line. "Junior Kevin Troy did a fine job, but on the whole, our offensive line needs a lot of work. We made mistakes and we weren't staying with our blocks."

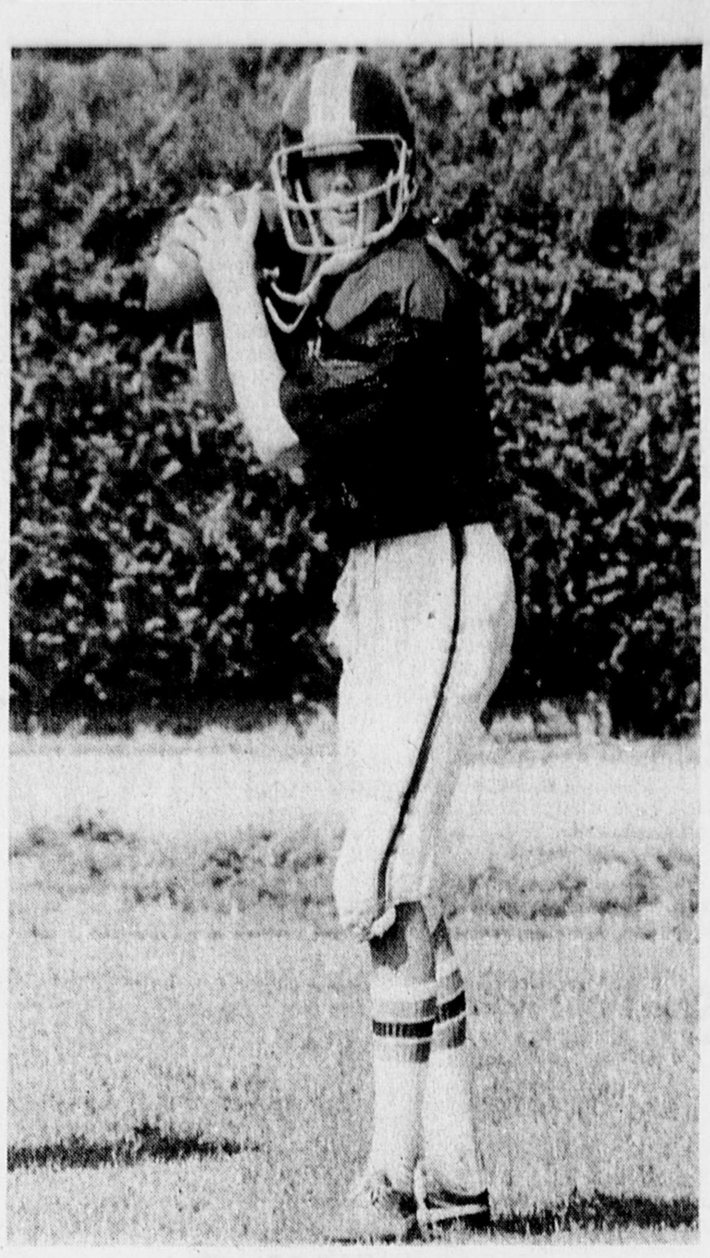
"On defense, positions are pretty much up for grabs, especially in the secondary," said Walker. "We have a new coach, John Banberry and our kids are just getting used to the stunting that we're employing this season. It is going to help us a lot, but on Saturday, the kids had a little trouble getting to their assignments."

Walker mentioned linebacker Todd Jesdale and safety Rich Marhione as two defensive players who particularly played well.

On the whole, Walker appeared satisfied with the Tiger's first scrimmage, but pointed toward the club's next opposition as a truer test for his club. "We have a good team attitude and we had a fine scrimmage. Now we must build on our intensity and improve our hitting."

"Against Walpole on Wednesday we're going to focus a little more on our regulars," said Walker. "We'll go situation and there will be a second scrimmage at the same time involving the Junior Varsity squad."

Newton North will return home on Saturday, Sept. 10 to confront the Burlington Red Devils in their next-to-last pre-season scrimmage. The Tigers conclude their exhibition schedule against the Watertown Red Raiders on Sept. 13 and will open the 1980 regular season vs. Framingham on Sept. 19.



Tiger QB hopeful Bob Billings

Lions kick off with solid start

"We had a good effort from everyone," was the way Newton South Coach Art Kojoyian summed up the Lion's first pre-season scrimmage against the Spartans of Framingham North.

"We had mistakes of course, but on the whole, we did a lot of good things,'' Koujoyian added. "We wanted to see some things and the scrimmage presented us with the opportunity."

Koujoyian declined to signal out any performer but did mention that junior quarterback Jon Greenburg appears to have an edge over his competition for a starting berth. Greenburg started two games a year ago for South and tossed two touchdown passes in Saturday's scrimmage.

"Jon threw very well, was on target and handled the club nicely," said Kojoyian. "Although we used all three of our quarterback's, he was at the helm for the bulk of the scrimmage."

Defensively, the Lions faired better than expected. Sporting 10 first-year starters, the defense held Framingham North to one touchdown. "We didn't know what our defense could do before Saturday," said Kojoyian. "We were very pleased with their performance. We had some weaknesses, but most of these involved younger kids and they just need more exposure."

Most importantly, Kojoyian went on to add, "our basics were good and the kids showed us that they wanted to play. It is early and we're just getting into the hitting groove."

The Lions' next scrimmage will be Saturday against Foxboro and according to Kojoyian, the club will continue to stress fundamentals, technique and execution. "We'll put in more plays offensively and defensively, but on the whole, things won't be much different from the Framingham scrimmage."

Pop Warner season opening on Sunday

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The Newton Athletic Association will kick off its 1980 Pop Warner football season when the Lions host the East Lynn Raiders Sunday at Newton Highlands Field. The B team Tigers will also play East Lynn in the first game starting at 12:30 p.m.

Coach Nick Pasquarosa begins his 12th year at the Lions helm and is coming off an 11-0 unbeaten season in 1979. The Lions will be out to defend their Suburban League championship this fall and extend a 19-game winning streak that dates back to September 1978.

Far from dwelling on past laurels, this year's Lions have been coming along slowly since practices first opened on Aug. 11. The numbers are not great, and vacations are biting into practice time, but the coach likes what he's seen so far.

There are two bright quarterbacks so far in Greg Weltz and Steve Altman to spearhead the Lions Power I and a fleet of good runners out of the backfield. Robbie Reiskin, Darvell Huffman and Peter Weissman are all naturals who can scoot for sure. There's a one-two punch from fullback where Steven Brady and Brenden Wilcox have returned from last year's Lions.

Justin Yoffe, Jimmy Lawless, Colin Ryan and David Whyte put the Lions end positions in good hands. They all love to catch the ball and all are hard-nosed blockers too.

Lions line hopefuls include most of the group that led last year's B Tigers to a championship. Mike Lombardo at center is flanked by guards Kevin Houlihan, Steven Anthony, Mike Drucker and Bob Greeley, and tackles Mike Levine, Tom Rogers, Armand Sarafian and Jack Pollock.

Says Coach Pasquarosa, "We have a very fine group of boys wo who are more than capable. But we are off to a slow start and there's a lot more to learn. We are still hoping that more players will come out."

The B Tigers and C Cowboys also have many openings om their teams with the roster deadline not until Sept. 13. The coaches point out that the desire to play and not experience of ability is all a boy needs for Pop Warner football. Sign-ups continue nightly at Newton Highlands.

The Lions scrimmage at Burlington Thursday as a tune-up for East Lynn. East Lynn is always at the top of the North Shore League which should make for a great qame on Sunday.

The 1980 NAA Schedule:
Sept. 7: East Lynn
Sept. 14: Arlington
Sept. 21: at Belmont
Sept. 27: at Waltham (n)
Oct. 5: Watertown
Oct. 12: Chelsea
Oct. 19: Brookline
Oct. 26: at Newton Pats
Nov. 2: at Billerica
Nov. 9: Chelmsford (at B.C.)
Nov. 16: at Hamden, Conn.

MILTON, Mass. (UPI) — Curry College gridiron gets underway Saturday, Sept. 13 against Nichols College at Will Athletic Field, in Milton at 1:30 p.m.

Bentley teaches navigation course

WALTHAM — The Bentley College Center for Continuing Education will offer "Practical Coastal Navigation," a 10-session course beginning Sept. 22 and continuing on Monday evenings, 6:30-9:00 p.m., which will explore methods for safely guiding a sailing vessel along the coastline in all types of weather.

Participants will learn how to use charts, the Mariner's Compass and other tools to calculate time, speed and distance using simple mathematics; determine positioning by bearings, electronics and other aids to navigation; and understand the effect of currents and tides. Applying these essential skills to their sailing experiences, participants will understand how to make a landfall, enter a harbor, sail in the fog, and steer clear of rocks and shoals.

The course will be taught by Commander Calvin Wilder, navigator, United States Power Squadron; and Clifford Youse, dean of the Center for Continuing Education. Both have extensive off-shore sailing experience where the use of coastal navigation techniques were used.

A course plotter and dividers will be needed for in-class work, and there will be a recommended text. Registration will be confirmed upon receipt of tuition payment.

Following this course, Bentley Continuing Education will offer "Practical Celestial Navigation," beginning Dec. 8, designed for the yachtsperson planning an off-shore cruise.

For more information, contact Clifford Youse, Center for Continuing Education, Bentley College, 891-2135.

Home schools

Parents use them as public system falters

By THOMAS FERRARO

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (UPI) — The white-framed house on Great Bridge Boulevard with green trim and a big garden in front is home as well as school for the Grigg sisters.

"We call our school Ark II," said their mother and teacher, Vicki Grigg, 33. "Noah had his ark to escape the floods. We have our schools to escape public education."

Stephanie, 13, and Nicole, 11, dropped out of public school last winter and embarked upon home study.

"In public school, learning was like black and white TV," said Nicole, a fifth grader. "At home, it's like color TV. My mom can really make learning interesting."

Said Stephanie, a seventh grader, "The only thing I miss is chorus. But not the other stuff. I've learned more with my mother teaching. And I still have my friends. They think it's really neat."

The Griggs withdrew their youngsters from public school last January after seeing them steadily fall behind in their studies.

"When my daughters came home, they didn't talk about what they learned," Mrs. Grigg said. "They would tell me about the fights and the yelling between teachers and students."

Said her husband Robert, 37, an operator at the Surry Nuclear Power Plant, "We wish we could have our children in public school, but not the way the schools are today. All the drugs and fighting and sexual promiscuity. I don't want it for my children."

"Today," said Grigg, we can't do much about higher taxes and inflation and a lot of other things that are wrong. But we can do something about education. We made our choice."

At home, the children are taught the same subjects as in public school, ranging from English to art appreciation, with the aid of correspondence courses provided by The Calvert School, a private institution in Baltimore.

"I learned more in the past six months with Calvert and my mom teaching than I did in the past three years," said Nicole. "Really. I still have trouble with spelling, but I'm working on it."

On June 12, the Griggs were convicted by a Chesapeake Juvenile Court judge of violating Virginia's compulsory school attendance laws by refusing to enroll the girls in either a public or a traditional private school.

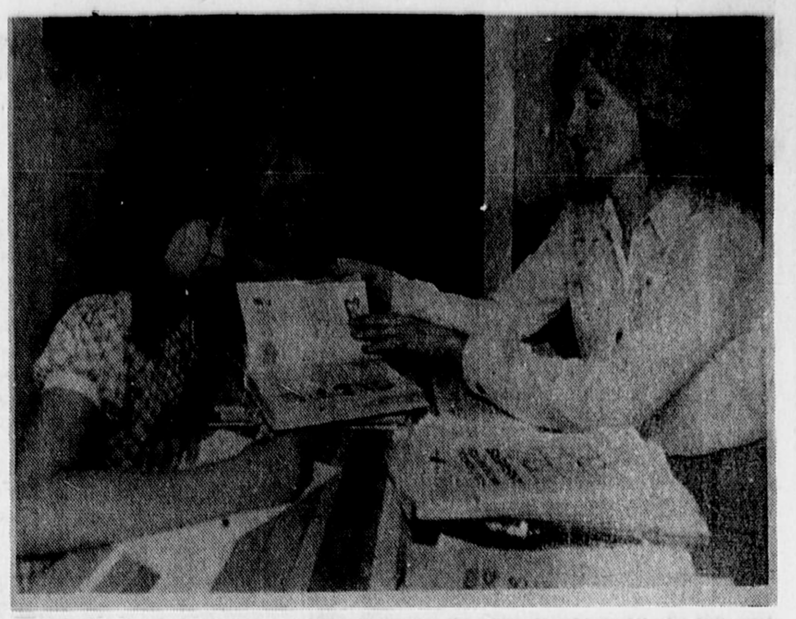
On Aug. 7, the couple was ordered to comply with the law by enrolling Stephanie and Nicole in a public or private school by September or hire a certified instructor to teach them at home.

Four other couples were earlier brought to court and were acquitted of the same charge by judges who agreed Virginia's definition of a private school is so vague that their respective home schools were within the guidelines.

The Griggs plan to comply with the law but press their appeal.

During their trial, Nicole was called to the stand and asked by the prosecutor if she liked going to school at home.

"No," she replied. "I love it."



Teaching them at home

Vicki Grigg teaches her daughters Nicole, left, and Stephanie at home. The Griggs believe home schooling is the only alternative to a faltering public school system.

Record costs one highlight of school year

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Some 58 million scholars across America — from pint-to-giant-sized — are hitting the academic trail as the 1980 school year starts up.

Buzzers summon them to classes already feeling the effects of computerized scheduling, shaped by hand-held calculators, and wrestling with the metric system in step with the march of progress.

Dr. Vance Grant, at the National Center for Education Statistics, said a statistical fix on the new school year comes from looking at figures for the year ended 1979 — the latest for which actual statistics are available.

Here are the highlights and some estimates (during the new school year there may be slight changes up or down):

- The nation's school bill, from kindergarten through graduate school, will rocket ahead to a record $166 billion or more, $50 billion of that for higher education. Elementary and secondary schools last year expended nearly $98 billion. For comparison, consider: the health care bill shoots past $200 billion this year for the first time; the auto repair industry runs to more than $50 billion a year.
- Education is the primary activity of approximately 62 million Americans. Included are some 58.4 million students, 3.3 million teachers and about 300,000 superintendents, principals, supervisors and other instructional staff.

"This means," says the NCES, "that in a nation with more than 220 million persons, nearly 3 out of every 10 persons, is directly involved in the education process."

- An estimated 11.5 million are on the college trail, the federal statisticians estimate. They said the college numbers went up 2 percent between 1978 and 1979 for the highest figure ever recorded.
- About 15.3 are in public and nonpublic schools at the secondary level — a drop of about 2 percent from the number enrolled a year earlier, the federal report said.
- Estimates of enrollment at the elementary level also are in decline, down about 2 percent to 32.6 million in 1979.
- Nonpublic school enrollment — Roman Catholic, other church-related and private schools — is holding steady at about 3.6 million.
- Overall, public school enrollment went down 600,000 last year.

"School enrollment in the future will be significantly influenced by trends in the birth rate," said the report from the NCES.

"Data from the National Center for Health Statistics, U.S. Public Health Service, show that the number of live births in this country attained an all-time high of 4.3 million in 1961, then declined precipitiously for more than a decade."

This means small annual reductions in the elementary school enrollment will continue until 1984.

Births hit a low of between 3.1 and 3.2 million a year between 1973 and 1976. But they are on the way up again. About 3.5 million babies were born last year. A baby boomlet, some call it.

Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler expects a good school year for all — from school bosses to consumers of education — who lean into the semester in the spirit of "cooperation rather than confrontation."

The influx of students from south of the border countries — Cuba included — is stirring a passionate debate over bilingual education in grade and high schools. This tension point in the weeks ahead may boil over, some insiders fear.

Other tension points: the great debates over standardized testing; over the competency movement — which aims to end social promotion (passing a kid at the end of the school year even if he didn't master the subjects); the attempt by some education departments to demand that teachers, too, pass periodic competency tests.

The backdrop in the grade and high schools includes a continued climate of violence as discipline continues to break down.

> The backdrop in the grade and high schools includes a continued climate of violence as discipline continues to break down.... apathy and lack of motivation are two of the most serious of several student discipline problems confronting the nation's schools.

Exhibit on psychic phenomena on display at main library

NEWTON CORNER — "The psychic dimension is not a matter of belief, it just is, like the weather," says Amy Modly, organizer of the exhibit "Psychic Dimension," on display at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre Street, during the month of September.

Born in Budapest, Hungary and raised mostly in New York City, Amy Modly is a graphics designer and editor whose early curiosity about nature and the universe led to a study of the occult while in high school.

Modly says, "During the sixties Boston was considered a mao major occult center." In this supportive climate Modly's experience grew and broadened to include the study of tarot, the Kabbalah, I Ching, Hatha Yoga and meditation.

"Occult phenomena is hidden because we have not cast enough light on it; we have kept our own psychic sensitivities submerged because of culture and supportable reason." A member of the American Federation of Astrologers, Modly has been a practicing astrologer and tarot reader for ten years, consulting, teaching, and lecturing privately and in organizations such as the New England Astrological Association, the Theosophical Society of UU Boston, and the Star Rovers astrological organization.

"The next decade will show a greater understanding and acceptance of what we call 'occult phenomena'," Modly continues. "Numerous organizations around the country are exploring this dimension in their own way, a local example being the New England Society of Psychic Science Researchers. The purpose of the best of them is not only to probe the unknown but to bring out and acknowledge our own very real sensitive selves. Living from that self, supported by the integration of many dimensions, we lead a more wholesome, perhaps lighthearted,life. But it takes practice."

Amy Modly will give a lecture on the Psychic Dimension Tuesday, Sept. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the Main Library, 414 Centre Street. All are welcome. For more information call 552-7145.

Volunteers needed to police nursing homes

NEWTON — More volunteers are needed to expand the nursing home advocacy program which helps residents in suburban area homes.

West Suburban ministries is a private, non-profit agency which trains volunteers to respond to nursing home complaints and provides continuing education and supervision in advocacy issues.

There are 55 nursing homes in the eight-town area the agency serves, including Belmont, Brookline, Newton, Needham, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley and Weston.

Currently, volunteers visit 22 of the homes to provide information, investigate complaints and seek resolutions. Other volunteer functions include developing links between nursing home residents and the larger community, and informing residents of their rights.

More volunteers are needed to provide more complete coverage of area homes.

Before being placed, new volunteers will be trained by West Suburban Ministries and the New England Institute for Rehabilitation, Research and Education through the Mass. Department of Elder Affairs.

In the spring of this year, an advocate negotiated with a local nursing home to allow three elderly male residents, who are de-institutionalized mental health patients, to participate in sheltered workshops in neighboring communities.

The advocate arranged for the residents to be evaluated by a mental health agency, helped make contact with the workshops and also arranged regular transportation.

Today, these residents travel regularly to the workshops, where they are paid for working either a half or full day.

Since 1978, West Suburban Ministries has been helping residents to exercise their rights. It has resolved numerous complaints involving issues of loneliness, lack of privacy, poor food service, loss of personal belongings, personal needs allowance and medical care.

Training for new volunteers is expected to begin in October. Interested persons should contact Rosemarie Leiden at 244-7157 to sign up or for more information.

West Suburban Ministries receives funding for its work from West Suburban Elder Services, Inc., the area agency on aging.

Carlos needs a family

Carlos

NEEDHAM — This is Carlos, six years old, healthy, intelligent, and waiting to be adopted. Filis M. Casey, Executive Director of The Alliance for Children, a Needham-based adoption agency, met Carlos in Colombia, South America, this summer.

She says he is a very friendly and charming little boy. He is currently in an orphanage, and all of his papers are in order for a relatively quick placement.

Ms. Casey, accompanied by Susan Jones, administrative assistant of The Alliance for Children, make annual trips to South America to meet with the Agency's adoption contacts there and to establish new resources.

This summer, Ms. Casey states, they were fortunate to add several new resources to the Agency's Colombian proqram.

Both babies and older children are available to couples and single applicants.

There are many children ages four and five, and older, who are waiting for families; and the process is much quicker for those willing to adopt in this age range.

For further information about Carlos, or about the Alliance for Children's South American or United States adoption programs, telephone the Agency at 449-1277.

Newton concert band looking for musicians

NEWTON — It is now time to sign up for Newton's Community Concert Band.

Funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Hunanities, the Newton Community Concert Band invites all woodwind, brass and percussion players to help form a Community Band, which will hopefully become a permanent feature in Newton. Musicians of all levels and ages are invited to join.

Under the direction of Ron Bergin, the group will meet on Tuesdays, Sept. 30 to Dec. 2, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Newton South High Music Room, Brandeis Circle, Newton Centre. There will be a $10 music fee and all checks should be made payable to Arts in the Parks on Wheels. Please indicate which instrument you play.

For more information call Linda Plaut at 552-7120.

What are your new car loan rates?

Whether you apply for a car loan application at a bank or through a finance company, you usually end up answering more questions than your last job application. But the only really meaningful question involved with car loans is this, what are the interest rates?

Waltham Savings Bank has the lowest rates in town. Does that answer your question?

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Nothing is FOREVER . . .most people forget that when buying a home . . . and become painfully aware of it when selling. Sure, it's your home and that place where you can "do your own thing" but someday you'll move. Most people do every 5-8 years. When decorating or making improvements keep in mind that somebody else will someday have to either love it or discount the price enough to change it.

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breathtaking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

Food fallacies will not die

SACRAMENTO, Calif (UPI) — Despite growing interest in good nutrition, some food fallacies get passed on from generation to generation.

Behind each such fallacy lies a proven nutrition fact, say registered dietitians for the Dairy Council of California, who prepared the following true and false quiz. See how many false statements you can identify.

1 — Preschool children intuitively choose foods containing the nutrients they need for growth and well being.

2 — Vitamin E slows the aging process.

3 — A low cholesterol diet requires omission entirely of such foods as eggs and fats.

4 — Blackstrap molasses cures anemia and rheumatism.

5 — Eggs with brown shells are more natural and more nutritious than white-shelled eggs.

6 — Gelatin is one of the best sources of protein and helps your fingernails grow long and strong.

7 — The nutritive value of food depends on the quality of soil it is grown in.

8 — Rare meats are more nutritious than those cooked medium rare or well done.

9 — Margarine contains fewer calories than butter.

10 — Certain foods, including fish and celery, often called "brain foods," help brain tissues grow and increase intellgience. ——

All the preceding nutrition statements are false.

1 — Good nutrition is learned, not intuitive. A good example set at home is the most valuable education device for children of all ages, and especially for toddlers whose first impressions about food are being formed.

2 — No claims about vitamin E slowing the aging process have been scientifically proven.

3 — Most low cholesterol diets limit the total amount of fat in the diet but the number of servings of high cholesterol foods is regulated — not forbidden.

4 — Molasses contains a variety of minerals and vitamins but does not cure these ailments.

5 — Egg shell color is determined by the breed of hen. It is not related to nutritional value.

6 — Gelatin is not a complete protein. It lacks some of the essential amino acids found in protein foods such as eggs, meat, fish, fowl and dairy products. Gelatin does not stimulate nail growth.

7 — Soil conditions determine the size of a crop but not its quality. Nutrient content is more closely associated with the quality of the seeds planted.

8 — When cooked at a moderate temperature, the same cut of meat has essentially the same nutrient content whether rare, medium or well done. Excessively high heat, however, damages foods' nutrient value.

9 — Serving for serving, margarine contains the same number of calories as butter.

10 — Special foods do not grow special tissues. A balanced diet from all four food groups of milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals is needed to supply body tissues all the nutrients needed for growth.

Funny first novel about neurotic

By CAROL FELSENTAHL
American Library Assn.

Does a crack playwright or screenwriter necessarily make a good novelist? Certainly not. However, on rare occasions, the talent does transfer.

Playwright Murray Schisgal ("Luv") has written a very funny first novel. Eddie Davis, narrator of "Days and Nights of a French Horn Player" (Little, Brown, 269 pages, $10.95) is a dreamer — a classic Jewish-American neurotic.

The story opens with 44-year-old Eddie recalling his adolescence and his agonizing realization that he'd never be popular. He might as well be different, he decided, and painstakingly turned himself into the artiste from Brooklyn, learning the French horn, strolling down the halls of Florence Nightingale High decked out in a beret, an ascot, a purple velvet cape, his pimples cornstarched, his scant mustache darkened with mascara. He imagined the frenzied applause at his Carnegie Hall debut. He practiced nonstop.

Which beat listening to his parents — who genuinely hated each other — argue. When they finally divorced, Eddie was delighted, but, as usual, there was a rub. His Jewish mother ran off to Florida with a Cuban and produced a step-brother, christened Jesus, for Eddie. Eddie's father did something even more socially unacceptable.

Interspersed are brief scenes of the disillusioned, middle-aged Eddie, holed up in a suite at the Geneva Hotel, still alone, still furiously practicing his "coils of gold," still determined to make his Carnegie Hall debut. Until recently, Eddie had forsaken the horn to produce grotesque TV game shows. Now a millionaire, he has traded in his velvet cape for other status symbols. Walking in his belted Burberry, his Polo gabardine slacks, his Jaeger shawl-collar cardigan and his Eddie Bauer tweed slouch hat, "I looked scrumptious.... I felt that at any minute someone would come up to me and say, 'You're special; you're a unique individual; congratulations.' " Same old Eddie.

Abraham Polonsky, screenwriter and director ("Body and Soul" and "Force of Evil") has written a book that Publishers' Weekly predicts will sell like Chaim Potok's "The Chosen." It doesn't deserve to.

The first half of "Zenia's Way" (Lipincott & Crowell, 268 pages, $10) focuses on Ram growing up in the Bronx in the '20s. The Zenia of the title is Ram's aunt, a brilliant doctor who, to her nephew's sorrow, leaves her family, her eager suitors and her profession to return to her native Russia and its infant revolution.

The reader next meets Ram 56 years later when he is a 67-year-old lawyer. He receives a phone call and rushes to Jerusalem for a reunion with 81-year-old Zenia, whom he has not seen or heard from in the interim. That's one of several holes in her character. It is simply implausible that Zenia, who was unusually close to her family, especially to Ram, would have neglected to send even a postcard in 56 years.

During their reunion they get caught in an Arab terrorist attack on an Israeli schoolhouse and are held hostage along with a classroom of girls. After Ram and Zenia's miraculous escape — several of the girls are killed — they are out walking when Zenia, portrayed as a strikingly wise old woman, sees the one terrorist — the most merciless — who has survived the Israeli storming of the schoolhouse. Zenia waves to him as if to an old friend. The terrorist responds by doing what anyone but a fool would expect him to — he throws a grenade and, again, aunt and nephew just miss dying. "I thought he wanted to thank me and wave good-bye," Zenia explains.

Polonsky's writing syle, pompous and wordy, is nearly as annoying as the title character he has created. "Fury and hatred rampaged all over Ram, everywhere that he and his body lived together." Several pages earlier, Polonsky describes a dinner at the Connaught Hotel in London. "But he ate with pleasure and enjoyed the food they had in the Grill Room." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Travel Talk

By Josephine Arria

Selecting a wardrobe for traveling can be a cumbersome and expensive problem. Uncertain weather conditions and an Insufficient number of porters add to the burden of traveling light. Here are a few tips. First, select one or two colors and build your wardrobe around them. This will give a greater variety of outfits and decrease the number of accessories needed. Select clothes that work together. A coat that fits over your jacket and one that is weather adaptable (a hooded raincoat with a zip-in, warm lining is ideal). Add to that a pair of good walking shoes, a slim, unpleated skirt, a twin sweater set, pants, a dressy blouse, evening separates — skirt, cardigan, camisole — a nightgown and robe, and you are equipped with a functional, carryable wardrobe.

BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner, is offering an exciting travel adventure prepared especially for you. Reserve now for a memorable journey to Israel with the availability to see Egypt. This is an unusual opportunity to visit such dreamed of places as Jerusalem, Galilee, Tel Aviv and other areas that will fulfill the dream of a lifetime. Explore the legends of history as part of this unique journey. Open 9-5:30 Mon.-Fri., 'til 8 Thurs. and 9-1 Sat. Tel. 244-8460. All standard credit cards accepted.

TRAVEL TIP:

Travel with a few unusual accessories, such as one of a kind jewelry or an antique shawl, to give your wardrobe added variety and style.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT
ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA FOR FREE AND REDUCED PRICE MEALS AND FREE MILK

(If your school rules not to offer Free Milk to the students then all references pertaining to the Free Milk Program should be deleted from this Announcement when printed.)

The Newton Catholic today announced a free milk and free meal and reduced price meal policy for school children unable to pay the full price of milk and meals served in schools under the National School Lunch, Breakfast Program and Special Milk Program. Local school officials have adopted the following family size-income criteria for use in determining eligibility.

INCOME ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA
FAMILY SIZE AND GROSS INCOME SCALES

Family Size All Members of Household	Maximum Gross Income For Free Milk and Free Meals	Maximum Gross Income For Reduced Price Meals
One	$0 to 5,230	$ 5,231 to 8,150
Two	0 to 6,900	6,901 to 10,760
Three	0 to 8,580	8,581 to 13.380
Four	0 to 10,250	10,251 to 15,990
Five	0 to 11,930	11,931 to 18,600
Six	0 to 13,600	13,601 to 21,220
Seven	0 to 15,280	15,281 to 23,830
Eight	0 to 16,950	16.951 to 26,440
Each additional family member	1,680	2,610

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for milk and meals free or at reduced prices. In addition, families not meeting this criteria but with other special hardship conditions due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply. Further, children having parents who become unemployed are eligible for free or reduced price meals of for free milk during the period of unemployment, provided that the loss of income caused the family income during the period of unemployment to be within eligibility criteria. Should your income or family size change, contact the approving official.

to discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the following statement is placed just above the parents' or guardians' signature on the application: "I certify that the above information I have given is true and correct, that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of State and Federal funds, that school officials may for cause: (1) request an informal conference with the parents to substantiate the information on the application (or if requested by either party the Fair Hearing Procedure may be used); (2) verify the information on the application, and that deliberate misrepresentation of the information may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable State and Federal criminal statutes."

Parents should clearly understand that every meal served in schools is subsidized to a greater or lesser degree by State-Federal reimbursements. Those lunches served at full price are subsidized as well as those served free or reduced. Therefore, there should be no reluctance to apply for either a free or reduced price meal. If your family size, and gross income is within the "Income Eligibility Criteria" for free or reduced price meals, we urge you and all eligible parents to full out the application. The intent of these programs is to improve the nutrition of all children.

They may do so by filling in the application forms sent home with a letter to parents. The information provided on the application wil be confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year. In certain cases foster children are eligible for free milk and free meals or reduced price meals regardless of your family income. If you have such children living with you and wish to apply for such milks and meals for them, please file a separate application for each child, and indicate the amount of State support only as income.

Under the provision of the policy, Cafeteria Man, will review all applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he or she may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis or make a request either orally or in writing for a hearing to appeal the decision to:

Rev. Robert Fichtner, 573 Washington St., Newton 02158. Tel. #527-7560.

Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy and a complete copy of the policy is on file in the office of the superintendent of schools where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

The policy also provides that there will be no overt identification and/or discrimination against any child because of his race, sex, color, handicap or national origin, in the operation of the child feeding program.

AN UNFORTUNATE OMISSION

Police were dispatched to a suburban home recently, in response to an alarm. Although a siren was wailing, there was no outward sign of a break-in. After reporting that the house appeared secure, the police sped away to an accident scene across town.

Meanwhile, inside, two burglers were excitedly gathering "collectibles"-irreplacable items which had been in the homeowner's family for three generations.

When the accomplice's car arrived, it was quickly loaded and away.

The total" haul"-$80,000!

This actual experience illustrates the vital importance of providing for response by a trusted friend, with a key, to permit a police check of the interior and to reset the alarm system.

If you haven't provided at least three alternate parties for a secondary notification after an alarm at your home, call your alarm company today with additional names. Make sure that you don't have an "unfortunate omission" in your security system.

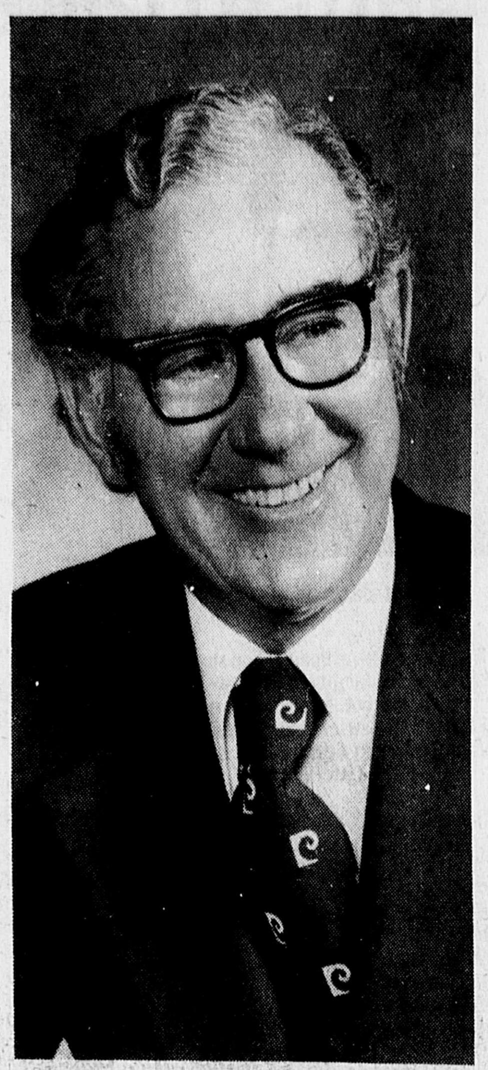
Attention riveted on 4th district battle

By STEVEN BURKE
Staff Writer

Barney Frank



Arthur Clark

NEWTON — As ɛ primary race for the 4th Congre: ɲnal District seat comes to a close, .. is a classic confrontation between the liberal tradition and the new conservatism.

With the withdrawal of Newton Rep. David Mofenson and Fitchburg businessman Robert Schaffer, liberal Back Bay Rep. Barney Frank will face Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, head on in the Sept. 16 Democratic Primary for the seat vacated by Rep. Robert Drinan after an edict from the Pope.

The winner of the Clark-Frank tug of war, which promises to be the most exciting primary race, will face former Army Dentist Richard Jones, who is running unopposed in the Republican primary.

The ideological differences between Frank and Clark are clear. Certainly, voters cannot claim there is no difference between the two veteran politicians.

Throughout the five month campaign, the candidates have come up on opposite sides of the fence on the major issues.

Two of the major issues that have emerged in the campaign are defense spending and federal funding of abortions.

Clark has indicated that he supports the Republican platform on defense spending which calls for a $30 to $165 billion increase.

Clark has not commited himself to a specific figure, but has made it clear that he favors a sizable increase in defense spending, maintaining that it will bring jobs into the district.

Frank has said he favors a defense budget hike of more than the $147 billion approved by the House, adding that he was opposed to the $153 billion defense budget preferred by the U.S. Senate.

Frank supports efforts to beef up and improve the quality of conventional military forces, but is against "giving a blank check to the Pentagon." Frank also differs from Clark on the issue of federally funded abortions. Frank supports federal funding of abortions, while Clark has campaigned against government funded abortions.

Clark has stated, "It is wrong to take the tax dollars of people who believe that abortion is immoral and use those tax dollars to pay for abortions."

A former businessman, Clark also supports the MX missile, which Frank is vehemently opposed to. While Clark /missile contends that the will help improve our weak military, Frank maintains it will "drive up taxes and not give us a nickel's worth of added security."

Both Frank and Clark have campaigned strongly in support of Israel in an attempt to capture the large Jewish vote. Clark has said, "The bonds between the United States and Israel are secured by a commitment to democracy, justice, and freedom...The people of the two nations share ideals, values and spiritual roots."

In addition, he has saidof Israel: "All of Jerusalem is her capital. The settlements in Judea and Sumeria are internal matters for her own secure survival and are not matters for foreign interference."

Frank has also pledged strong support for Israeland has secured the endorsement of one of the leading supporters of Israel in Congress, Congressman Stephen Solarz (D-NY).

Both Clark and Frank also support the Equal Rights Amendment. At a debate Tuesday, Clark ERA is vital for women in high said the technology positions along Route 128.

The two candidates differ on the issue of handgun control. Frank supports a bill sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy to ban small firearms. Clark, on the other hand, contends that there are too many government controls.

Frank and Clark also both support the use of short term wage and price controls.

Clark feels the prospect of nuclear power cannot be ignored , while Frank feels the waste disposal problem must be solved before nuclear power can be practically used.

Frank also supports conservation efforts and a stiffer tax on windfall oil profits. Clark, along with Frank' has also campaigned for more social programs for the elderly and the handicapped. Clark has criticized Frank as a "big city liberal" who does not understand the problems of the district. In addition, Clark has attacked Frank as a "carpetbagger" who is an outsider to the district.

Frank maintains that he has been more active in the district than Clark. Stressing Rep. Robert Drinan's endorsement, Frank claims the contest is a clear choice between reaffirming or repudiating the progressive "leadership tradition of Drinan."

Frank has said, "Clark has made it clear that he considers Drinan tobe a poor Congressman. He is quite clearly asking people to repudiate the Drinan tradition."

Frank, who recently picked up the endorsement of Mofenson after his withdrawal, is considered strongest in the liberal strongholds of Newton and Brookline. Clark, who was endorsed by Schaffer after his withdrawal, enjoys greater support in the Western part of the district, including Framingham.

As both candidates make their final campaign appearances, it appears that neither has a solid advantage.

Graphic poll finds 'no opinion' winning

NEWTON — A random telephone poll of 25 Newton residents Tuesday discovered that 12 of the 25 had "no opinion" when asked who they thought would win the congressional nomination.

Those called by the Graphic were asked who they thought would win the race, Arthur Clark or Barney Frank, and why.

Of the 13 who had an opinion, nine thought Frank would win the nomination and four thought Clark would.

Those who named Frank as the winner generally characterized themselves as "liberals." Among the favorable comments he received was that he is a liberal candidate.

State Rep. David Mofenson's withdrawl from the race also had an affect on the outcome of the poll, with some of those who said they were backing Frank saying the would have preferred Mofenson.

Anti-Frank sentiment was expressed as well. One woman said, "He is unfit to be a congressman. He's bad for families."

Some of those who cited Clark said they were doing so because they agree with his more conservative viewpoint. Others said they identified with Clark's name and thought that is why he will win on Tuesday.

Various other polls place Clark within hailing distance of frontrunner Frank due to an unusually large number of voters still undecided at this stage of the race.

30% voter turnout predicted for Tuesday

By CYNTHIA BLACK
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, predicts that only 16,000 of Newton's 48,000 registered voters will go to the polls Tuesday.

Licarie, whose voter turnout predictions are always accurate within about 2 or 3 percent, expects 2000 Republicans and 13,000 Democrats to vote.

The premiere race on the Democratic ballot is the 4th Congressional District contest pitting Back Bay liberal Barney Frank, now a resident of Newton Highlands, against Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark.

A field of four Democrats was narrowed to two last week when David Mofenson withdrew and threw his support to Barney Frank. Earlier, Fitchburg businessman Robert Shaffer withdrew and said he would support Clark.

The seat is being vacated by Congressman Robert Drinan, forbidden by Pope John Paul II from seeking another term.

The other race of interest to Newton Democrats is the 12th Middlesex District state representative campaign, being conducted entirely by sticker and write-in voting.

The seat in the 12th Middlesex was vacated by Mofenson in his congressional bid.

The four Democrats in the race include two Newton aldermen, Susan Schur (Ward 5) and Paul Daley (Ward 3), Newton neighborhood activist Teresa Walsh and Nick Nardone, a perennial candidate from Auburndale.

The two Republicans seeking their party's nomination are Ald. Robert Tennant (Ward 3) and Ald. Robert Katz (Ward 8).

In order to get their party's nomination, the candidates in this race must get at least 150 sticker and write-in votes. After that number has been reached, the winner will be the person with the most votes over the 150 mark.

People voting in the Democratic primary will also be nominating a candidate for sheriff of Middlesex County and two candidates for Middlesex County Commissioner.

There are eight Democrats running for sheriff, the post being vacated by veteran Sheriff John Buckley.

They are: James Breslin, Charles Buckley, Joseph Caterina, Vincent Ciampa, Thomas Corkery, Edward Henneberry Jr., Mike McLaughlin and Vincent Zabbo.

The three candidates seeking two nominations for county commissioner are incumbents Michael McLaughlin and S. Lester Ralph and challenger Thomas Larkin of Bedford.

The only actual race on the Republican side is the 12th Middlesex state representative race between Tennant and Katz.

A chief among chiefs

Chief William Quinn

NEWTON — After more than 27 years of police service, Newton Police Chief William Quinn will be sworn in as President of the International Association of Police Chiefs of Police (IACP) at a ceremony to be held in St. Louis Wednesday.

The IACP is a non-profit professional membership organization comprised of more than 12,000 police executives from 63 nations.

The IACP supports law enforcement by developing consulting programs'training courses and providing assistance to state and local criminal justice planning agencies.

Chief Quinn reflected on the honor from his office at headquarters this week.

"I feel very proud and honored to be elected, " he said. "This will mean a lot to the city because of law enforcement grants and seminars which will become available to us."

Quinn assured citizens that the new position would not hamper his effectiveness as police chief of the city.

Quinn said that any extended service or meetings with the IACP would fall within his accumulated five week vacation time.

Quinn's successful election as president of the organization comes after six years with the association as a vice president.

Quinn said that one of his first priorities will be to request the Equipment Technology Committee of the IACP to "develop a holster which will give improved protection to police officers and citizens."

Quinn explained, "A good safe holster that can not be taken from an officer easily or discharged accidentally is needed."

Quinn, whose father was a police officer, became a Newton police officer in 1952. Quinn assumed the office of chief of police 16 years later on his 40th birthday, becoming the one of the youngest police chiefs in New England.

Quinn said he is also interested in getting departments accredited and improving community relations with minority groups across the United States.

Quinn, whwill serve a one year term as IACP president, said, "I hope through my year of service to become more expert in my own field and to continue to improve the services of the Newton police for all citizens."

In dealing with the energy crises, Quinn said the IACP hopes to experiment with four cylinder and six cylinder police cars.

In addition, he said policemen are being educated to conserve fuel by

Eight Democrats want to take over as sheriff

NEWTON-The heavily congested race for Middlesex County Sheriff is a close one.

A field of eight Democrats and one Republican are all vying for the seat being vacated by Sheriff John F. Buckley.

Major issues in the campaign concern the overcrowding at the Billerica House of Correction, the use of the East Cambridge County Courthouse jail facility ‘ and inmate training programs. Other issues involve the inmate furlough programs and administrative efficiency. n n n the serving of all legal papers in the county.

In charge in event of a riot, the sheriff can also call out the National Guard. He also officiates at the Harvard University commencement ceremonies.

James Breslin

Jimmy Breslin is a Cambridge resident who has worked for the Massachusetts Department of Correction for nine years. He is a supervisor at the Northeastern Correctional Center in Concord and holds a master's degree.

Breslin suggests that inmate be put to work in hospitals and by helping the handicapped. He recommends culinary arts and janitorial service courses be taught to inmates as a useful job skill for when they are released.

Breslin would make the civil process division of the Sheriff's department a "more professional, efficient division."

As do most of the other candidates, Breslin supports the re-opening of the Billerica . prison farm. The farm which has been closed, would be used to counter the effects of inmate idleness. Some candidates feel the farm can eventually become self-supporting.

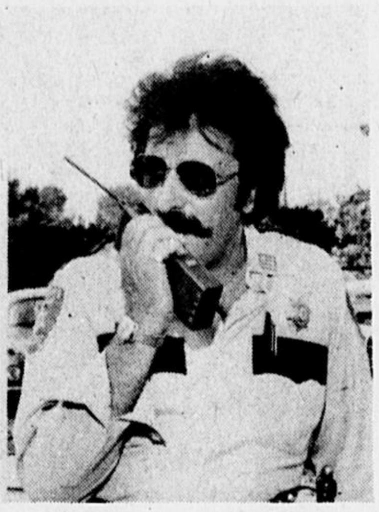
Charles Buckley

Charles Buckley is a trial lawyer practicing in Middlesex County. He holds a doctorate from the New England School of Law. A former probation officer, Buckley has taken police training courses.

On the problem of overcrowding in the House of Correction, Buckley supports a program of "alternative sentencing." This would have some convicts do public service work as opposed to incarceration.

Buckley calls the East Cambridge jail a "gross waste of space" and suggests leasing the facility to the state if the county cannot put it to use. Buckley calls for stricter surveillance of inmates to prevent drug use.

Vincent Zabbo



Joseph Caterina

Joseph Caterina

Captain Joseph Caterina is a five year veteran of the Norfolk County Sheriff's office. He was second in command to the Norfolk County sheriff and claims extensive law enforcement experience.

Caterina calls for strengthening the furlough program in order to more carefully screen inmates before their release. He also calls for more efficient pre-release notification for the state, town and victim on a crime before a furlough begins.

Caterina proposes a revamped civil process system. He is opposed to any form of "delayed sentencing."

Vincent Ciampa

Vincent Ciampa is the president of the Somerville Board of Aldermen and is a member of its school committee.

Ciampa calls the Middlesex County Correctional System a "dismal failure."

He intends to invetigate and restructure the furlough and parole policies of the county. He supports extensive training and development programs for all prison guards.

Ciampa calls for more community input in the handling of the parole process. He also wants to initiate crime prevention programs is local community schools.

Thomas Corkery

Thomas Corkery of Reading wants an enlargement of the victim restituion program, where inmates pay back money to their victims.

Corkery would expand vocational and athletic programs among the inmates to cut down on idle time watching television.

Corkery plans to establish a statewide jail guard training school and would maintain living quarters for the sheriff on prison grounds.

Ed Henneberry

Ed Henneberry of Framingham is currently in charge of the Civil Process division of the sheriff's department.

Henneberry would not open the county's jail facility in East Cambridge. Instead, he would support a "speedy trial" system to keep inmates from languishing in jail for long periods. He suggests the state may make use of the jail facility.

Henneberry also supports alternative sentencing of non-violent offenders (such as those sentenced for non-payment of alimony) for times when the prison population is lower. The Billerica House of Correction is currently overcrowded by as much as one-third more than its intended capacity.

Mike McLaughlin

Mike McLaughlin of Arlington holds a master's degree in Public Administration. McLaughlin was involved as a negotiator during a hostage crisis at the Walpole prison in June 1979.

McLaughlin wants tighter security placed on the furlough program, more equitable sentencing practices, and mandatory sentences for certain crimes. He would like to see a policy of restitution by offenders.

He says he would define the difference between inmates' rights and privileges, and see to it that privileges are more equitably distributed.

Vincent Zabbo

Vinnie Zabbo of Lowell would cut off the furlough program for any offenders who have been convicted of a violent crime. He advocates a victim restitution program where the victim has a say in the plea bargaining process.

He says arrangements have already been made to provide software training programs for inmates. If elected, Zabbo would also institute a program to insulate the county facilities and convert the heating systems from oil to solar powers using inmate workers and federal grants from the Conservation Bank.

Promising a top to bottom review of the sheriff's department, Zabbo says his goal is to make the prisons more self-supporting, cutting down on taxes needed to run the facilities.

Phillip Razook

Phillip Razook, the lone Republican in the race is dead set against any kind of furlough system. He does not believe it can work.

Razook, a former undercover narcotics agent in Vietnam and a security director for various firms, is also a second lieutenant in the Air National Guard.

The overcrowding situation would be dealt with by doubling up inmates according to Razook. He proposes no new vocational programs for inmates, citing the fact that the average sentence in Billerica is only eight months long.

Razook would revamp the civil process system and would screen deputy sheriffs who serve as jail guards. He also wants to open the Cambridge jail facility after some modifications are made. He would open the prison farm and supports a court directed restitution program.

The name's the same

NEWTON-In the Middlesex County Sheriff's race there are nine relatively unknown candidates. The contest is additionally confused by the fact that one of the candidates shares the same last name as the outgoing sheriff John J. Buckley.

Sheriff John Buckley said there was considerable confusion concerning his current status.

"On May 12, 1980, I announced that I would not be a candidate for re-election. That decision remains final and firm'" said Buckley.

"Let the record show that John Buckley is not a candidate for office," he said.

Acknowledging his "fair share of mistakes," Buckley said that on balance he felt he was leaving behind a strong record of accomplishment.

Sheriff Buckley has been in office for ten years. He is leaving for what he calls "personal reasons."

Then there is Michael A. McLaughlin of Arlington who is a candidate for sheriff of the county and Michael E. McLaughlin of Lowell, a candidate for county commissioner. The candiate for sheriff refers to himself as "Mike."

Stickers are the challenge in 12th Middlesex

NEWTON-There is still no clear favorite in the unique 12th Middlesex District representative race.

Each candidate is conducting a sticker and write-in campaign in order to try and secure his or her party's nomination. This is a challenge to the candidates who must get stickers into the hands of voters and educate them as to their use.

The 12th Middlesex District curves down the western border of Newton from Auburndale to Oak Hill, including Newton Lower Falls, Newton Highlands, and Newton Upper Falls. It has one arm which extends to West Newton Hill and one precinct of Newtonville.

All of the contestants are vying for the seat held by David Mofenson, who was running for Congress this year.

According to the Newton Election Commission, the sticker candidates need only 150 bona fide votes to be nominated. Since only one in each party will triumph, after the 150 mark the candidate with the most number of votes will win.

Newton Alderman Richard McGrath dropped out of the race last week citing business reasons for not continuing his campaign.

Paul Daley

Democrat Paul Daley has served on the Board of Aldermen for two terms. He sees himself as a "grass-roots" candidate, believing in working on a one to one basis with people in the community.

Daley calls himself a "child-advocate" and says he is concerned with such issues as child abuse prevention and aid to needy children. He has qualms with the Registry of Motor Vehicles which he sees as an inefficient bureaucracy which could be better run "home-rule" style.

Daley characterizes the Middlesex County system as "another patronage system" and would support moves to abolish it. He supports the idea of a cap on state spending. He is also "very concerned" about the disposal of solid waste in the commonwealth. Daley would retire as an alderman if elected.

Robert Katz

Republican Bob Katz is the 22-year-old freshman alderman from Ward 8. He favors phasing out county government by eliminating those services duplicated by the city.

Katz would like to see the MBTA run more like a business to increase productivity. He would also like to see more money come from the riders who use the service.

Katz said that people are looking more to their government for human services and he opposes cuts in those areas. He advocates strict environmental regulations and favors a "home-rule" style system on the regulation of solid waste disposal.

Katz emphasizes he has no ties to presentative. Katz would attempt to keep his position as an alderman if elected.

Nick Nardone

Nick Nardone of Auburndale is a selfdescribed "conservative Democrat." He is against statefunded abortions. He will try to get more jobs for the area and supports more services for the elderly.

He promises to help the landlords in Newton and will try to keep taxes down. Nardone supports Proposition Two and a half. He has not held prior political office.

Susan Schur

Susan Schur is a Democrat who serves on the Board of Aldermen. She claims a background of 14 years working with government and sees a bid for the House of Representatives a "logical move."

Schur would like to see a tax cap on the state, providing it does not force cuts in any human services. She would like to establish budgetary priorities and cut waste. Schur supports "sunset legislation" which provides for oversight of various state agencies.

Schur would like to see the MBTA's management get tighter control over the unions and urges that the advisory board have a tighter rein over the budget. Schur would retire at the end of her aldermanic term if she is elected.

Robert Tennant

Republican Robert Tennant has been an alderman for 17 consecutive years and said he "understands people" and wants "good economical government."

Tennant is concerned about what he calls the "blatant arrogance" of the legislature which left unfimished business during the last session. He favors a state spending cap and says the biggest problem facing people today is burdensome taxes.

Tennant believes the MBTA is "overridden" with unions and would investigate ways to obtain better service. He would immediately seek to abolish Middlesex County government and eliminate duplicated services.

Teresa Walsh

Democrat Teresa Walsh is a past president of the Ward Eight Democratic Committee, a member of the Mayor's Supplementary Transportation Committee, president of the Winchester Street-Charlmont Road Neighborhood Association and president of the Newton South High School boosters.

Walsh believes her non-political past distinguishes her from the rest of the field.

Walsh is against further legislative pay raises, saying that government should set the climate for saving money.

Walsh would like to see Newton's share of Middlesex County costs reduced because many of the county services are duplicated by the state.

She believes there should be a reassessment of the MBTA. Walsh feels that a state representative should be "locally accessible" and promises to be on the job full-time.

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, said this was the first time in his 15 years at the post an all-sticker campaign has been held. He expects a light turnout in the contest.

This story prepared by Jonathan Robbins, staff writer.

Alan Licarie points to the slot.

Could be something

Embarrassed by resistance in Afghanistan and the workers' revolt in Poland, Russians are suddenly acting like they want to resume detente with the U.S. instead of cold war detachment. President Carter may score some foreign policy points before the election.

His biggest break, without doubt, would be the negotiating of freedom for the hostages in Iran. There was even the slightest glimmer of a hope in that direction in recent days.

If release does come, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie could be the man of the hour. He has been making the overtures to the Iranian government and is not discounting the possibility they are being taken seriously.

Ten months have passed since the Americans were taken captive by revolutionaries, a period of frustration and humiliation. Muskie says the diplomatic negotiations are too delicate to be revealed in detail, but is encouraged.

A lot of Muskie skeptics have been converted by the manner in which he has handled himself at Foggy Bottom. A strong-minded approach by the man from Maine was supposed to bring trenchant actions that would roil the waters of international diplomacy.

On the contrary, he has been the epitome of what is expected in a secretary of state. We find it difficult to believe a rumor he would be the first to go among cabinet officers if Carter were re-elected.

Enlightenment

It has taken a long time, but the general public finally has been alerted to the weakness of that property tax relief pill called Proposition 2 ½. Offered as a simplistic way to put a tighter lid on local taxes, it was sold easily by those seeking names on a petition to put it on the November ballot.

This same reasoning may provide an affirmative response in the referendum, but it is tied to full and fair market valuations, a myth in our Commonwealth.

Precisely because the same condition prevailed and has continued to be so, Proposition No. 1 in 1978 on classifications has been never fully implemented except in a few towns. Even under Supreme Judicial Court mandate, it hasn't happened, so why is anyone so naive as to expect it can in the forseeable future?

Even the principal proponent, Citizens for Limited Taxation, admit its fallacious content. Barbara Anderson, director, conceding a poorly drawn document, describes it as an "idea to cut taxes" and points out the Legislature can make it work by amending.

The Legislature's joint tax committee chairman, Gerald M. Cohen of Andover, uses the term "well-intentioned nightmare" which will "create a parade of horribles" if passed. He is correct.

All that has changed in recent weeks is more enlightenment on consequences.

Perspectives

My Turn

By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS

I call it the chronological malaise of the 1980's, a collective confusion about the times we live in.

In a country where the morning jog may be timed with the latest in quartz-precision accuracy ' a vast number of us do not know what the time really is.

I submit that the uneasy, awkward feeling many of us are feeling is from a situation where various elements of our world are out-of-sync with each other time-wise.

For example, for the world's Jewish population, this is New Year's Dav. Happy New Year.

The Jewish New Year in September is not all that unusual though. The Chinese have theirs in February and the world has become accustomed to it. It is some other things that give us a national case of jet lag.

Mr. Eonald Reagan, for one, has expressed his suspicions of the scientific theory of evolution. He thinks the Biblical concept should also be taught in schools. Resurrect Clarence Darrow, it is 1925.

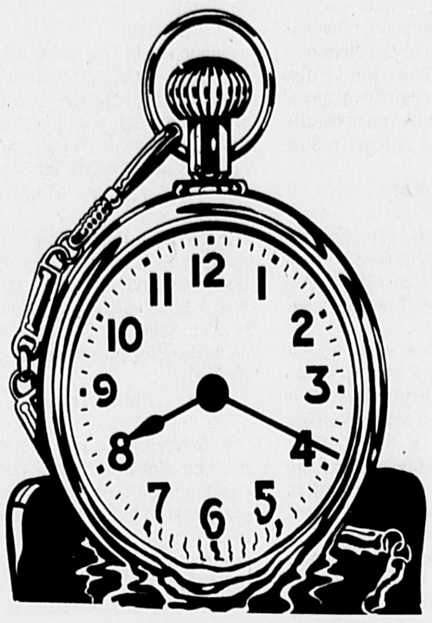
Automobiles, once the galvanized galleons of the highways, are steadily becoming simple tin boxes like the Model T. All of the new smaller cars are surprisingly similar in shape, soon they may be all the same color. A toast to Henry Ford, it is 1908.

Been listening to rock and roll lately? Disco is dead, punk has pooped, there is no wave to the new wave, what are the kids listening to now? The B-52's, a pop group that lifts its musical style from the California beaches of the mid-1960's. Broadway's biggest hits are not neccessarily the newest. Revivals of the older plays such as "Oklahoma" are packing the house. Take your pick 1965 or 1955.

More than mere nostalgia is causing our case of time disorientation. The modern world has toyed with the concept of time to an unsettling degree. Time passes much more quickly now, if you take a minute to notice.

Ideologically, many of us live in different times. Mr. Reagan, who incidentally thinks we are in another 1930's Depression, has espoused ideas which warn us of the dangers of the Commie Russians and the Red Chinese. Di di do wop, check the bomb shelters, it is 1957.

Consider those people who think it is "morally" correct for the government to tell women what they can and cannot do with their own bodies. Six hundred years ago, these same people had laws which allowed them to clamp chastity belts on their women for reasons. Watch out for those who are wandering blindly in the Dark Ages.



Even the jargon about time is.disconcerting. The nation may never get used to the switch between EDT and EST, remember the confusion in the early 70's when the switch was made in the dead of winter to save electricity?

Computer people use a phrase called "real time", political people say things like "within a given time frame." The space agency used to have a period of time called a "launch window," how confusing. to add to the general confusion.

We are getting as disoriented about the times we live in as old Rip Van Winkle was in the Washington Irving story. Our reference points for time are becoming blurred and that is unsettling to our internal biorhytyms.

Still have doubts? Is it Fall? Then where are the new television shows? Is it really the 1980s? Describe for me, in detail, the current fashion in clothing for men and women. Not all that futuristic is it?

In Newton, we will have cable t.v. in the Fall of 1981, three years before 1984. Good grounds for a case of future shock.

If the energy crisis gets worse, we may start hoarding World War II style rationing coupons for everything from soup to Cuisinarts.

We are all living in the land of the midnight sun. Try not to get so distressed about the chronological aberrations of our time. Dr. Einstein would remind us that time is relative. The rock group "Chicago" sang: "Does anybody really know what time it is? Does anybody really care?"

But Mick Jagger, himself an aging symbol of my generation, sang: "Time is on my side, yes it is." Jonathan D. Robbins is a reporter for the Newton Graphic.

Politics and another ConCon

Commentary
By William Poole
State Columnist

BOSTON (UPI) — Amending the Massachusetts Constitution is complicated and time consuming at best, but for real problems try tying it to election year politics.

That's just what has happened this year. Despite the fact that many of the state's 200 legislators are unopposed or facing weak challenges this fall, most don't like to take a chance on alienating voters.

And the 22 constitutional amendments the lawmakers passed over without taking action before they adjourned in early July include some controversial matters such as a sweeping plan to cut state and local taxes and a proposal to reinstitute the death penalty.

But Gov. Edward J. King, under pressure from numerous groups ranging from liberal to conservative, has called for the reconvening of the constitutional convention.

All that needs to be done to bring the lawmakers back to Beacon Hill for the convention is an okay from the Executive Council, which is slated to make its decision this Wednesday.

With the Council's approval the convention would be held on Sept. 18, two days after the primary thus reducing the possibility of lawmakers being forced to take stands on issues.

Look at restoration of the death penalty, for instance. In 1974 a state Supreme Judicial Court ruling struck down capital punishment in Massachusetts. Now a proposed constitutional amendment, up for first time consideration of the joint convention of the House and Senate, is designed to clear the way for return of the state's power to execute persons convicted of capital offenses.

Under the constitution, two successive conventions must okay a proposed amendment before it can be placed on ballots for final voter approval.

This process is designed to avoid hasty decisions. But when a legislative session ignors several proposals, like it almost did this year, the process can become subverted.

It was that possibility that spurred many groups, from the League of Women Voters to Associated Industries of Massachusetts, to exert pressure on King to recall the Legislature.

Gov. King...pressured to recal ConCon

Most of those who called for the reconvening of the Legislature said they were more concerned about the undermining of the amendment process itself rather than the individual proposals.

To allow the Legislature to treat the process lightly could have long term effects on the state's constitutional process, they argued.

In announcing his long-delayed decision to reconvene the joint session, the governor said the convention would be limited to the 22 by-passed amendments.

In addition to the tax cut proposal tied to the statewide rate of personal income growth and the capital punishment proposal, the following matters remained on the convention agenda:

—Creation of a House district for the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard;

—Revision of procedures for adding emergency preambles to laws;

—Giving the Legislature authority to take property for the beautification of highways, and —Prohibition of unfunded state mandated programs.

Those four proposals are up for second time approval by the Legislature and if given the go-ahead, would be put on statewide ballots.

Other proposals are:

—Two amendments to abolish the Governor's Council;

—An amendment to permit the state to extend aid to non-public school students who request assistance

—An amendment to abolish county government;

—An amendment to prohibit persons convicted of malfeasance or misfeasance from holding public office;

—An amendment to guarantee individuals the right of privacy and freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures;

—An amendment to abolish durational residence requirements for voting;

—An amendment to allow city councils to submit petitions to the Legislature without the approval of the mayor;

—An amendment to prevent state legislators from raising their own pay until an election has intervened;

—An amendment to limit the annual sessions of the Legislature to no more than seven months;

—An amendment to require voter approval of state and local bonds of more than $10 million and to set limits on how much money can be borrowed by local and regional governmental bodies;

—An amendment to provide for the recall of elected officials;

—An amendment to protect minor children from abuse or neglect;

—Two additional amendments to reduce taxes, and —An amendment to set requirements before additional expenditures can be imposed upon two or more cities or towns.

Regional primary system is better

By Frank Sargent
State Columnist

Congressman Gerry Studds of Massachusetts is filing bills of special interest on subjects I've discussed in this column.

They include legislation on reform of the electoral system, on direct Presidential election, and on public financing of campaigns, but those of special interest relate to regional Presidential primaries and to limitations on terms of Congressmen and Senators.

On regional primaries, Studds and I agree in principle, and on congressional tenure, he's begun to persuade me to his viewpoint.

First, after two political conventions and a year of presidential primaries, most people see the system we've got as silly. After all the millions of dollars, all the months of travel and discussion, all the back-and-forth-ing of all the candidates, it's obvious there's got to be a better way.

Studds favors a series of four regional primaries around the nation, and I've written here about holding six of them. Four or six, the point is regional primaries make more sense than the 30-plus primaries and caucuses this year and last.

With retional primaries, perhaps one every month during the spring of a presidential year, candidates could go to a particular region, deal with the issue of that region, and be judged by voters on the merits, not on the hoopla and stagecraft.

It makes sense, it's sane and orderly, and instead of a system where stamina means more than ability, we'll produce convention finalists who represent the considered judgement of informed voters.

On the terms of Congressmen and Senators, Studds proposes an 18-year limitation for members of the House and the Senate: three 6-year terms for a Senator, nine 2-year terms for a member of the House. Studds is now in his fourth two-year term, going for his fifth.

> 'First, after two political conventions and a year of presidential primaries, most people see the system we've got as silly.'

He told me, "Frank, most of my colleagues in Congress now are more worried about hanging on to their jobs or moving up to higher office than about getting things done. The longer I'm in office," he says, "the more I think the old idea of a citizen leaving private life to serve the public, then returning to private life, is a good idea, better than what we have now."

For some time, I disagreed with that because to limit a member of Congress and forcibly retire him would waste the experience a long-term member earned and discourage able people from public service careers.

But watching the Congress fail to act on matters like the energy crisis, maybe term limits make sense.

What's most important, though, whether it's campaign financing, term limitation, or regional primaries, the Studds ideas deserve early and careful attention next January.

THE ART OF DISCOVERY

By Dorothy Keilt

Introduction

In 1919 Paul Klee, considered the poet among modern painters wrote "art does not reflect the visible, rather it gives vision."

The Art of Discovery is acquiring vision on a lot of things through discovering art.

It is easier, however, to be an Archie Bunker or a Mortimer Snerd. It is easier to keep the blinders on and the blinds drawn. It is easier not think, not to expose the twists and turns of the brain to new convolutions. But human beings are such paradoxes that at the same time they do not want to bother or be bothered to learn. They clamor for change and the new.

What is required to solve the dilemma, to get from here to there, from boredom to interest, is a little willingness, a little interest, a little energy and a lot of character.

It is written on the walls of the Museum of Natural History in New York City and said by Theodore Roosevelt, "If there is one factor that can make the difference between the influences of heredity and environment, it is character."

It takes character to stop being Rip Van Winkle, stand up and move. When it is done, the muscles are strengthened, circulation improved and the body healthier. It takes character to dust off the cobwebs of the human brain, which needs the same stimulation, the same strengthening. And the human brain responds grandly. It absorbs more, processes more and makes more meaningful connections. And it is probably the most exciting discovery of the 20th century that the brain can be modified chemically and biologically.

Through what man sees he learns, and conversely what he learns influences greatly what he sees. (James Gibson, "The Perception of The Visual World)." And the psychologist, William James, tells us that "human beings can alter their lives by altering their attitudes of mind." By seeing and understanding what is seen, connections are made, parallels are drawn. People consciously and unconsciously make all sorts of connections with ideas, some to the detriment of their lives and some to the advantage.

The Art of Discovery is making conscious connections between the art world and the rest of the world — philosophy, psychology, biology, history, literature. Genius and creativity are nothing but correlating ideas in patterns that have not been correlated before.

Everyone has the ability to create their own patterns through their own connections of ideas that become an individual work of art, and is The Art of Discovery.

Newton works for the disabled

NEWTON-The city will be making an even greater effort to help its disabled citizens. As part of the International Year of the Disabled, the city's Committee on the Handicapped will be involved in various projects aimed at increasing the integration of the disabled into everyday life.

The United Nations has proclaimed 1981 as the International Year of Disabled Persons and has set as the worldwide theme the full participation of individuals with disabilities in the life of their society.

The city will be cooperating with the U.S. Council for the International Year of Disabled Persons (IYDP).

Mayor Theodore Mann said the Committee on the Environment of the Handicapped has been working for five years to implement measures that help the handicapped.

Steven P. Moskowitz, the assistant director of the Department of Human Services was appointed by the mayor to be the liaison with the U.S. Council of the IYDP.

Moskowitz said,"We've had a real jump on other communities in helping the handicapped."

Among changes that have been made for the disabled are modifications to Newton's city hall, libraries, recreation areas and polling places.

The committee makes recommendations to the city's Planning Deptartment which uses federal Community Development funds. Moskowitz says programs in the future will help to provide full accessibility for the handicapped to the Crystal Lake swimming area and will work with various churches,synagogues, clinics and other public non-profit facilities to help them become more accessible to the disabled.

Fred Rosene, chairman of the Committee on the Handicapped stated,"If the IYDP is to have meaning in Newton, the active interest of concerned citizens from all walks of life including the disabled is important. Over the next few months, the committee will begin the important task of assessing unmet needs of the disabled, establishing goals and developing programs to address these needs."

Among the projects of the committee, is support of an ordinance that enforces handicapped regulations on both city streets and municipal lots and provides for Tow Away signs at handicapped spaces.

Moskowitz encouraged interested citizens to contact him at the Dept. of Human Services at 552-7170.

Army wants to manufacturenerve gas

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Since 1969, the United States has produced no biological or chemical weapons of any kind. Since then we have made progress in talks with the Soviets on limiting development and use of such weapons. A major breakthrough occurred in July when both sides accepted the principle of on-site verification.

The Army, however, is moving in a different direction. With the aid of some members of Congress, the Army has advanced a plan to resume the production of nerve gas in the U.S. The price tag for the initial stage of their plan could reach $4 billion, but the real price could be much higher in terms of escalating the arms race and endangering humanity.

This massive step backwards is being advanced without any hearings and without meaningful debate. It also flies in the face of a 1976 Congressional action prohibiting production of chemical munitions unless the Presidnet certifies such production is essential to the national interest. Neither former President Ford nor President Rarter made such a determination, and the present administration specifically opposes the resumption of production of nerve gas.

The House will soon consider a military appropriations bill which includes funding for construction of a nerve gas facility. I will be working to delete those funds from the bill, and will fight any future funding for the development of these deadly chemical weapons.

Hazardous Waste Sites

The threat Americans face from hazardous waste disposal sites is well known. The tragedy of Love Canal in New York helped to awaken us to the danger. Shocking revelations about dump sites in our own backyards brought the frightening message closer to home. This coming week the Congress will take action on a bill designed to aid in the clean-up of these chemical waste sites, sites which constitute a massive threat to human health and life.

H.R. 7020, the Hazardous Waste Sites bill, is structured to make the party responsible for polluting the site responsible for the clean-up costs as well. In cases where the guilty party cannot be found and where the city or state is unable to act, the Environmental Protection Agency will step in, clean up the site, and then restore the natural resources.

This federal action would be paid for out of a fund collected from industries that create hazardous chemical waste. In addition, the bill would require a state-by-state inventory of inactive hazardous waste sites.

When this bill comes before the House this week, I will fight any attempts to weaken its provisions. I plan to vote in favor of its final passage.

Energy Preparedness

The day after the takeover of the American Embassy in Iran, the President signed into law the Emergency Energy Conservation Act. Its purpose was to protect us from any future oil embargoes through a program of conservation targets and specific state emergency conservation plans.

Today, nearly a year later, that program has yet to become a reality. The blame for this failure must be shared by the Department of Energy, state energy officials, and the Congress itself.

In hearings this week, the Subcommittee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources, on which I serve, sought to find out what can be done to increase the cooperative efforts of state and federal officials. In the weeks ahead, our subcommittee will be working closely with D.O.E. and state officials in order to create the emergency energy conservation program our country might need in a crisis.

We cannot allow ourselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by the present abundant supply of petroleum.

A Break

The House will soon consider the Regulatory Flexibility Act, a bill designed to reduce the federal regulatory burden on small businesses. This legislation, which recently passed the Senate, has the strong support of Presidet President Carter. House passage seems likely.

This bill would direct federal agencies to analyze the effects of their regulatory rules before they are issued. It would require that they consider less burdensome options. It would mandate that bureaucrats reexamine existing rules, and eliminate unnecessr unnecessary ones. It would also require that the public be given advance warning when new rules are being considered.

I will be voting in favor of this bill, and I an confident that President Carter will be signing it into law in the very near future.

Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Newton.

Three in commissioner's race for 2 county seats

By SARAH CLAYTON
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Three Democrats will compete in Tuesday's primary for two slots on the board of Middlesex County Commissioners. The incumbents, Michael McLaughlin of Lowell and S. Lester Ralph of Somerville, are being challenged by Thomas J. Larkin of Bedford.

Larkin, a school psychologist in the Boston Schools and a member of the graduate faculty of Regis College, has experience as the Chairman of the Bedford School Committee and as an appointee to the Budget Committee of the Middlesex County Advisory Board.

A former Director of Special Education for the Boston schools and Principal of Dearborn School in Cambridge, Larkin graduated from Cambridge Latin High School in 1956. He received his bachelors degree from Salem State College, a masters degree from Boston State College and an advanced degree from Boston University in 1976. cies of Jeanne Bonnell, Robert Daly and William Sullivan on the grounds of a "conspiracy to fraudulently forge, erase and alter signature on nomination papers." Bonnell, Daly and Sullivan were removed from the ballot after the State Ballot Law Commission ruled that they did not have the required 1000 legitimate signatures.

Larkin charged that McLaughlin was involved, but the Ballot Commission ruled that McLaughlin was not under suspicion. Larkin maintains that McLaughlin conspired with the three candidates in order to "protect McLaughlin from a head-on confrontation with me."

McLaughlin, appointed in April 1975 to fill Paul E. Tsongas' seat on the county board, is seeking his second four-year term after his successful campaign in 1976. Ralph, who also ran in 1976, is running for his third term as county commissioner. In 1976 Ralph and McLaughlin easily defeated Republican challenger, Carl Cincotta of Waltham, in a race for two county seats.

McLaughlin cites his political experience as a former state representative, town meeting member and town selectman as a major advantage in running county government.

McLaughlin, who was educated in the Billerica Public Schools and graduated from Plymouth State College, is presently nearing completion of a masters degree master's degree in government at the Maxwell School of Government, Syracuse University, New York.

He was recently re-elected for the third consecutive year to represent Massachusetts on the Board of Directors of the National Association on Counties.

During his term as county commissioner, McLaughlin says the Middlesex County budget has been reduced on two occasions with the present budget being less than 1 percent higher than the 1979-1980 budget.

Larkin challenges McLaughlin's statement about the 1980-1981 budget and argues that the commissioner's actually approved a 40 percent hike in this year's budget.

Larkin says that the approval of the county budget is a three-step process with the county commissioners presiding over the first step and holding the first set of public hearings in February. According to Larkin, the budget comes before the Middlesex County Advisory Board Budget Committee in April and additional public hearings are held. Final approval occurs in June when the budget is passed on the Committee on Counties.

In effect, Larkin says, it was the Committee on Counties that was responsible for a final budget that was less than 1 percent higher than the 1979-1980 budget.

McLaughlin charges that Larkin's estimate of this year's budgetary process is "factually untrue."

According to McLaughlin, the legislature generally returns the budget in June since the fiscal year begins in July. However, this year it was delayed and was not received until December 22. In the meantime, the law required that the normally scheduled public hearings on the 1980-1981 budget be held in October and November. As a result, the figures that came in were "ballpark figures," McLaughlin says, which Chairman Danehy's office had put in and signed. McLaughlin says that he agreed to passing on a budget with a 40 hike only on the basis that it would be greatly revised.

McLaughlin says that he worked diligently towards obtaining the final budget which was only less than 1 higher than last year. He resents Larkin's criticism because he says that the Middlesex County Budget has been reduced on two occasions during his tenure as county commissioner, something which had not occured for over one hundred years.

McLaughlin also notes that the Middlesex county-operated hospital has been turned around from a deficit of $3 million to a revenue-producing institution the "doesn't cost the taxpayers one cent."

Ralph strongly disagrees with McLaughlin's analysis of the accomplishments of his five year tenure. Ralph, who ran on a reform ticket with Paul Tsongas in 1972, says that McLaughlin's statements are "a question of deceit upon deceit."

With regard to the budget, Ralph says that the budget is always ignored and departments are allowed to build up unpaid bills. Payment of these unpaid bills, which yearly amount to approximately $1.5 million, is arranged through emergency loans, Ralph says.

Although the county-operated hospital is now operating in the black, Ralph says that it "has nothing to do with good management." He states that the deficit is being made up with state funding and third party payee payments. Because of the state funding, Ralph says that the hospital is still costing the taxpayers money.

"For the past six years I have been in the position of being the minority vote and I have voted against almost every issue," Ralph said. "I hope that there will be a new majority on the commission."

Ralph, who holds a Doctor of Laws Degree from Boston University and a Master of Divinity Degree from the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Virginia, served from 1970 to 1978 as the mayor of Somerville and has been a county commissioner since 1973. In 1976 he received the President of Tufts University citation for distinguished public service.

Head lice checks urged by board

NEWTON — The School Committee is investigating the possibility of acquiring the aid of area nursing schools to check children for head lice.

Head lice, which are tiny insects in children's hair, have consistently been a problem in Newton schools for the past several years.

The Health Department, however, cannot check children for head lice periodically because of a lack of resources.

The School Committee approved a motion by Committee member Howard Spergel Monday night to ask area nursing schools, such as Boston College, Mass Bay Community College and Newton- Wellesley Hospital, if they would be interested in having their students participate in a program of head lice prevention.

Children can become infested with head lice, which can spread easily from one person to another, by coming into contact with infested combs,brushes,towels or bedding.

School department officials at the meeting said the health department has maintained it is not possible and unnecessary to check for head lice.

Committee member Susan Silbey asserted, "If the city is not going to do something about this, it is incumbent on us to do something."

Committee member Honora Kaplan agreed. "I really do feel that at the beginning of the school year, we must take some steps that will give parents some confidence"' she said.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann countered that the Health Department has taken the problem very seriously and developed an education program.

Committee member Katherine Jones said, "It does not make sense for us to go through the same thing we did before. Unless, we take some action, we are doomed to repeat the past."

Spergel said he will check with the schools and report to the school committee at the next meeting on the availability of nursing school students.

Quinn, who was born and grew up in Brighton, entered the U.S. Navy in 1943 during World War II. He served for three years in the Navy and was decorated for action in the North Atlantic.

Chairman of the Greater Boston Police Council, Quinn has consistently been an advocate of advanced education for police officers.

Quinn established a four year degree program for police officers at the Newton College of the Sacred Heart several years ago.

Quinn has also been instrumental in the formation of the Greater Boston Police Council for purchasing vehicles for over 100 departments on one contract, saving over $800 per vehicle.

"I believe this will enhance my service to Newton, which is my primary purpose," Quinn said. "I love this city and this is where I hope to finish my career in 15 to 20 years."

Mayor Theodore Mann will swear Quinn in as new president of the IACP. Newton District Court Judge Monte Basbas, who is also a friend of Quinn's will also attend the ceremony, along with several Newton police officers.

Volunteers to monitor children

NEWTON — The West Suburban Council for Children is looking for volunteers to help monitor the quality of children services in the area.

As the citizen arm of the Commonwealth's Office for Children, the Council is concerned with the delivery of children's services in the Newton, Wellesley, Weston, Needham, area.

Manadated by the legislature to monitor and evalute children's services, the Council works closely with local agencies to improve the quality of the services they offer.

The Evaluation Reports developed by the Councils for Children are the basis for recommendations to the State for continuation of funding.

For further information, call Chairperson Anne Reilly before Sept. 10, 1980 at 527-6060 or the Area Office at 965-9810.

Church site plan approval is upheld

NEWTON-A final attempt to block approval for the Church of Saint John of Damascus' new facilities on Dudley Road failed at the Newton Board of Aldermen's meeting on Monday night.

A move to reconsider the site plan approval was made by Ald. Cynthia Creem and seconded by Ald. Bob Katz, both aldermen are from Ward Eight.

The reconsideration would have brought the matter up for further discussion before the full Board of Aldermen and would have led to another vote.

Most of the aldermen who spoke against reconsideration said they felt there was no new evidence to be presented to the board and the matter had been thoroughly debated before.

The vote for reconsideration was 10 in favor, 13 against and one absent. After the vote was taken and the site plan approval for the Church was finalized, Father Gerry Murphy of the Church thanked the board of aldermen and promised that they his church would be "affable and pleasant neighbors."

The church must still submit plans to various city departments specifying final configurations of driveways, parking lots and drainage systems.

Part of the board order that approves the church petition calls for the City of Newton and the church to co-petition for a curbcut into Route 9. A failure on the part of the Massachusetts Department of Public Works to approve the curbcut may also hamper progress for the church.

The church may begin construction soon and expects the major portion of the work to be completed next spring. Their ownership of their current church facility ends in June of 1981. Consecration of the new church could come as early as next May.

Ossinger motions heard

By STEVEN BURKE
Staff Writer

CAMBRIDGE-Judge John Murphy took under advisement Wednesday motions for court appointed lie detector tests for Mayor Theodore Mann and Diana Ossinger, Mann's former personal secretary who is standing trial on charges that she stole more than $24,000 from the mayor.

In a morning session at Middlesex Superior Court, Judge Murphy said he will make a decision on the motions Wednesday when both Asst. District Atty. Laurence Hardoon and Ossinger's attorney, Thomas Troy will appear before him.

Mrs. Ossinger, who was Mann's secretary for nearly eight years until she was dismissed after a police investigation, was found guilty May 29 in Newton District Court of stealing 58 paychecks from Mann over a 44 month period. Mrs. Ossinger allegedly crossed out restrictive endorsements on the checks and cashed them at the Newton Treasurer's Office where she was supposed to deposit them in Mann's account.

Judge Murphy also took under advisement another motion by Troy asking for all checks issued by the city of Newton from 1972 to 1980.

In arguing for the motion, Troy charged that Mayor Mann may have the missing $24,000. Troy said he hopes to show that the method of crossing out restrictive endorsements was being used as far back as 1972 and into 1980.

Troy said, "I want to show a pattern to the court that this system was being employed regularly by the Mayor. And if anyone has the money, it is the Mayor."

Troy said the restrictive endorsements on the checks could have been crossed out by "Theodore Mann or someone in his behalf."

He added, "There is a strong tactical reason for having the checks."

Hardoon protested to Troy's motion for the checks.

"I suggest that the defense counsel is on a fishing expedition," Hardoon explained. "I suggest at this point,the counsel is making a bald faced accusation."

He added, "You are talking about hundreds of checks that are not relevant."

Judge Murphy also accepted motions to sequester the jury and all witnesses in the case, except for Mrs. Ossinger's son and Mother.

In addition, Judge Murphy accepted a request by Hardoon that one of the two police officers involved in the investigation be "readily available during the trial."

Judge Murphy also accepted a motion by Troy that he be given the juvenile records of all of the Commonwealth's witnesses, including Mayor Mann.

Arguing for the motion Troy said, "One part of the defense in this case is that someone else committed the crime. One of the witnesses in this case could well be that person."

He explained, "In cases such as this, the juvenile records may have some input to at least one of the witnesses." When Troy was asked by Judge Murphy if he would qive be willing to give the name of the witness who may be involved , Troy refused.

Troy said he is looking for a "conviction or juvenile finding" that may be relevant.

Mrs. Ossinger's trial before a jury of six in Middlesex Superior Court will begin on Oct 6. Troy anticipates that the trial will last seven to ten days.

Mrs, Ossinger's trial before a jury comes after both Supreme Judicial Court Judge Benjamin Kaplan and Judge Stanley Jablonski, who presided over the original trial, denied her request for a new trial before a Judge.

In arguing for Mann to take a lie detector test, Troy said, "There is no harm to Mann being asked to submit to a lie detector test. It may clear the air."

Hardoon countered, "Basically, as far as this particluar witness is concerned, his testimony is undisputed... There is no precedent in this and the risk of a mistrial is very present in a situation such as this."

Judge Murphy also indicated that there was no precedent for this, but said he would accept a memo from Troy on the matter and take it under advisement.

ELEANOR DULLES...

famous in spite of her family

By H.D. QUIGG
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK — Eleanor Lansing Dulles began life in Watertown, N.Y., in 1895 with a family of you-know-whos and has spent eight decades becoming famous on her own in spite of them.

Brother John Foster Dulles became Eisenhower's secretary of state. Brother Allen became director of the CIA. Grandpa John W. Foster was Benjamin Harrison's secretary of state. Uncle Bert Lansing was Woodrow Wilson's secretary of state.

Born into a pride of Dulleses — an overpowering family that held Sunday evening prayer meetings on the lawn with father preaching and a pet crow sitting on grandfather Foster's shoulder beside his white side-whiskers — she was of them and independent of them.

She was in the state department before John Foster became its head, and she spent 63 years ambling smartly around the globe on government missions — alternately skirmishing with male poobahism within government and absenting herself to teach economics.

Meanwhile, the honors have poured over her as distinguished diplomat, economist, author, and educator. She attained the title of "Minister" in the state department and, while running its Berlin Affairs section, she arranged the financing, helped design, and guided to its 1957 completion the west Berlin Congress Hall.

Berliners have called it "Frau Dulles' Hut" and more often "the Pregnant Oyster", from its cantilevered shell-shaped roof.

The front of that roof overhang collapsed last May, not from any Dullesian planning fault but from structural fatigue — a malady, unknown to the lady herself, who, at 85, is working on her 14th book. It's about John Foster Dulles and Dean Acheson and their work together and separately.

Book No. 13 has just been published, to enthusiastic reviews. Titled "Eleanor Lansing Dulles, Chances of a Lifetime," it is a memoir of eight decades in which "I learned many lessons — there was action and I was there."

While running the state department "Berlin desk," starting in 1952, she was charged with the reconstruction of that city, and she secured about $1 billion in funds to that end, earning the title "Mother of Berlin."

But that was only one segment of a long career. In an interview, she was reminded that as an economist she has said inflation is the worst thing that can happen, except perhaps war.

"It is! It is!", she said. "I saw the German inflation, I saw the Austrian inflation, and, of course, I studied the French inflation.

"It wrecks the middle class. It's not so hard on the very poor or the very rich. But the middle class is important to the structure of our society. Now what I hoped is that the United States has become aware of the danger, to the point of being willing to sacrifice.

"A lot of us don't want to. I mean I don't want to give up warmth, or some of my pleasures, but I'm going to have to do it. And I'm going to have to not complain.

"This is going to be a very difficult year, as I see it, a tragic one for some people. We've got to go through it, like an operation. But my hope is that we'll go through it quickly and maybe in a year or two we'll get back on a slow upward curve."

A request to comment on some of the towering world personalities she has known in a full life brought forthright replies.

Frances Perkins, President Roosevelt's secretary of labor: "She was to the New Deal what the Wright Brothers were to aviation, Now I know that's kind of exaggerated phraseology, but she was so important."

Weren't Raymond Moley and Rexford Tugwell and others of the Brains Trust of great influence?

"They didn't have a clear-cut philosophy, as far as I know. Maybe a slightly feminist feeling influences me, but Perkins had a definite line of policy. And she knew about labor and was close to the problems of the wage earner; Moley and Tugwell were more theoretical.

"Of course, I'm a bit prejudiced against some of the people around Roosevelt because I think his monetary policy went wrong in 1933. I worked in that field, you know, for a long time."

Dwight D. Eisenhower: "Very underestimated by the people who like to be critics. He had an almost quaint manner but he was astute, he was perceptive, he had a feeling for people. And, of course, I have a high regard for him because he and Foster had a genuinely good rapport.

"It is an absolute rule of political life that the secretary of state and the president must be in close harmony and complete understanding. If they're not, it's disaster. We've had a number of such diasters. We can't afford them. It's a terrible business."

John Foster Dulles: "A strong man, so strong in his convictions that he did not feel it necessary to defend himself personally. He assumed that time would take care of his enemies.

"Dean Acheson was a smart and attractive man, but he never did anything that I know of to thwart (Sen. Joseph) McCarthy. And Foster — this is a complicated thing, and I'm spending days on it for the new book — Foster did confromt McCarthy and told him to get his cotton picking fingers out of the state department."

Jawaharlal Nehru: "Instead of looking at me, he looked out the window. Finally I said to Nehru: 'If you have time to give me, I think you should listen to what I'm saying.' And he looked kind of surprised and he stopped looking out the window and he looked at me, and we had conversation.

"And I was told that I was one of the few people that he interviewed that he really listened to."

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer: "He was a great man and Germany owes an enormous debt to him, and I think Europe and the world do, because we had this fear of Germany growing out of those wars from 1870 on. Under Adenauer we had a Germany we could trust.

"I don't necessarily like the Germans more than I like a lot of other people; but we can trust the Germans. They have learned their lesson."

Chiang Kai-shek: "I went up to his palace outside of Taipei, and Mrs. Chiang was there. She jumped into the conversation before the interpreter could interpret, and said what he said in English, what presumably Chiang said. I never knew what he said, because the interpreter didn't get a chance. She had a strong, vigorous personality, as you undoubtedly know.

"He was rather charming, I'd say gentle almost, very courteous."

Herbert Hoover: "He was a very honest man, and his role as President in 1929 and 1930 has been underestimated and misconstrued. He tried to save the banks, tried to save the insurance companies. He set up the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

"I confess that at the time I was sort of against him, but that was the public attitude. As I look back as an economist and as a political scientist, I think that he had constructive ideas at a crucial time in our history. And if Roosevelt had felt that he could have have accepted some of these, I believe we could have been saved the desperate depths of depression."

Male bosses: "I was told I wouldn't be promoted, by one of my bosses, because I was a woman. And it's pretty discouraging, what happens when you get to the more mature levels of work. Then you leave.

"I don't blame men for trying to keep women out. If I was a man, maybe I would discriminate against women. Narrows the competition. Some women can be very annoying. Some men, too, but men don't have to face the fact."

'I don't blame men for trying to keep women out. If I was a man, maybe I would discriminate against women. Narrows the competition. Some women can be very annoying. Some men, too, but men don't have to face the fact.' •

Bill Cosby joins Capt. Kangaroo

By KENNETH R. CLARK

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Captain Kangaroo" is celebrating a two-fold blessing this week. He's added eminent educator, Dr. William Cosby, to his vintage children's show and he won assurances from his boss that his time slot on CBS-TV is as inviolate as Mr. Greenjeans' green jeans.

The good Dr. Cosby — better known to fans of Fat Albert and his gang as comic Bill Cosby — joined Bob Keeshan's 25-year-old television classic Monday as the funniest teacher ever to take the lectern before 25 million children in the 3-to-7 age group.

Cosby has the credentials. The "Dr." title is no joke. He holds a Ph.D. in education from the University of Massachusetts and long has said he'd rather teach than wring laughter from an audience.

In a five-minute "Picturepages" segment on "Captain Kangaroo," he'll do both five days a week.

The segment is designed to enhance the verbal and conceptual skills of the pre-school through early grade school audience that traditionally follows "Captain Kangaroo."

Cosby will use the time to teach such fundamentals as "behind" as opposed to "in front of" and "above" as opposed to "below."

Along with the show, viewers can buy a "Picturepages" illustrated booklet published by "Weekly Reader." It costs $1 per six-week issue.

The only hitch is it demands participation by parents — and it's not the first effort Keeshan has made in that direction.

"We experienced this once before and it was a disaster," he told a news conference. "We had a terrible time. We couldn't handle the distribution. But this time Xerox Corporation is doing it for us and they know how. It's geared to an older person working with a child. Otherwise, it just won't work."

And getting children and parents together — even beyond a basic education — is Keeshan's primary concern.

"The program encourages parents to spend time with their children," he said. "That's the problem in the nation today — children are a low priority item. We may have developed the only species on earth that does not know how to raise its young."

Rumors that the network's successful "Morning News" staff coveted expansion into his 8 a.m.-to-9 a.m. time slot also may have haunted Keeshan, but if they did, CBS-TV Network President Jim Rosenfield laid the ghost at the news conference.

"There is no possibility of that at all," he said. "If we expand, it will be done in a way that will not interfere with 'Captain Kangaroo.'"

Hence, the signing of Cosby.

Like any good teacher, Cosby's goal for the children he'll be instructing is graduation.

"When they wake up one morning and say, 'I can't stand the man any more,' then I'll know they've outgrown me and graduated and I'll feel very good about it," he said.

But Hugh Brannum — Keeshan's career-long sidekick as "Mr. Greenjeans" — may have summed it up best.

"After 25 years, I'm still saying it," he said. "We keep trying and trying, and one of these days we're going to get it right."

Zoo getting rid of meat eaters to trim budget

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (UPI) — The cost of putting meat on the table is going up everywhere, and Slater Park Zoo is no exception.

But it's taking an unusually drastic step to battle inflation.

When the zoo clears out its animal cages this month for a $1.2 million renovation, it will say farewell to its heartier eaters.

Larger animals, most of them ravenous meat eaters including lions, tigers, yaks, a leopard, a pair of bears and other ravenous carnivores, will all be given pink slips in an effort to trim some fat from the park's weekly food bills.

"It's basically a budgetary consideration," director Guy Dufault said Monday. "No question about it. We're talking about meat eaters, and they can be very, very expensive."

> Larger animals, most of them ravenous meat eaters including lions, tigers, yaks, a leopard, a pair of bears and other ravenous carnivores, will all be given pink slips in an effort to trim some fat from the park's weekly food bills.

When the renovated zoo opens, it will feature more monkeys, horses, goats and other mostly vegetarian animals.

Some of the bigger meat eaters have already been sold to animal farms in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

"It's very difficult to break down the food bills, but the food bill for the entire zoo is over $30,000. This will cut that by about 50 percent, although I can't be specific until I find out exactly what the zoo population will be after the renovation," Dufault said.

Dufault said he may book occasional traveling exhibits that include large cats.

He said money from the sale of animals will be used to partially finance renovation work at the zoo. But he doesn't expect large profits on the beasts.

"Lions are not expensive animals because they breed very rapidly, versus tigers and leopards," Dufault said.

One of the zoo's lions, for example, would probably earn the zoo a dollar a pound, or between $200 and $300, he said.

He wouldn't discuss the worth of the zoo's leopard or tigers, since the city is still negotiating to sell them.

Dufault said one large exception will be made in his budget-cutting efforts.

The zoo will keep its popular elephant, "Fanny."

Citizens invited to conference on tax limit plan

The Massachusetts Educational Conference Board is sponsoring a conference on Proposition 2.5 for all interested citizens on Sept. 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Park Plaza Hotel, Boston.

Co-sponsoring the $20 per person program, which includes lunch, are the League of Women Voters, Massachusetts Municipal Association, Library Association and the Massachusetts Public Research Group.

The theme, "Proposition 2.5 — Tax Relief or Chaos," will cover such subjects as how different kinds of communities are affected, what happened in California, parallels and differences, as well as long-term effects on business from cuts in service.

The morning sessions will include small group sessions on programming tax cuts by priorities. City and town representatives will be organized in groups of 10 by size of cuts, population and geography. Those who intend to participate are asked to bring local budget summaries that may be used in the workshop sessions.

The afternoon session will concentrate on what the proposition would mean to individuals, homeowners, rentors, commerical property owners, as well as beneficiaries of educational, police and fire services.

Trends in state and local expenditures, as well as prospects for state compensation for property tax losses, will be included.

Speakers will include Gregory Anrig, commissioner of education; Gerald Cohen, chairman of House Committee on Taxation; Robert McCarthy, chairman of Senate Committee on Taxation; William Herbert, executive director-treasurer of Massachusetts Teachers Association; Richard Manley, president of Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation; Charlotte Ryan, past legislative chairman of national Parent-Teacher Association; Robert Sperber, a Boston school administrator; Raymond Torto, fiscal advisor for the city of Boston, as well as other speakers to be announced.

The sea focus of fall aquarium courses

BOSTON — The New England Aquarium offers three evening adult education courses this fall on a variety of topics relating to the sea.

"Between Land and Sea" focuses on the narrow margin of land and sea, a harsh and changeable environment, where animals and plants live an often unnoticed drama of survival.

Using lectures and aquarium exhibits, students will learn the physical aspects of coastal formations and the array of adaptations that coastal organisms develop to survive predation, exposure, temperature extremes and defending territory. This course will be held, on Mondays, Sept. 29 to Dec. 1, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

"The Ocean" looks at earth's last physical frontier. Biological, physical, geologic, chemical and current information on research, pollution and energy will be discussed. This course is held for 10 weeks, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 14 through Dec. 16, from 6 to 8 p.m.

"Future Fish" teaches preparation techniques for gourmet and simple recipes using New England fish which have traditionally been underutilized including goosefish, sea ravens, squid, skates, sea urchins and mussels. This course runs six Thursdays beginning Oct. 9 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Registration and course fees are $40 for members; $47 for non-members. For more information or to enroll call: Education Department, New England Aquarium, 742-8830.

A centennial dinner will be held in October for alumnae, parents, and friends of the school. Co-Chairing this fall event are Mr. and Mrs. Hilary Smart of Weston.

A summer of caring

NEWTON — This summer Newton youth again demonstrated that they "care."

John Barnett of Newton South High, and Andrea Feingold, Michael Wing, and Peter Necheles of Newton North High, along with 18 other Greater Boston youth from the Greater Boston Amigos Chapter, joined youth from other areas of the United States as summer public health volunteers in Latin America, continuing a tradition which started in 1965 as an immunization program in Honduras and has since expanded into a public health program in six or seven different Latin American countries.

It was second time around for Necheles who again worked in a fledgling animal husbandry project in Honduras. Honduras was also the host country for Feingold who worked in a dental project and for Barnett, who, with a well-digging team, waS trying to reach potable water. Wing immunized children in the Dominican Republic.

Commitment to the Amigos program began for these young people last November when they started training three hours every week, several Saturdays and a weekend. In addition to training they participated in fundraising events with their families and the chapter leaders.

Several Newton adults and institutions helped the chapter. Thomas Necheles volunteered time as a cotraining director and Mrs. Necheles helped as a Spanish teacher and put on a Spanish fundraising supper. Dr. & Mrs. G. Octo Barnett and Wing directed the walkathon and Paul Etkind helped with the grapefruit sale. The Eliot Church offered its building for the Saturday training sessions, and the Second Congregational Church in Newton contributed to the fundraising.

The Greater Boston Chapter, located at the Payson Park Church in Belmont will start training volunteers for Summer '81 in November. An information meeting for young peopl-e interested in applying for training, and their parents will be held at the Payson Park Church, Wednesday, Sept. 17, at 7:30 p.m. Anyone interested in attending, please call Mrs. Kipkin, 272-1170.

First Unitarian Society's autumn religious education program opens

NEWTON — Registration for preschoolers (age 3 and up) through 10th graders has begun for enrollment in the Autumn 1980 Religious Education Program of The First Unitarian Society in Newton.

All parents and children interested in the program are invited to attend a special kick-off program and open house to be held on Sunday, Sept. 14 at 10:30 a.m. in the Parish Hall of the church at 1326 Washington St., West Newton square.

Larry Peers, Religious Education Coordinator, as well as members of the Religious Education Committee, wii will be on hand to answer questions and to register students for classes which begin on Sunday, Sept. 21 and are held weekly on Sundays from 10:30 a.m.-12 noon.

Parents interested in attending the 10:30 a.m. Sunday Service (held in the Sanctuary), which on Sept. 14 features a sermon by the church's Minister, the Rev. Dr. Gerald Krick, entitled "The Hazards of Being Male," are encouraged to come early to register their children.

A well-equipped Nursery (for supervision of infants to 3 year olds) is available from 9:30-12 noon to parents of the very young who wish to attend the Service.

Mr. Peers, in announcing the opening of the program, stresses the uniqueness of the Unitarian Universalist Religious Education. He says "The whole thrust of the program is to help each child value him or herself, and to develop his or her own set of beliefs. No dogma is taught. The children are exposed to the beliefs of the major world religiou religions, with an emphasis on the Judeo-Christian heritage."

The program is developed utilizing curicula prepared by the Unitarian Universalist Association. It is taught by members of the Society under the direction of Mr. Peers.

For further information contact Larry Peers at the church office, 527-3203.

W.Newton Library transfer tied into City Hall congestion

NEWTON-Concerns over the transfer of the West Newton Library to the Davis School facility bogged down the Aldermanic Public Facilities Committee's attempts to approve money to relieve severe congestion in Newton City Hall.

The City of Newton is currently in the final stages of negotiating the sale of the Davis School building to the Newton Community Service Centers Inc. As part of the agreement, the city wants to retain use of the school's gymnasium, and approximately 3,000 square feet of space on the second floor. The city's Executive Dept. and the Library Dept. would also like to use the school's facility to house the West Newton library.

Committee chairman Dick McGrath expressed concern over whether or not the residents of West Newton were made aware of the intention to relocate the library in the Davis building. There was also concern voiced as to whether or not holding off the approval of the library transfer would also endanger the process of selling Davis to NCSC.

Meanwhile, James Hickey, the Executive aide to Mayor Mann, detailed to the committee a situation in City Hall where severe overcrowding of office space was causing inefficiency in city operations. The Public Facilities Committee eventually approved $21,000 for the purpose of transferring some of the city hall offices to the Davis facility upon the Board of Aldermen's okay and the consummation of the sale to NCSC. A public hearing will be held at the Davis School facility to garner public input about the library closing. The Davis School facilities would be provided for as long as the city wished, with no charge for rent.

The only cost to the city would be a pro rated utility and custodial fee based on the square footage of city occupied space. Virginia Tashijian, the director of the Library, said that the Library's Trustees believed the move to the Davis School would provide library services for more people. The old West Newton library building would be given back to the city for sale at a later time.

Barry Canner, Planning Dept. head said that the West Newton library "is in an atrocious position to attract business." Tashijian said the move would be to a more attractive and accessible location.

Ald. McGrath wondered if the committee was "predetermining the needs of the community and neglecting to get their input."

Ald. Paul Coletti was against the move saying, "There's a major problem with parking at the Davis School."

As Hickey reminded the committee, "We have a serious and immediate situation with space in city hall," Ald. Joseph DePasquale wanted to hold the entire appropriation until the referendum on Proposition Two and a half was held on Nov. 4.

DePasquale was concerned about expansion of offices when Prop. Two and a half could force the city to make major cutbacks.

One thing is clear to James Hickey, city personnel are still forced to work in the basement of city hall because of the crowded situation.

For Chef Peggy Glass the motto is: Today Auburndale, tomorrow the world

AUBURNDALE — The Newton community is composed of a multitude of talented citizens.

Chef Peggy Glass of Auburndale is one such resident whose talent and creativity are now being recognized throughout the country.

Mrs. Glass recently won a prestigious cooking scholarship contest offered by Madeling Kamman, lately of the Modern Gourmet Elite Cooking School and restaurant of the same name. M. Kamman now resides in Annecy, France, where she operates a school similar to the one she had while living here.

The scholarship provides for a week in Annecy, where Peggy will participate in a seminar for food editors from the United States.

The award proceedings sound mouth-watering indeed: tastings of rare French foods and local wines, restaurant dinners, visits to dairies and liquor factories in the Alps and a boat picnic. As part of the scholarship prg program, M. Kamman will give three cooking demonstrations, followed by dinner, at her school.

How did one of Newton's own come to such a happy prominence in the world of professional cooks and chefs?

Mrs. Glass' interest in food preparation began in San Francisco.

She and her husband, psychiatrist Leonard Glass, lived in San Francisco from 1972-1976. Working as a graphic artist at the time, she was also raising her son, Adam. The situation was perfect for expanding her perceptions about the mystique of cooking. Often accompanied by Adam, Mrs. Glass began to sample the delights of living in San Francisco.

Its ethnicity, which is reflected in its marketplaces, neighborhoods, and restaurants, stimulated her interest in food and its food and its preparation. The family found that they entertained more and enjoyed it immensely.

She began to incorporate unusual ingredients and spices in recipes; she became intrigued with Moroccan cooking.

Today, in fact, her offerings reflect an admixture of French, Moroccan, and Italian cuisine. While in San Francisco, she began to write a cookbook which was geared toward making adult food, as opposed to cottage cheese clowns, with your chl children.

The idea was to encourage and instruct them in developing manipulative skills used to prepare foods. These skills she practiced with her son, who learned to enjoy many foods which one wouldn't necessarily expect a youngster to like.

Although unpublished, the central idea of the cookbook was the importance of combining creativity with the necessary technique for developing style and success in the kitchen.

Peggy Glass

When Peggy Glass speaks of technique, it is clear that she means "French technique," the training she received from M. Kamman at the Elite Cooking School. She notes, "Knowing the proper technique means when something goes wrong, you can always correct it."

Few of us who've spent time laboring over a particular dish would deny the importance of knowing what to do when the custard separates, or when the sauce is too salty or too vinegary.

The Glass family moved to Newton in 1976, embarking on a new kind of experience. All the usual adjustments had to be made, and then some. Mrs. Glass recalls that just seeing the lack of variety at the local produce counters initially dismayed her. She began to seek out the places in our area which provide a small measure of ethnic flavor.

She also began to explore the Auburndale community for activities in which she could participate, and shortly thereafter she spied a poster about Newton Community Schools in the local market.

Mrs. Glass emphatically states that since her first introduction to Community Schools, it has been a "marvelous concept," providing "moderately priced, community-based classes for adults and children."

Community Schools offered a good opportunity to become involved in the neighborhood and to feel "at home" here.

The association has been a fulfilling one on all sides. Laurie Swett, the coordinator of the Auburndale Community School, worked with Mrs. Glass to initiate some cooking classes. The two of them came up with some novel ideas, and it was then that Mrs. Glass' cooking-teaching career actually began.

Her first class featured basic cooking for parents and children. Glass and Swett came up with the clever series of classes for Warren Jr. High students, "Sandwiches Around the World." That in turn, grew into a breadbaking course for these teenagers, which gave them a chance to see the methods used for both yeast and quick breads. Mrs. Glass ran classes during vacation periods for youngsters of all ages. At that time, these opportunities to work in the kitchen were not so widely available to children. Due in large part to her success, there are now cooking programs offered throughout the Newton Community Schools.

As Mrs. Glass' local following grew, it became clear that she would expand her endeavors in terms of both her personal goals and her participation in Community Schools.

The very successful "Magic Rabbit," a combination catering service-cooking school, was born out of an idea she had after attending an auction of services at her school. She anticipated, and rightly so, that people would enjoy having a Sunday brunch deivered, complete with wine and The New York Times, on special occasions.

Having acquired the confidence to start a small business, she had further expertise to present more specialized lessons through Community Schools.

Classes on "Tarts and Quiches," "Unusual and Delicious Hors d'Oeuvres," "Moroccan Specialties," and "French Desserts" were filled this past spring.

Mrs. Glass' commitment to this type of teaching continues, and she doesn't hesitate to enumerate the rewards she received from her association with Community Schools: "knowledge, and confidence in preparation."

These rewards became the assets Peggy needed in order to develop her repertoire and give her the impetus to enter the scholarship competition. Anyone familiar with M. Kamman's reputation is aware that the standards were rigorous. The contest was limited to women between ages 25 and 40 who had taught for two years, either "at home, in their own location, or in adult education."

Anyone connected to a cookware store was not eligible.

One condition which Mrs. Glass describes as being "typical of Madeline's philosophy" was that a woman must have at least one child, the idea being that she would thus have to work extra hard to maintain her identity in the fact of pursuing a career. Contestants were asked to submit a recipe for summer fare, and a short autobiographical sketch. Judges attributed 50 percent to each part.

As one of the two winners, she is eagerly anticipating her odyssey in France. Her dining table is covered with books, travel guides, and past issues of "Gourmet" magazine. She also intends to sketch and draw while in Annecy, and also during a side trip to Burgundy. There she will tour the narkets with an eye toward their local specialties. Her intention to "make the most of every minute" is a habit, no doubt, that Peggy Glass has been nurturing during her years as a teacher.

Thankfully, we in Newton, will benefit from her good fortune, since she will be using some of the knowledge she acquires in France in her newest Community School offerings this fall. She revealed, in a sneak preview, that she would like to present a course on provincial French cooking, coupled with an exploration of regional French wines, durig during the Spring '81 term. This fall, she is committed on Tuesday nights to offer "the Sunday Gourmet Brunch with the Magic Rabbit," a course which promises all the best that she can muster.

The entire city, especially her associates in Newton Community Schools, congratulate her on her award. We can all look forward to "feasting on her good fortune." For more information on Peggy Glass' cooking program or any of the other upcoming Community Schools activities call 552-7118.

It will be Reagan vs. Anderson

Ronald Reagan is "sorry and angry." President Carter is adamant. John Anderson says it's all the fault of Carter aides.

The upshot: There will be a debate between Reagan and Anderson Sept. 21 in Baltimore, sponsored by the League of Women Voters. An empty chair will symbolize Carter's refusal to participate.

An unsuccessful final effort was made Wednesday to find a format all three candidates could embrace. When the meeting broke up, Reagan and Anderson had accepted the invitation; Carter had formally rejected it.

"I am sorry and I am angry and the American people also will be," said Reagan.

"Let the American people see who is willing to discuss the grave issues that confront our nation," he said, "and let them note whose chair will be empty."

Later, Reagan added, "I think Teddy Kennedy was right — you can't blast him out of the Rose Garden."

Carter said: "My position has been clear. It's consistent and I do not intend to change it ... We still are eager to have as many debates as we can schedule between myself and Governor Reagan first and then to debate Governor Reagan, Congressman Anderson and any others that the sponsors of the debate might bring together."

ABC News asked Democratic and Republican state chairmen whether they think Carter will be hurt by his debate decision. Of the Democrats, 28 thought he would be hurt, 16 thought he would not and seven had no opinion. Forty-seven of the Republican chairmen thought he would be hurt.

Arrows return solid corps

By ERNIE JONES
Sports Writer

Quantity and quality are two questions facing Head Football Coach Bob Souza of St. Sebastian's School of Newton.

Like a few other Independent School League squads, the Arrows have a small lean group of prospective gridders. Twenty players have reported so far.

Souza hopes that the squad will steer clear of injuries. "If we can stay healthy we'll be very competitive," he said.

On the quality side of the ledger, St. Sebastian's can boast a strong nucleus of returning veterans. Heading the list is quarterback Joe Lawler of Wellesley. Two seasons ago he started at the postion but last season he injured his throwing arm and moved to defensive back.

Senior captain Joe Vanesian is a three-year starter and was a second team All-Independent League linebacker last season. The Newton resident anchors the Arrow defense at middle linebacker and is a guard on offense. Vanesian and Lawler were described by Souza as "tremendous performers."

Senior Tom Foley was a second team All-League tight end. This year Souza has moved the South Boston native to a running back slot. and will play end on defense.

Two returning junior starters are John McFarland of Watertown and Guy Rossi of Hyde Park. McFarland started at guard in the latter part of last season and will play tackle this year. Rossi is switching from center to guard. Transfer student Jeff Simpson of Watertown will play tight end.

Junior Chris Kennedy will return at outside linebacker. "We think he's one of the better players on defense in the league," Souza said.

Dan Murphy of Newton will be a wide receiver and Ned Fortin of Winchester is at fullback. Fortin pranced for a 60-yard touchdown run in the team's first scrimmage against Arlington Catholic on Saturday.

With only three days of practice under their belts the Arrows fought Arlington Catholic to a tie, one six-pointer each. Souza said, "I was very happy with the defense. It's been our strong point here for the past two seasons."

Two of Souza's strategies to compensate for his lack of depth include stressing conditioning and training each player for at least two positions in case they are needed to fill in. "We're short on numbers but we have some good athletes," Souza said.

"If we can pick up a couple of wins and get some momentum going we'll be in better shape for our tough games at the end of the season," Souza added.

The Arrows will open on Sept. 27 against Gov. Dummer Academy.

NewtonSouth gridsters 'surprise' to Kojoyian

Inexperience will plague the Newton South Lions at times during the regular season, but at present, Head Coach Art Kojoyian is both "pleased and surprised" with the way his gridders are performing.

"We've progressed a lot better than we had anticipated," commented Kojoyian. "We're still green, but evidently we're adapting very well and adjusting to situations accordingly."

The Lions have just three returning lettermen this season, and only Capt.Michael Kasten back on defense. "Yet, we're coming along," said the veteran coach. "The four weeks of preparation rather than the usual three has been very beneficial to us. When we're teaching the kids, this slower pace helps quite a bit."

Kojoyian went on to name his secondary as the most pleasing aspect of the Lion defense during the early workouts. Anchoring the back-liners is all-league Kasten, but his complement of defensive backs are fresh and untested. The threesome of David Hill, John Bovarnick and Steve Mosca totaled between them only 10 minutes of playing time a year ago.

Three other defensemen whom Kojoyian mentioned as doing a "nice job" against Foxboro were Dennis Murphy at end, linebacker Peter Alexander, and senior defensive lineman Carl Shishmanian.

Offensively, Kojoyian has a bit more to work with, but not much; Kaston, an end last season is at tailback, Shishmanian returns as center, and Mike Podufaly will again be at halfback. Otherwise, the Lions are "green."

At the helm, junior Jon Greenberg has emerged as the club's number one quarterback and according to his coach, "has done a nice job." "Our offense has done a pretty good job at moving the ball," said Kojoyian. "And again, the experience of those boys on the offensive line is minimal." The coach signaled out tackles Rich DeRosa and Ben Porter as well as nose guard Bob Baker as performing admirably.

Newton South confronts Hudson this Saturday in the squad's final outside scrimmage and will travel to Littleton on Sept. 21 to open its regular season.

Newton Pats bow to Methuen, 13-6

Despite dominating the game on both offense and defense, the Newton Patriots had two lapses on the first play of both halves and fell to Methuen, 13-6, in a Pop Warner League pre-season contest Saturday at Albemarle Field.

Methuen scored on the opening play of the first half with a 60-yard run and on the second half's first play crossed the line with a 50-yard pass play to take the contest.

Except for those two plays,the Patriots dominated the contest with superior defense and ball control on offense. Newton managed to tie the contest in the second quarter on a 10-yard run by Tom Dalicandro up the middle which topped off an 80-yard march.

Patriot Coach Fred Dalicandro said, "I was very impressed with our defense and we'll work this week to improve our passing game."

Newton had the most success offensively with runs up the middle. David Russell switched from his line position to halfback and "looked good in spots," Coach Dalicandro said."I know Russell will improve with more experience on outside running," Dalicandro added.

Other top performers on offense included left guard Pat Anese, center Pat Corrigan and tackle Mike MacKay. Russ Halloran connected on three passes to end Richie Claflin to help spark the Patriot offense.

The Newton defense held Methuen to only two first downs. Standouts for the Patriots included linemen Bob MacDougall, Halloran, Bob Mulvaney and Cliff York as well as a linebackers Jim Niccolazzo and Kevin McGrath.

The B team battled to a 0-0 tie and the C squad won its contest, 19-0, on the strength of fine performances from halfback Tom Casey, quaterback Guy Clemente and halfback Tony Philopone.

Anyone wishing to participate in the Newton Pop Warner Football Intra-City League can sign up this week.

Prospective players should contact Fred Dalicandro any weekday night at Albemarle Field or at 332-6286. The Intra-City League will include ages 7,8,9, and 10. Players wishing to participate in the A, B, or C programs can still try out until Saturday when the offical weigh-in is scheduled.

Tigers anxiously awaiting opener

By JONATHAN GREENSPAN
Staff Writer

The parts are not yet fully interwoven, but the wheels are beginning to churn somewhat smoother for the Newton North Tigers as they march into their final week of pre-season play.

Leading the Tiger blitz is junior quarterback Bob Billings who again threw well in Saturday's scrimmage against Natick High. Newton North Coach Norm Walker signaled out Billies and his talented corps of wide receivers as the most pleasing parts of the relatively inexperienced Tiger offense.

Heading the list of able receivers is Paul Howley, whom Walker calls the most consistent pass catcher on the club, Armando Prioa at split end and brother Mario at tight end.

We learned some good things this Saturday," commented Walker. "We let this scrimmage be the kids' and we got pushed around somewhat at the start, but then we straightened up. Last week we emphasized hitting, this week, we just let them be."

Mentioned in the same breath with Billings by Walker were Al Fortune, who gained close to 100 yards on the day, center Steve Gilson and right guard John Davis. "Both Gilson and Davis looked very good," said Walker, "and Gilson is improving each day."

After the initial Redmen score, the Tiger defense held Natick's first squad scoreless. Leading the corps were defensive end Chuck Pepper, middle-guard Tom Wasson, and tackles Norm Walker and Danny Blake.

"Our major problem at the moment is our injuries," said a concerned Walker. "Once we get over our bumps and brusies, we should tighten up quite a bit."

Two defensive players who need to be healthy if the Tigers are to play up to par are linebacker Guy DiMambro and safety Bob Kenney. DiMambro suited-up for Saturday's contest but was far from his capabilities according to his coach. Kenney has yet to scrimmage and is listed as questionable for this Saturday's exhibition game. The captain broke his wrist in a summer accident.

Junior Varsity gridders who stood out against Natick's second team were quarterback Tim Brandon, Dan Reily, Dean Moneale and Ed Natilie.

Newton North practices with Burlington this Wednesday at Newton and will conclude the pre-season September 13 against the Watertown Red Raiders. "Against Watertown, we'll go with our starters for the majority of the contest," said Walker.

Everything is new at Rivers

By ERNIE JONES
Sports Writer

NEW is the word in football at Rivers School of Weston...a new coach, a new system and a crop of new young players.

Head Coach Pete Capodilupo has his work cut out with only one returning starter and trying to implement a two-platoon system.

"Last year Rivers had a veteran squad with players going two ways," Capodilupo said.

He added, "We'll use the two-platoon system as much as we can. Its good for the program and gets more kids involved."

Capodilupo was an assistant coach at Newton North. "At Newton we had more depth, here at Rivers with fewer players, I'm more conscious of injuries," he said.

Thirty players have reported so far with a number of freshmen expected to join the squad when school opens. With only a week of practice, Capodilupo is impressed with what he has seen so far.

"The team is very young, very positive, and very intense," he said, "We achieved our goal for the first week."

Capodilupo didn't waste time with lengthy introductions to his new squad. He started with a physical fitness test on the first practice which included sprints, a half-mile run and pull-ups. In order to measure the club's progress, Capodilupo administered the same test at the end of the first week of practice and compared the scores. The team accomplished the first goal he set of hard work and progress.

"Even some of the bigger kids managed to improve and raise their scores." he said.

With only a week under his belt at the helm, Capodilupo has not made a his final choice of starters. Some of the talent he has to choose from includes junior linebacker Lew Franchi, Ken Fox and Jamie Carlin.

Fox is a transfer student from Texas and Jamie Carlin of Natick is the team's captain. "Carlin is one of the best captains I've seen, a leader and a big plus for us," Capodilupo said.

One of the few returning starters is John Sims of Sudbury. Sims is only 15 years old and started at tight end last season. "We nave to get the ball to him, its hard to remember he's only 15 because he handles himself so well," Capodilupo said.

Capodilupo along with his assistants Mark Kelly and Jim Navoni have been puuting in long hours in preparation for the Redmen's opener away against Thayer Academy on Sept. 27.

The head coach's priorities are to "to build a defense first, the kicking game second and offense third." He added, "If we can hang close we might be able to snatch something away at the end."

Other players the new head coach has noted as progressing nicely include running back Peter Sweeney, Dave Watring, John Flahive and John Carlin. At quarterback, senior Dave Toussiant and junior Jeff Wynne are battling for the starting honors.

CAR Talk

by John Borelli

Although not applicable to air-cooled engines, it is helpful to know that placing cardboard in front of the radiator in an automobile in an effort to speed warmup or get more heat from the heater went out with the old Model A. The thermostut, generally located just below the upper radiator hose, restricts circulation until the coolant warms up to between 180 and 200 degrees. It then opens to permit coolant to circulate and dissipate excess heat. Today's radiators are sized for the engine to be cooled and blocking part of the core with cardboard will only cause the coolant to boil and overheat.

At NEWTON CAR RADIO, 873 Walnut St., Newton Centre, we offer a great solution to the driver who tends to "boil and overheat". Discover the soothing effect of the sound of stereo within your car as you wind your way through traffic, the wonderful way the melodious tones soothe the emotions and frustrations of bumper to bumper traffic. If you currently have an inoperable unit, we can repair that for you also. Come in today and drive to a "different tune" tomorrow. Open 9-5:30 Mon.-Sat. Tel. 332-2487. American Express, M.C. and VISA accepted.

AUTO TIP:
The radiator thermostat, in cars so equipped, should generally not be changed seasonally for summer and winter driving.

Backfield spark NAA Lions

The strong backfield combination of Darrell Huffman and Derek Harrell combined for five touchdowns to give the NAA Lions a 39-7 triumph over East Lynn in a pre-season Pop Warner Football League game Sunday at Newton Highlands Field.

Huffman crossed the goal line three times in the contest on an eight- yard run, a 17 yard-run and a 53-yard pass play. Huffman is 13-years old and scored all three touchdowns in the first half. Harrell scored on a one-yard plunge and a 17-yard effort on a pass.

Greg Weltz quarterbacked the winning effort and he completed six of eight passes in the contest. Steve Altman handled the point-after kicking and put three through the uprights.

Robbie Reiski was another outstanding performer on offense. Reiskin is a fullback who Offensive Backfield Coach Larry Clarke calls the "work horse of the offense."

All toll, the Lions racked up 250 yards on the ground and 150 in the air. On defense, tackles Tom Rodgers and Steve Anthony both turned in yeoman performances with each one in on many tackles as well as anchoring the offensive line. Huffman played at cornerback on defense and chipped in with an interception.

Lion Head Coach Nick Pasquarosa said, "I thought we might get caught in this game. We threw a lot at the squad over the past four days."

The Lions balanced offense found a lot of success with runs off tackle.

The B team won its game, 13-6

The Lions will host Arlington on Saturday at Newton Highlands.

Newton run to benefit Anderson's campaign

NEWTON — First John Anderson announced he's running for president. Now his supporters are running for Anderson.

A benefit run for the Independent candidate will be held Sunday, Sept. 21, in Newton. The start time is 1 p.m. Two routes, for 5-kilometer and 10-kilometer runs, start and finish at Newton City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave.

The "Run for Anderson" is sponsored by the National Unity Campaign for John Anderson, and has received approval from the New England Amateur Athletic Union.

Entries will be accepted until noon the day of the race, but early entry is encouraged. The entry fee through Sept. 14 is $3, and the fee after that date is $5. Entry forms are available from the National Unity Campaign for John Ason, 100 Boylston Street, Boston, or by calling 451-1992.

Awards will be given in a variety of categories. A special, limited edition T-shirt featuring art by Susan Bonacci has been designed for the occasion, and is being sold both in advance and at the "Run for Anderson."

Non-runners interested in helping can sponsor a runner, provide refreshments, or assist the organizers.

The proceeds from the run and T-Shirt sales go to John Anderson's campaign fund. Unlike Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, each of whom receives nearly $30 million in federal aid, John Anderson must raise all of his campaign funding from individuals and from such benefits as the "Run for Anderson." Entry fees, T-shirt purchases, and contributions to the run are all eligible for the political contribution tax deduction.

The route for the 5k run is: west on Commonwealth, south on Chestnut, east on Beacon, and north on Walnut. The 10k route is: west on Commonwealth, southwest on Washington, east on Beacon, and north on Walnut:

A guardian or a conservator

By PETER HARRINGTON

When Grandpa gets too old to handle his own "business affairs," when he can't keep an accurate checkbook balance and when he misplaces his money and dividend checks, what do you do?

In Massachusetts, there are two choices. The first is to have a person appointed guardian, claiming Grandpa is a mental incompetent. The second is to ask that a conservator be appointed to manage his financial affairs.

Unless there is a real problem concerning his mental capacity, the appointment of a guardian is not the preferred way to handle Grandpa's problems.

A guardian would have very broad powers over the person and affairs of Grandpa and the courts are quided by strict rules to protect him. Massachusetts law allows the appointment of a guardian only for minors, mentally ill and mentally retarded persons and spendthrifts. The person for whom a guardian is appointed is called a ward. The law requires that before the appointment, a hearing be held, evidence be presented and the ward given an opportunity to object.

On the other hand, the law recognizes that many older persons need help with the management of their affairs and Chapter 201 of the Massachusetts General Laws provides that a conservator may be appointed to handle the finances for a person who is "is unable to properly care for his property" because of advanced age, physical incapacity or mental weakness. Under this provision the ward can assent to the appointment of the conservator.

The powers and duties of a conservator are more limited than those of a guardian because the conservator does not have custody over the person. The conservator is limited to the management of the estate of the ward.

Another distinguishing feature of a conservatorship is that the ward is not declared legally incompetent.

A conservator, of course, is bound by the same strict rules that apply to all fiduciaries, and is personally responsible to honestly and intelligently handle the ward's estate.

They may not use the ward's money for their own purposes or lend it out to various friends. They must file reports each year showing the income that they have received and the expenditures they have made.

Peter Harrington is a Newton attorney.

Jews on alert during holidays

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israelis ushered in the Jewish New Year of 5741 Wednesday and police urged vigilance for the long holiday weekend after a bomb explosion injured a young Arab worker.

The nations' 3.2 million Jews prepared for Rosh Hashana with a frenzied rush to supermarkets and a dash home or to resorts for the two-day holiday. All buses stopped running at sundown, the start of the new year, and stores were tightly shut by mid-afternoon.

There were special round ritual chalah loaves to symbolize the globe and the cycles of the year, apples to dip in honey for a year that is good and sweet. Sales of carp, the basic ingredient of gefilte fish, were reported up 250 percent.

Israel Radio said a young Arab factory worker from the Ramallah area in the occupied West Bank was seriously injured when a device he was handling exploded on the roof of a textile factory building in the largely religious Tel Aviv suburb of B'nai Brak.

Newton seeks end to stall of golf club

NEWTON — The city will file a motion for a "speedy trial" within the next two weeks in an attempt to promptly settle the Chestnut Hill golf course appeal, which has prevented the city from acquiring the club.

Fred Dorr of Kenrick Street, along with other residents of the neighborhood, have filed a suit in Middlesex District Court to prevent the sale of the golf course to the city.

The city had made plans to purchase more than 71 acres of the Chestnut Hill golf club remaining after the construction of 42 townhouses on Algonquin Road and Kenrick Streets. Dorr has charged that the deal is unfair to residents of the neighborhood, protesting the construction of the townhouses in an area originally zoned for single family housing and a betterment assessment on direct abutters of the property.

The Newton Commonwealth Improvement Corp., a group of area residents, bought the club with a down payment at an auction in April and formed a non-profit corporation to sell ten acres of the land to Barkan properties for the townhouses. The group intended to sell the remaining land to the city to operate it as a public golf course.

City officals argue that the suit is nothing more than a "stalling tactic" in the hope the project will be abandoned.

However, Dorr claims that the city has not responded to the concerns of area-residents. City Atty. Michael Peirce, who is handling the case, disagrees.

"This matter has been a public record," he said. "People had substantial opportunities to have their views heard." Peirce said the city hopes the case will be heard in late October or early November so construction of the townhouses can begin this spring.

He said, "It is important that we get some quality housing there. It is the housing which is enabling the city to buy the land." Peirce added, "We really need the tax revenues from this development."

To market

The Newton Farmers' Market sponsored by the Recreation Department is open every Tuesday from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the back parking lot of City Hall next to the War Memorial. One of several farmers participating are Erin Ducey and T.J. Pugliese of Lookout Farm & Nursery in Natick.

Outreach worker okayed for elderly

NEWTON-The Board of Alderman's Finance and Human Services committees recommended to the Board of Aldermen on Monday night that a request for a transfer of one Youth Outreach worker position be made to create a post for one Elderly Outreach worker.

The Board approved the committee's recommendations.

The Youth Outreach workers are part of the Newton Streetworker program. The program draws on funds from both federal and city sources.

Director of Human Services, Howard Lipton told the committee that only two out of the three city-funded positions are currently filled. The other two workers are funded through June of 1981 by a federal Community Development grant.

Newton considers challenge of census

NEWTON — Threatened with the loss of federal aid, the city is considering challenging federal census figures in a court suit.

The city recently met with the Census Bureau's Regional Office in Framingham to review its preliminary 1980 figures which peg the city's population at 83,800. City Economic Development Director Sterling Hale said Friday that the most recent city figures indicate the tally should be about 85,000.

The Census Bureau is standing by their figures despite an appeal by city officials. As a result, the city is considering joining a law suit which may be filed by Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill.

The federal census count is important to the city because the amount of money each community receives from most federal and state programs is tied to its population. In addition, the city has to live with the most recent federal census figures for 10 years until the next census.

Hale said it is impossible to estimate exactly how much federal aid the city could lose as a result of the low tally. Hale explained, "The population figures are very important in a lot of federal allocation of grant money. We do know the lower the population, the lower funds tend to be available."

Hale said the city is keeping in touch with O'Neill's office to see if a suit will be filed to challenge the figures. Hale said the city would definitely consider joining in litigation to challenge the figures.

Hale added, "We are trying to see what avenues are open to us. We are not satisfied and we are going to do everything we can to challenge the figures."

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Nothing is FOREVER . . .most people forget that when buying a home . . . and become painfully aware of it when selling. Sure, it's your home and that place where you can "do your own thing" but someday you'll move. Most people do every 5-8 years. When decorating or making improvements keep in mind that somebody else will someday have to either love it or discount the price enough to change it. — David Wluka, Realtor

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT

Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".

There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breathtaking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.

Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.

This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.

You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.

Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

Ticketron chief loves rock'n roll

"The rock generation has been a disappointment to some, but it's the greatest generation in history as far as I'm concerned," says William J. Schmitt, president of Ticketron, the giant computerized ticket-selling system with more than 800 outlets. "If one source had to be named in Ticketron's rise to success, it's the kids who love rock music concerts."

In 1979, Ticketron — part of Control Data Corp. — sold 35 million tickets to concerts, ballgames, plays, museums and campsites. "We held our own, in spite of the recession," says Schmitt. "People wait during recessions to spend large amounts of money, but they still want to be entertained."

Schmitt says the company's success is due to young people who were "willing to try something new. People have gone to the box office for 2,000 years, and the idea of obtaining tickets any other way was hard for older people to accept. Kids had grown up with automation. Now, as they grow older, they continue to use the service for sports events and plays."

The advantage of computerized ticket-buying is that it takes away the ticket-sellers' discretion to award good or poor seats to hapless buyers; one doesn't have to be a friend to get good seats, since a computer has no friends. Also, Ticketron's service fee (usually 75 cents) is often less than the cost of traveling to the box office.

"We still sell tickets to dress the house," says Schmitt, referring to the spread in seating that enhances the accoustics and morale of performers. "Selling tickets used to be a specialized tradition, and a good box-office man pulled a ticket here, there. But that took years of experience." Now the computer spreads the audience — as anyone who's been seated alone high in the corner of a near-empty stadium can testify.

"We can straighten out almost everything," adds Schmitt, "except for one thing: We can't help a bad team." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

State version passes, 13-10

Rte. 9-Eliot St. plan approved

By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON-The Board of Aldermen Monday night approved the state plan for modifications of the Route 9- Eliot Street intersection by a 13 to 10 vote. The vote followed debate centering on whether or not the Purity Supreme supermarket in the area would be forced to close by the changes.

Alderman Mark White told the board "There is no indication that the Purity Supreme plan or the State plan will affect the amount of traffic coming into Purity Supreme."

White, who serves as chairman of the Public Safety and Transportation Committee, cited a study done recently that estimated 55,000 vehicles travel Route 9 in a single day. He said a driveway signal such as Purity Supreme had been requesting would cause back-ups on Route 9.

White also told the board the state does not allow an unsignalized driveway to feed into a signalized intersection.

Alderman Paul Daley said neither the state or the Purity Supreme plan has been proven to him to be safer than the other.

Daley said there are a number of flaws in the state plan and it is "far more dangerous than it is now." Daley had been concerned about the safety of a signalized left turn onto Eliot Street.

Ald. Robert Tennant warned of the potential impact upon the supermarket by saying, "It's a very serious thing for people to have a place nearby where they can shop."

Ald. Rodney Barker responded to Tennant's implication that the board was anti-business by calling the Ward Three alderman's speech "pure demagogery."

The majority of aldermen spoke in favor of the state plan. Ald. Donald Budge predicted that Purity's business would actually grow if people had a safer way to make a left turn to the supermarket.

A move was made to recommit the motion to committee. Board president Mathew Jefferson reminded the aldermen "We are perfectly in our rights to reject this and make other recommendations."

But Ald. White called the recommittal move a "delaying tactic" and reminded the board "We are all dealing in speculation...neither plan will cause the closing of a supermarket."

Evidence presented to the board that claimed the area to be one of the worst accident areas in the state prompted most of the board members to approve the state plan and not send it back to committee. Ald. Susan Schur said she has been working with neighbors for five years to affect changes in the intersection.

A petition with over 100 names had been presented to the board that protested the plan. The petition had been placed in the Purity Supreme store by manager Al McChesney who said "This issue is important to the elderly. They call it their own little market."

If the board had not approved the state's plan the changes may have been made by the state anyway with state rather than federal funds.

Dorchester swimmer waiting

BOSTON (UPI) — Karen Hartley, a 23-year-old long-distance swimmer from Boston's Dorchester section, plans to wait in England at least until Sept. 17 to start her 20-mile swim across the English Channel.

Hartley said Tuesday she is awaiting a tide "when the currents aren't running strong."

BOSTON (UPI) — Per capita income in Massachusetts during 1979 was $120.17 above the national average, according to revised estimates released by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Economics Analysis. The average national per capita income was $8,773.

Massachusetts' figure of $8,893.17 was in the middle nationally. Alaska had the highest figure — $11,219 — and Mississippi had the lowest, with $6,178.

Cohen law streamlines insurance coverage

BOSTON — Legislation co-sponsored by State Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) which provides for a more efficient and less costly manner of defending personal injury claims against school departments has been enacted into law.

The bill makes clear that it is a municipality's duty both to defend these claims and to purchase liability insurance for all agencies of that city or town including the school department. Prior to the enactment of this law, in many communities both the local school committee and local municipalities held liability insurance policies covering personal injury in suits against local school departments.

Cohen said, "Under this bill, a school department and its employees will retain the same extent of coverage, but the costly duplication of coverage will be avoided. This bill saves money in two ways. To begin, only one insurance pool policy need now be purchased. Secondly, since it is the municipality which is now defending against the claims, in-house counsel who are already employed by the city or town will provide the leag legal assistance. Local school committees will not be compelled to hire expensive outside counsel."

ACLU appeal to restore mandatory busing denied

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Supreme Court has refused an American Civil Liberties Union appeal to restore 20 schools to the mandatory busing portion of the Los Angeles desegregation plan.

The state high court rejected the ACLU request in a one sentence order: "Petition for a writ of mandate and-or other relief denied."

It was the second time in a month that the state Supreme Court refused to get involved in the controversy over integration of the nation's second largest school district.

The plan going into effect at next Tuesday's start of the fall semesterenvisions the busing of about 80,000 pupils in the first through ninth grades at about 165 schools.

Broad Street in Bridgetown will give you a fine selection. You can also purchase native crafts from African huts in Pelican Village near Bridgetown Harbor. If you are a plant lover, there is a nearby display from all over the world at Andromeda Gardens.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT
ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA FOR FREE AND REDUCED PRICE MEALS AND FREE MILK

(If your school rules not to offer Free Milk to the students then all references pertaining to the Free Milk Program should be deleted form this Announcement when printed.)

The Community Center for Children w/Sp.LD today announced a free milk and free meal and reduced price meal policy for school children unable to pay the full price of milk and meals served in schools under the National School Lunch, Breakfast Program and Special Milk Program. Local school officials have adopted the following family size-income criteria for use in determining eligibility.

INCOME ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA
FAMILY SIZE AND GROSS INCOME SCALES

Family Size All Members of Household	Maximum Gross Income For Free Milk and Free Meals	Maximum Gross Income For Reduced Price Meals
One	$0 to 5,230	$ 5,231 to 8,150
Two	0 to 6,900	6,901 to 10,760
Three	0 to 8,580	8,581 to 13,380
Four	0 to 10,250	10,251 to 15,990
Five	0 to 11,930	11,931 to 18,600
Six	0 to 13,600	13,601 to 21,220
Seven	0 to 15,280	15,281 to 23,830
Eight	0 to 16,950	16,951 to 26,440
Each additional family member	1,680	2,610

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for milk and meals free or at reduced prices. In addition, families not meeting this criteria but with other special hardship conditions due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply. Further, children having parents who become unemployed are eligible for free or reduced price meals of for free milk during the period of unemployment, provided that the loss of income caused the family income during the period of unemployment to be within eligibility criteria. Should your income or family size change, contact the approving official.

to discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the following statement is placed just above the parents' or guardians' signature on the application: "I certify that the above information I have given is true and correct, that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of State and Federal funds, that school officials may for cause: (1) request an informal conference with the parents to substantiate the information on the application (or if requested by either party the Fair Hearing Procedure may be used); (2) verify the information on the application, and that deliberate misrepresentation of the information may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable State and Federal criminal statutes."

Parents should clearly understand that every meal served in schools is subsidized to a greater or lesser degree by State-Federal reimbursements. Those lunches served at full price are subsidized as well as those served free or reduced, Therefore, there should be no reluctance to apply for either a free or reduced price meal. If your family size, and gross income is within the "Income Eligibility Criteria" for free or reduced price meals, we urge you and all eligible parents to full out the application. The intent of these programs is to improve the nutrition of all children.

They may do so by filling in the application forms sent home with a letter to parents. The information provided on the application wil be confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year. In certain cases foster children are eligible for free milk and free meals or reduced price meals regardless of your family income. If you have such children living with you and wish to apply for such milks and meals for them, please file a separate application for each child, and indicate the amount of State support only as income.

Under the provision of the policy, Jane Aibel Sadler (Master Teacher) will review all applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the offcial, he or she may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis or make a request either orally or in writing for a hearing to appeal the decision to:

Roselyn Scott, Executive Director, 147 Prince St. West Newton, MA # 969-7880.

Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy and a complete copy of the policy is on file in the office of the superintendent of schools where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

The policy also provides that there will be no overt identification and/or discrimination against any child because of his race, sex, color, handicap or national origin, in the operation of the child feeding program.

Barney Frank victorious over Clark

By PHILIP ROOSEVELT
Staff Writer

Frank	42,194
Clark	37,695

WALTHAM — When he left the stage Tuesday night after telling his supporters it was still "a real horse race," Mayor Arthur J. Clark was smiling but appeared tense.

A brass band was playing his old theme song, Duke Ellington's "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Moments later the crowd of about 500 found some reasons to believe The Duke's prophecy when the unofficial score board posted four successive wins in the western regions of Gardner, Fitchburg, Maynard and Leominster; cheers and shouts resounded throughout the old IBEW meeting hall on Main Street.

But then came the letdown, the news that Clark only won in Framingham by some 300 votes, probably not enough to offset Frank's big two to one margin in Newton. The big Brookline loss had been posted previously, but many observers felt this was offset by the 5 to 1 victory in Waltham where Clark came out with 7435-vote edge.

After Framingham, however, the crowd began to sense that their happy days were far from here.

It was becoming apparent that Mayor Clark would not be the Democratic candidate for the fourth congressional seat. Instead, liberal democrat Barney Frank would, facing in the November election Republican candidate Richard Jones of Harvard, a retired Army dentist.

With 100 percent of the vote tallied this morning, Frank had 42,194 votes, or 52 percent, and Clark had 37,695 votes, or 46 percent. After Frank declared victory with several precincts still out, Clark went home to bed, refusing to concede defeat.

Two percent voted for David Mofenson or Robert Shaffer, two candidates who withdrew toward the end of the race but appeared on the ballot.

Clark did not concede last night but was expected to have a statement sometime today. Frank left his gathering proclaiming himself the winner.

(In the neighboring Fifth District, freshman Rep. James Shannon of Lawrence won renomination over Robert M. Hatem, a Lowell business executive and one-time political worker for John and Robert Kennedy.

In the Fifth, it was Shannon 41,153 votes or 53 percent, and Hatem, 34,577 votes, or 46 percent.

Until last week, the Frank-Clark and Shannon-Hatem races were classic confrontations around traditional liberal-conservative issues of defense, energy, fiscal policy, welfare and abortion.

However, Cardinal Humberto Medeiros of Boston distributed a letter to 410 Catholic churches and printed it on the front of The Pilot, the archdiocesan newspaper, calling abortion an "unspeakable crime" and urging Catholics to vote against candidates who were avowedly pro-abortion.)

In his pre-Framingham speech, Clark told the eager crowd "I lost a lot of weight in this campaign but won a lot of friends." He thanked his campaign workers and supporters, specifically his campaign coordinator Bob White and the Massachusetts Labor Council for their endorsement.

"Some Boston papers took issue that I had supported labor," he said. "But I am now proud of that support." He added that "Labor, industry and the public sector must work together to insure job security."

Clark also spoke of the need to protect the elderly, "as we have here in Waltham", and the need to protect veterans of the Vietnam War.

But after the news from Framingham, these campaign themes seemed as vague memories from

Schur wins by a landslide; GOP picks Tennant over Katz

By STEVEN BURKE
Staff Writer

NEWTON — In a landslide victory, Ald. Susan Schur won the democratic nomination for State Representative Tuesday.

Schur captured more than 70 percent of the vote in the 12th Middlesex District race.

Schur received 2,863 votes to defeat her nearest challenger, Teresa Walsh, by more than 2,000 votes. Mrs. Walsh, former president of the Ward Eight democratic committee, received 410 votes. Ald. Paul Daley, the other challenger in the democratic primary race, received 380 votes.

Schur will face off against Ald. Robert Tennant in the Nov. 4 general election. Tennant defeated Ald. Robert Katz by 171 votes to win the Republican nomination.

Approximately 47 percent of the city's 48,770 registered voters went to the polls to participate in the sticker and write-in campaign for the seat vacated by Rep. David Mofenson.

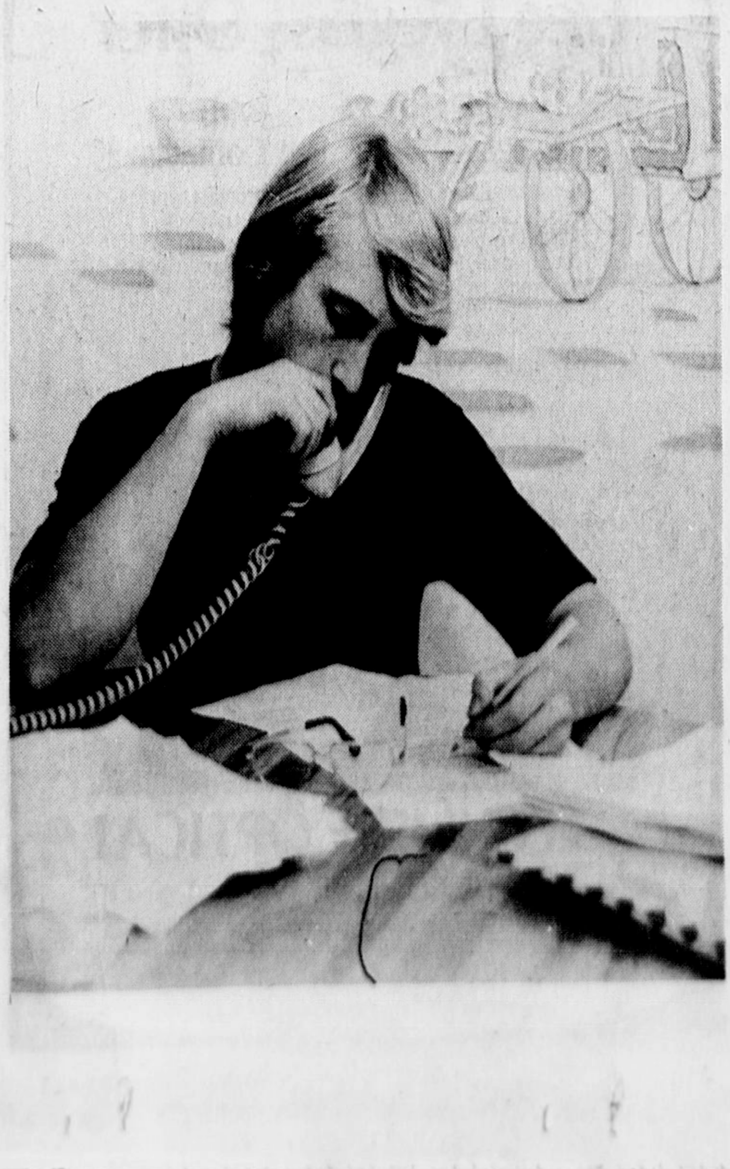
Extending a helping hand



By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON-David Fromm wants to do more for Newton's elderly than just help them across the street.

The 17 year-old Newton South High school student has started the Newton Community Assistance Program (NCAP). He envisions a non-profit business where young people lend a helping hand to the city's elderly.

Fromm compiled a survey which had questions on the needs of the elderly. He mailed out 1500 of the questionaires, paid for by a cooperative uncle, and received a 10 percent response.

"I don't think people want to sit back and have things provided for them," said Fromm. "They want to participate, this is a social thing."

Fromm plans to get volunteers to help take elderly folks out on day trips, to the supermarkets, and help with household chores and yard work.

As a response to a survey question, he wants to organize Newton's merchants to offer additional discounts to the elderly.

Eventually he sees the program as being self-sustaining, volunteers would be paid small fees for their help and organizational ability.

Fromm is holding a meeting at his home on Wednesday, October 1, at 8 p.m. He lives in Waban at 141 Evelyn Road and his telephone number is 965-1990. He hopes to get NCAP off the ground at the organizational session, although already he has quite a few ideas of his own.

Fromm is enthusiastic about his project and promises "I won't let it fail, even if I have to do everything myself!"

Volunteers are needed mostly to get the project off the ground, said Fromm. The need for money will come when things such as day trips to concerts, Faneuil Hall Marketplace and the country are held.

Eventually, Fromm believes he can get some local car dealership to donate a van to the program to expand the transportation services of NCAP. It may sound overly ambitious, but this blond-haired high schooler has enough enzrgy and initiative to make it work.

Is there a place in the city for yet another service for the elderly? Fromm seems to think so. In his survey, Fromm asked if they had ever been involved in a senior citizen group and had they been completely satisfied with i From the responses given, Fromm concluded that more could be done.

Fromm had met with a city of Newton official who is in charge of the municipality's services for the elderly. Fromm was discouraged by the meeting, finding his ideas were being shot down as fast as he could come up with them.

"They had an attitude that the city was doing enough," explained Fromm.

The failed meeting did not squelch Fromm's desire to get his project off of the ground. He analyzed the situation philosophically and said of the Newton official,"He's a realist, I'm an idealist."

Teachers ratify 2-year pact

NEWTON — With a 65 percent voter turnout, the Newton Teachers Association (NTA) ratified a two-year contract package giving its members a salary increase of 15 percent by more than 200 votes Tuesday, according to NTA Pres. Warren Priest.

Priest , who refused to give out the exact vote on the package, would only say that the School Committee's offer was ratified by "a substantial plurality of more than 200 votes."

Priest said he would not release the precise vote until he meets with the School Committee.

Priest said that 415 of the city's 850 teachers went to the polls at Newton South High School to approve the two year pact.

The contract, which still must be approved by the full School Committee and the Board of Aldermen, provides teachers with a 7.5 percent pay raise for the first year and a 7 percent hike at the beginning of the second year.

The NTA had reportedly been looking for salary increases of 8.5 percent and 9.25 percent over the two year period.

The new contract also removes a clause requiring physical education teachers to coach for at least two years' according to Priest.

Priest explained, "The city can now go out and get the best people to do the job."

The teachers were forced to yield one personal day. Teachers formerly had two personal days, they will now only receive one. Teachers will have to get special permission in order to take another personal day.

Priest also noted the NTA will work with the School Committee to "form creative ways to improve the use of sick days."

The School Committee maintained that teachers were abusing sick days. Teachers are provided with 15 sick days each year, which are cumulative. Priest noted, "There is a certain reward incentive if teachers do not use their sick days." Priest stressed the teachers were not satisfied with the salary package, adding, "under the circumstances it was the best we could do."

Furthermore, he said, "I think we have given and the School Committee has given and we have come to a reasonable agreement."

Priest added, "no one is ever fully satisfied as a result of collective bargaining."

Newton custodians threaten 'job action'

NEWTON — School custodians Monday threatened further "job action" if a contract settlement is not reached by Sept. 22.

The custodians rejected the latest offer from the city by a vote of 38 to 30 Sunday despite the fact the Union Executive Board and Union President Robert Robards endorsed the package.

The contract offer included a 7.5 percent salary increase for the first year and a 7 percent hike at the beginning of the second year.

The custodians are presently not working any overtime to protest lack of a contract settlement.

The union also voted not to strike at this time by a vote of 84 to 13 at the Sunday meeting, according to union representatives.

The union, which also represents the school system's cafeteria employees, has been working without a contract since June 30.

Carmen Testa, a member of the union negotiating team and a custodian at the Horace Mann School, said the union will now try to renegotiate the school department's latest offer.

Local 454 President Robards and School Supt. Aaron Fink met Monday morning to discuss the latest developments in the negotiations.

Although Fink would not comment on what was discussed at the meeting, he said of the school department's latest offer: "I think it is a completely reasonable offer. I would rather not comment beyond that."

Fink added, "I would doubt seriously that the committee will go beyond the agreement that was made with the teachers."

Newton teachers will vote on the same salary increase package today that the custodians rejected.

Fink said that the school negotiating team can not go beyond the latest offer.

He said, "My hope is that they will reconsider the offer. It is my hope that they will meet again Sunday and the whole thing will be settled."

The union has scheduled a meeting for Sunday morning to either vote on a new offer or consider further job action.

Testa said the rejection of the latest offer from the school department was "based on not enough money and earlier working hours for a majority of workers who usually work a 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. shift."

Speaking of union officials endorsement of the contract offer, Testa said, "In view of the times and what other unions got, it was a fair offer." He explained, "If there is not any movement by the school committee, it is hard to say what will take place."

Testa pointed out the union has discussed the "ramifications" of a strike.

"The membership is really up in arms," he said. "They really want an improvement on the package offered. We are hopeful that there will be some movement by the school committee and that we will ratify."

Testa added, "We took a tremendous amount of proposals and items off the table... We are also kind of down at the bottom of the ladder as far as wages are concerned."

The average salary for a custodian is about $14,500 a year, according to Testa.

Union representatives were scheduled to meet with school officials yesterday. However, no further meetings were planned. Both school department and election officials agreed that the refusal of custodians to work overtime would not interfere with voting at the schools, where there are a large number of polling places, on election day.

Alan Licarie ,executive secretary for the election commission, said he anticipates no problems today.

He said, "I hope there is no problem. I don't think they would interfere with the election process."

Licarie, who has worked with the school department on the problem, said the department will transfer custodians so there will be coverage at the polling places.

Fink echoed the reassurance of Licarie, saying, "The polls will be open and armed with the appropriate security."

Robards has also assured that the union will not interfere with the election.

Conservators join in park dedication

NEWTON CENTRE — The Newton Conservators recently joined city officials in a celebration to commemorate public ownership of the Novitiate Park on the Charles River.

The 32-acre parcel, newly acquired by the city, is now available for public use.

Russell Halloran, Newton recreation commissioner, spoke of the heavy use of Auburndale Park for picnicking by the river and his expectation that the Novitiate Park would become another very popular picnic spot.

Dennis Ditelberg, chairman of the Newton Conservation Commission, thanked the Conservators and the many individuals involved in helping the city acquire the land.

Ald. Rodney Barker praised the cooperation between Newton citizens, city, and state officials which brought about the preservation of the land for a park.

The property is a portion of a larger parcel owned by the Xaverian Brothers, formerly called the Working Boys Home and then the Novitiate. The parcel is bounded by Winchester and Nahanton streets and the Charles River. In 1979 a portion of the land near Winchester Street was sold to Combined Jewish Philanthropies.

Sally Barnett, president of the Conservators, spoke of plans which have been developed for recreational uses of the park. The land with its fields, wooded hillsides, and pond is ideally suited for walking, nature study, informal activities such as kite flying and cross country skiing, and organized sports such as soccer.

The riverbank is suitable for launching canoes and fishing. Joan Lerner, co-chairwoman of the Conservators Novitiate Committee, outlined the history of the Conservators involvement with the land.

The Newton Conservators is a nonprofit citizens' group concerned with the protection and preservation of open land, both privately and publicly owned, in Newton. Founded in 1961, the Conservators has been active in the collection and distribution of information concerning open space.

The Conservators was active in focusing public attention on the possibility of preserving the Webster Vale, Norumbega Park, and the Chestnut Hill Country Club land. It is presently preparing a publication to be distributed throughout the city identifying the parcels of open land to which the public has access.

Among those attending the ceremony were Paul Burke, member of the Newton Recreation Commission; Thelma Fleishman, Richard Staley, Deborah Howard, Nathan Tucker, and Helen Heyn of the Newton Conservation Commission; Mathew Jefferson, president of the Board of Aldermen; Ald. Robert Tennant, Robert Katz, Edward Richmond, Ethel Sheehan, and Wendell Bauckman; and former aldermen John Stewart, Harry Crosby, and Peter Harrington.

Neighbors opposed to condos

NEWTON-The Aldermanic Land Use Committee held public hearings on two ongoing petitions Monday night. The first was the plan of George Naddaff to convert a carriage house on his property to six condominium units. The second was a plan to put an office building for Blue Cross/Blue Shield on a Washington Street site.

The Naddaff petition represented the third incarnation of a plan to convert the carriage house on Bellevue Street to condominiums. The first request had been for five units and the second request was to create six. The latest proposal calls for four three-bedroom units and two two bedroom units.

The estimated cost for the units ranges from $125,000 to $175,000, according to Naddaff's attorney,Robert Freeto. Testimony in opposition to the plan was heard from several of the neighbors in the area.

Many objected to the number of units proposed for the carriage house and were concerned about whether families or singles would be occupying the site. Concern was also voiced about the number of parking spaces needed. Another focus of the hearing was the fate of the more than an acre of land adjacent to the property.

Neighbors were concerned that conservation restrictions are not stringent enough and may lead to further sub-division of the land for single family housing. The petition now prevents building a single family residence on one of the lots that make up the property until 1990. Neighbors say that ban should be extended. The Planning Dept. of the city has recommended the Naddaff petition because it maintains the visual appearances of the Victorian building while meeting recommendations of the city which call"for adaptive re-use of existing housing."

After the public hearing before the Land Use Committee, neighbors looked over the plans with Attorney Freeto who explained the specifics of the proposal to the neighborhood. The Naddaff petition will be discussed at a Land Use Committee working session on Sept. 29.

At the corner of Neshobe Road and Washington Street near Routes 128 and 16, is a piece of land where Blue Cross-Blue Shield wishes to construct an office building to be used as a customer service center. Howard Levene, attorney for the developers Richard M.Roach and T.A. Pearson Associates Inc., has filed for a zone change which would allow the land to be used for commercial construction.

Monday night's hearings were conducted because the petition had not included a section of the land that should have been discussed at the July 21st Land Use Comm. hearings.

A traffic consultant for the petitioners presented figures and plans which said that the traffic could be handled in the area.

Loretta Kowal spoke against the petition saying that the traffic problem is not solvable.

Since 1962, five petitions to change the zoning for the property and construct commercial buildings have failed to pass the board of aldermen.

The basic dispute among the two sides is the amount and flow of traffic in the area. Neighbors suggested the 121 parking spaces allocated for the Blue Cross-Blue Shield employees would not be enough to handle the customers who would travel Route 128 to the service center.

Kowal told the committee that "There is not one local neighbor in favor of this petition."

Kowal said the facility "belongs in an office park." She also suggested the land be made back into single family residences which would create tax revenues for the city of Newton.

The petition will be debated in the Land Use committee's working session on Sept. 29.

2 new bus routes for Newton

NEWTON — Two new bus routes will begin serving major points throughout the city, including the Chestnut Hill Mall and the Marshals' Shopping Center, Sept. 22.

The Board of Aldermen recently approved $14,000 funding for the experimental routes by a vote of 15 - 3.

In addition, approximately $7,000 funding has been pledged by area merchants.

Both routes will start in Newton Centre. The first route will travel between the Chestnut Hill Mall and Marshals' Shopping Center on Needham Street. The second route will go from the Riverside MBTA Station to the Newton Wellesley Hospital to Boston College.

The first route bus route will run every half hour starting at Newton Centre at 7 a.m., with the last bus leaving Newton Centre at 6:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Bus service for Saturday for the first route will run from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The second bus route will run every hour, starting at Newton Centre at 7 a.m., with the last bus leaving Newton Centre at 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. There will be no Saturday service on the second route.

Fares for the new bus service will be a minimum of to a maximum of depending on the ride.

David Tannozzini, traffic planner for the city, said the routes will require two riders a mile to break even.

"We hope there is ridership," he said. "The goal of the routes are to be self sustaining."

Tannozzini said the routes have a history of public transportation, noting that the MBTA ran buses on the routes.

He explained, "These are areas that have had a successful history of public transportation."

Tannozzini added, "With the energy crises becoming a major problem, people are requesting more public transportation."

Compromise on Rte. 9-Elliot plan

By JONATHAN D. ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON-A new compromise plan has been created for the Route 9-Elliot Street intersection which will be reconsidered by the Newton Board of Aldermen Monday night.

The board approved a state plan for the area last week. Ald. Cynthia Creem made the move to reconsider the board's vote.

The new plan came after a meeting between Purity Supreme officials and members of the state Department of Public Works, including Commissioner Amadon.

Leo Kahn, pResident of Purity Supreme, praised Amadon for his help in bringing about the revised design. "He was the first fellow we met who listened and tried to work it out," said Kahn. The new plan as outlined in a letter from the state DPW will stress Ramsdell Road as a main entrance to the Purity Supreme shopping area. An advance waRning sign will be placed on Route 9 westbound telling of a signal-protected U-turn at the intersection. At the end of the median, another sign will inform drivers of the U-turn. Shoppers are expected to take this U-turn from Route 9 westbound and enter Purity Supreme through a driveway located on Ramsdell Road. The entrance to the parking lot will be moved closer to Route 9. The Route 9 curbcut into the Purity Supreme lot will still remain closed under the latest plan.

When construction begins on the intersection,the state will install an underground duct with wires in it. If planners decide that the traffic patterns on Elliot Street require the installation of signals, the wires will already be in place and ready for hook-up to the signal post.

The original Purity Supreme plan had called for the installation of signals on Elliot Street to allow traffic to flow more easily in and out of the Purity parking lot.

There has been debate as to whether or not the state plan would hurt Purity Supreme's business and force its closing. Purity officials are encouraged by the latest compromise design.

If this latest plan for the intersection is approved by the board, then construction could begin in Spring of 1981.

Clark won't back Frank

WALTHAM — Mayor Arthur J. Clark will not endorse Democrat Barney Frank for Congress.

Today Clark said, "I have so many philosophical differences with Frank on a variety of issues, how can I endorse him?"

During the campaign Clark called himself a moderate-conservate while Frank called him a conservative. Frank drew his strongest support from the left-liberal wing of the Democratic party.

Clark did not endorse Republican Richard Jones of Harvard who will face Frank in the November final election. Clark has indicated he admired Jone's style of campaigning – especially against Frank.

Clark also hinted he is thinking of running for statewide office next year, but he wouldn't disclose which race he is considering.

Some close associates speculated that Clark is considering running for lieutenant governor since Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill is raising money to challege Gov. Edward J. King in next year's Democratic primary. One friend of Clark said, "the lieutenant governorship is wide open."

Frank's humor in full force

By KARYL SCOTT
Staff Writer

FRAMINGHAM — Entering the ballroom before 11 p.m., Barney Frank carried his young nephew in his arms, with his entourage close behind. He told the cheering mass:

"At one point when my victory was not so certain I thought of the alternatives," he said dryly. "If I didn't win I wasn't going to pull out on the investments I had made in all those living rooms throughout the district. I realized that I could sell tupperware."

Frank's typical, sardonic humor was in full force.

His opening joke seemed to break the cloud of tension which hovered over the group before his appearance.

The gathering of Barney Frank supporters Tuesday night at the Framingham Sheraton Tara hotel reached well near 800 with breathing room only.

Frank's candidacy attracted the attention of the national press and journalists from as far away as Japan.

At nine p.m. before the Brookline total came in the group, crowding around the blackboards, watched pensively as Frank's press secretary Thaleia Schlesinger posted the results that Clark was ahead.

By the time that Frank arrived he knew that he had captured a ten percent lead. With every victory that came in from Brookline, Sudbury,Wayland, Lincoln,Bolton, and Weston the room of hundreds of voices fell silent. The good news was followed with a buzz of excitement first, and then outcries of victory before the announcement was completed.

At 10:30 p.m. campaign aide Bonnie Shershow said "I just came from upstairs with Barney. David (Mofenson) walked in to a room of cheers. When the two of them embraced there were tears in their eyes. Barney felt very good - very confident. We are just waiting for the paper ballots to come in."

Once the crowd was sure Frank had the predicted ten percent edge the room and all inhabitants assumed a party-like humour. Even the NBC cameraman sipped from a bottle of beer as he filmed the action before him.

There were young men dressed in tweed and penny loafers. Women in formal evening attire, and kids in jeans mingling throughout the ballroom, chatting, and discussing the votes and percentages.

According to Lloyd Simon of Newton "I recognize some of these people from ten years ago at Drinan's victory party."

Ten students from Brandeis showed up to add their vociferous cheers for Frank.

Japanese journalist Tetsuhisa Matsuzaki of Bungei Shunju magazine decided to cover this particular race for his magazine and for a study he is involved with at Harvard University.

"I chose this race because I think it is representative of the issues and attitudes throughout the nation. The Japanese people follow the U.S. presidential race closely but they do not follow the Congressional races," said Matsuzaki.

He commented on the difference between the two countires' election systems. "In Japan there is no door-to-door campaigning, no primary, a 21-day campaign period, and the government pays for the only three television spots allowed," he said.

Alice MacMahon, of Wellesley felt strongly enough about Frank's candidacy to work on his campaign even though he was not from her Congressional District. "I think it is important to get him to Congress. He is one of the most promising politicians in the country today. This primary is of much significance nationally. Clark is a good mayor, but I think he would be at sea in Washington," she said.

A rosey-cheeked Frank wasted no time in taking up the next battle he will encouter before the race for Congress is settled. He said "I am running against a man - Richard Jones - who holds the view that the government cannot do anything at all."

"I don't think that government is omniscient, but I do think we can work to make government serve us. I abide by the fundamental proposition that government was meant to serve us," said Frank.

The mention of a telephone call from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy brought the largest cheers from the audience of the evening.

Kennedy, as well as Sen. Joe Early and Congressman Edward Markey also put in calls to see how Frank was doing and to send their best wishes.

Frank mentioned the various skirmishes in the race which caused worry: For a while, Frank said, he felt like he was in a wrestling match. "Different people kept coming into the rink" to fight.

When a member of the audience yelled "Are you going to debate the Cardinal now Barney," Frank replied "There has been too much diversiveness in this campaign. As far as I am concered it's a clean slate now. I have always been concerned with and have spoken on hard economic issues."

Frank praised the contribution "Fr. Drinan has made to the world. A note of sadness must enter the talk at this time. It was ten years ago yesterday that Fr. Drinan won his first Congressional primary. I feel humble and proud to acknowledge part of the reason I won was because Drinan earned the respect of people around the district. This enhances my winning enormously."

As Frank concluded he said "I have gone now since early May without saying anything outrageous. If Thaleias bites her lip any more she is going to look like Herbert Hoover."

He stepped down from the podium,and into the spotlight of the television cameras to become once again the center of attention and the star of the evening.

Framingham man guilty of assault

NEWTON — A 20-year old Framingham man was found guilty of two counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon in Newton District Court Monday.

Dean Lande of 1600 Worcester Road received a sentence of one year in the Billerica House of Correction on the two counts, which are in connection with an incident in the knifing of two Newton men Aug. 1.

Judge Paul Chernoff also sentenced Lande to two years in the House of Correction for the larceny of a motor vehicle and one year for attempted larceny from a person.

Lande was convicted of slashing Carl Pasquarosa,18, of 442 Walnut Street, and Richard Gallagher,17, of 104 Hillside Drive after coming out of a local pub Aug. 1.

Both Pasquarosa and Gallagher testified that they were attempting to collect money Lande owed another person when the incident occured. Lande was arrested 100 yards from the scene of the stabbing at the intersection of Centre and Pearl Streets.

The knife used in the stabbing was found 30 yards from where Lande was arrested. Lande testified that the stabbing occured after he was chased by Pasquarosa and Gallagher.

John Buckley fading out

Political hopefuls seldom stagnate. They either keep moving up the ladder after scoring an initial breakthrough, or drop out of sight after one or more losses. An exception is one of our favorite personalities in public life, John J. Buckley of Belmont, whose name won't be on today's ballot.

Buckley decided to let his term as sheriff of Middlesex County run out after a 10-year whirl at the job. He had ambitions to move upward, only to be short circuited every time. Disillusioned, he intends to do something "entirely different."

In retrospect, it seems that John Buckley was in the wrong party. As a Republican, he never made way it in the way one succeeds. The relatively small group of power brokers who control the money flow never got around to giving him a blessing despite an extraordinary party effort on his part.

Unlike John Volpe, he had neither the personal funds nor the broad ethnic backing to put together a support organization of his own. Another who did it on his own was Ed Brooke, who made a lot of people feel good in giving a vote to a black.

Buckley got mentioned frequently as a prospect for governor or lieutenant governor. His name came to the fore when seats in Congress opened. Party conventions game him plenty of complimentary attention, but somehow the door never opened. His record as sheriff was a good one, replete with innovation and advanced inmate treatment which won him national honors as a penologist. He was a county reformer who did accomplish much.

Undoubtedly, Buckley would have done better as a Democrat. Working in the trenches pays off in that party. So does enthusiasm and an ability to mix with the people, which he had in abundance. With a shrinking base, Republicans have needed the kind of talent Buckley had to offer.

It isn't surprising to find him endorsing a Democrat to succeed to the post, although a touch of irony exists. We're sorry to seem him fade out.

Good cause

A decade isn't much of a time span in which to measure the worth of an organization with such scope as Common Cause. On its 10th anniversary, however, the national citizens' lobby has made an exceptional impact on the political environment.

Unlike Ralph Nader's raiders, seeking to turn over stones and find the corruptive maggots, John W. Gardner committed Common Cause to reform in the structure and processes of government. Campaign financing has been drastically changed, wasteful programs wiped out, many state legislatures made more responsible. Archibald Cox, Harvard law professor and the Watergate prosecutor, is the new chairman. He sees the organization in a new, more expansive attempt to reorder the whole federal structure of government. Hacking away at the bureaucratic jungle growth is well worth doing.

Exploration or exploitation

Commentary
By Frank Sargent
State Columnist

> "The question really is whether the Carter White House muscled the various Cabinet Offices around until everybody was marching together... away from making Georges Bank a marine sanctuary.'

The last time we heard that label, it was from the Nixon White House, and it turned out to be an effort to cover-up some of the trickier tricks of Watergate.

It's dirty pool to mention Watergate in the same breath as the Carter White House, but the fact is one of its branches is using executive privilege to withhold information important to determining the future of Georges Bank, New England's most prolific fishing grounds.

And, whenever we hear "Executive Privilege" as a reason we shouldn't know what the government didn't want us to know what it was doing because it was embarrassed by its own behavior.

This week, Attorney General Frank Bellotti and the Conservation Law Foundation are going into federal court trying to force the feds to explain what's going on with Georges Bank. As Chairman of the Board of the Foundation, I wear two hats today; reporting the facts, and explaining the Foundation's position.

CLF and the Attorney General have worked long to establish the Georges Bank fishery as a marine sanctuary. That doesn't mean we're trying to rope off a chunk of the ocean so nothing but fishing can happen there. We are not opposed to oil and gas exploration. What we're after is priority attention to protection of the fishery, and gaining the designation "marine sanctuary" would accomplish that.

Simply, it would mean that when a close call develops – a close call, for example, between drilling or not drilling in a particular section of this vast location - the preference and priority would favor the fishing industry, oil and gas would be secondary. If a doubt arose, the fishery would get the benefit of that doubt.

For a while, the part of the federal Commerce Department that worries about such matters provided strong technical support for the marine sanctuary position. Suddenly, Commerce did a one-eighty, and that support vanished. CLF and the Attorney General's office thinks Commerce caved-in to political pressure from the Carter White House.

So, a request has been made to see some of the paperwork, some of the files and correspondence that might settle the question. So far, using "executive privilege" as its excuse, Commerce refuses to produce those records requested. So, CLF and the Attorney General are trying to get a federal court to force disclosure.

The point is to bring to light just how the process worked in Washington, just how one Cabinet Office, Commerce, seemed to take a position opposing another Cabinet Office, the Department of the Interior, while a third Cabinet Office, Energy, looked on – and why, suddenly, Commerce stopped its apparent opposition.

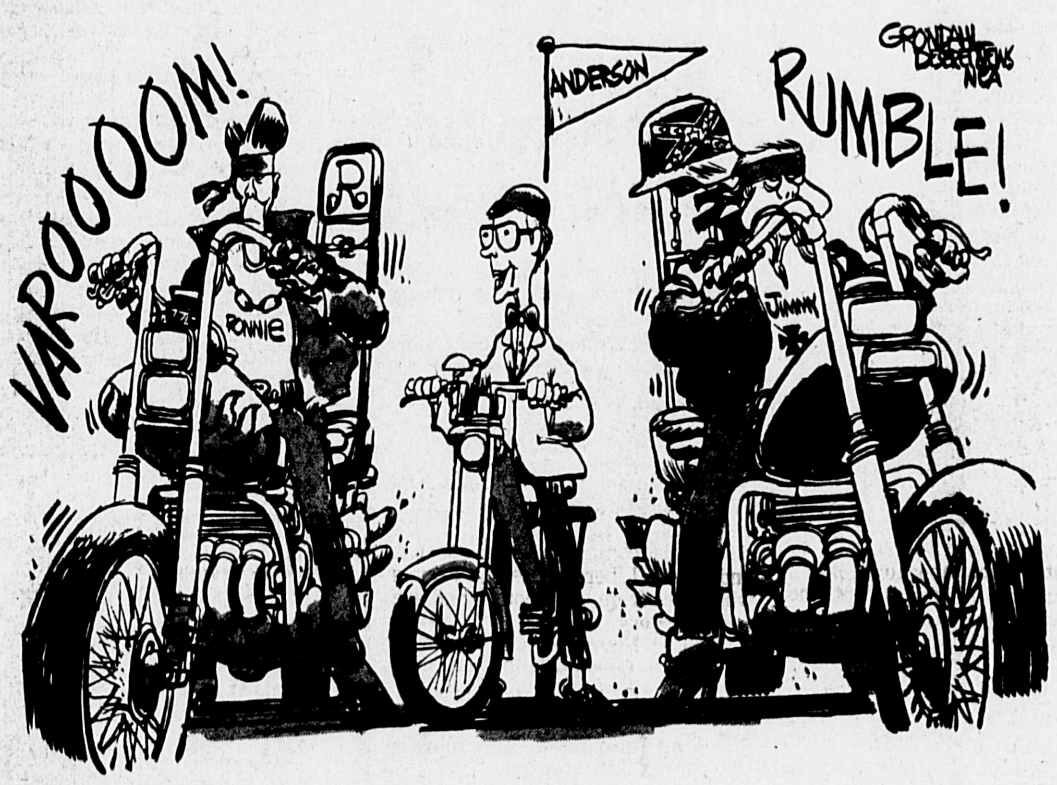
The question really is whether the Carter White House muscled the various Cabinet Offices around until everybody was marching together – away from making Georges Bank a marine sanctuary.

And beyond that – will one of the most valuable natural resources in New England, the fishery that is Georges Bank, be protected from the real hazards energy exploration pose?

Exploration is one thing, exploitation quite another. Everyone is for finding new energy sources, but not at the price of irreversible damage to a vital natural resource.

The opportunity for Anderson

Commentary
By Joseph Kraft
National Columnist



"Well, guys, where are we off to now?"

WASHINGTON — The country is turned off on politics. So prominent leaders are particularly vulnerable, and negative attacks succeed.

That is the lesson in the latest round of primary elections. It explains the dismal nature of the presidential campaign, and points up the opportunity for John Anderson.

The turnout provides the best measure of the anti-political mood. In the New York senatorial primary, less than 30 percent of the eligible Democrats went to the polls. And less than 24 percent of the eligible Republicans. There is no recent Republican precedent, but on the Democratic side, despite a star-studded cast and huge spending, the total vote fell below that in the Senate primary four years ago.

In Florida, a state fraught with political tensions arising out of fast growth and racial trouble around Miami, less than 35 percent of the registered voters participated in the Republican and Democratic primaries for a Senate seat. "You wouldn't believe the lack of interest," Eugene Patterson, of the St. Petersburg Times, remarked the day after the vote.

In Connecticut, the only primary took place on the Republican side. Of the more than 400,000 eligible voters, only a little more than 100,000 went to the polls.

Colorado provides a technical exception. More than half of the eligible voters cast ballots in the Republican primary for the Senate. But there was a preestablished turning away. Thirty-seven percent of the Colorado electorate is registered as independent — a higher figure than for either Republicans (35 percent) or Democrats (28 percent).

Jacob Javits, the three-time senator from New York, was the outstanding figure to go down. In his case, a true giant bit the dust. But notables were also defeated on the Democratic side in New York. Bess Myerson, the former Miss America who spent heavily on television, ran a bad second to Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman. John Lindsay, the former mayor of New York City, was also beaten out for third place by a virtually unknown district attorney from Queens, John Santucci.

In Florida, the sitting senator, Richard Stone, barely finished first and will have to face a runoff. In Colorado, former Secretary of the Army Bo Callaway lost the primary. Only in Connecticut, where former New York senator James Buckley won, did fame pay off.

Analyzing the whys and wherefores of primary elections is a markedly chancey business. But in the case of Sen. Javits there seems little doubt. He was done in by an obscure local official, Alfred D'Amato, who waged a nasty personal campaign that emphasized the senator's age and health.

The campaign against Sen. Stone centered on his vote for the Panama Canal treaty. Buckley won in Connecticut because he had the support of the ideological conservative lobby — itself an anti-political force. As to Colorado, the same animus found expression in another way. Mary Estill Buchanan won the Senate nomination thanks mainly to a widely-publicized court fight that got her name on the ballot only six days before the election. The connection between these disparate results and the presidential election hardly needs underlining. Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan embody the anti-political mood.

Both are amateurs in national government. Both run against Washington bureaucracy. Both contend that, as Carter once put it, the country "deserves a government as good and loving and honest as the American people." But to say that is to promote the narcissism of the millions. It is to legitimize private self-indulgence at the expense of public good, and to sanction, when things go wrong, the hunt for scapegoats.

Government, in those circumstances, becomes practically impossible. People who want to make the system work are repelled. The parties become prey to the militant minorities, and those in turn keep nominating the likes of Carter and Reagan.

The only way to break this vicious cycle is to shatter the underlying harmony that binds the candidates of the two parties. That means going against the notion, favored by both Carter and Reagan, that there should be a tax giveaway without a measure of restraint on prices and wages. It means fighting the illusion, shared by Carter and Reagan, that more energy can be produced without paying for it.

Congressman Anderson may not be perfect. But when it comes to opposing the products of a failed political system, he's all there is, and that's better than nothing at all.

Capitol Hill Highlights

MX missile up for a vote

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. The House is about to consider the defense appropriations bill for 1981, which includes funding for the proposed MX missile system.

When the MX was first proposed, cost estimates were in the $30 billion range. That was later raised to $50 to $60 billion. Latest estimates go as high as $108 billion, making the MX far and away the most expensive project in the history of mankind. That $108 billion does not include the cost of 2,000 nuclear warheads to arm the MX, nor does it take into account the traditional 100 percent cost-overruns in weapons programs.

If the Pentagon asks for anti-ballistic nissiles to defend the MX, as spokesmen have indicated they might, the price tag goes up another $7 to $8 billion. Also, if arms control agreements are not reached in the next decade, the numbers of missiles, shelters, and warheads for the MX may double, along with the costs.

This project, which I have opposed from the beginning, will fuel inflation and take money not only from domestic programs, but from other high priority military projects which will have to be terminated or delayed. When the House considers the defense appropriations bill this week, I will be supporting amendments to cutback on funding for the MX until serious strategic, economic, and environmental questions about this massive project have been resolved.

CIA Secrecy Bill

This week the House will vote on the Intelligence Identities Identification Act designed to protect the identity of CIA officials and other U.S. agents.

Everyone agrees that we must protect U.S. agents working undercover, but this bill is not the way to do it. This legislation would outlaw the disclosure of any information, even from unclassified sources, that serves to identify CIA officials or other intelligence agents.

In an effort to address a serious intelligence problem the authors of this bill have gone too far, and our First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press are threatened as a result.

Under this bill, for the first time in American history, a person could be sent to jail merely for publishing something, even if what he published were freely available in public documents!

I fought this bill in the Judiciary Committee, and suggested that the prohibition on revealing information should apply only to those persons with existing or past access to classified information. We were unable to stop this measure in committee, and so it goes to the House this week for a vote.

I will continue to oppose this bill, but I am afraid that the present mood of the House insures its passage. I strongly suspect that if it is signed into law, it will be ruled unconstitutional by the courts. We must protect our people working overseas, but we must also protect the basic freedoms guaranteed by our Constitution.

Wood Energy Tax Credit

Last year I supported efforts to give homeowners a tax credit on the purchase of woodburning stoves. Unfortunately that effort failed. However, we did succeed in including a provision in the Windfall Profits Tax allowing the Secretary of the Treasury the discretion to enact such a tax.

If we are truly committed to breaking America's dependence on foreign oil, the government must encourage the use of renewable resources such as wood. The Carter Administration is leaning towards enactment of a wood energy credit.

Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Newton.

THE ART OF DISCOVERY

Landscape painting

Where does man fit in his landscape? Front and center? Or as a small figure in one corner?

Early Chinese landscape painters were able to paint vast and detailed panoramas of nature from memory of scenes they saw years ago, touching ink brushes to silk with a surety that required no reworking.

Their purpose was to show the essential nature of a thing — the majesty of a mountain, the suppleness of bamboo, the ruggedness of a pine tree. In these scenes man's essential nature was as a small part of the whole, a minute observer on the shore, a small figure at the base of a towering mountain. Man was not the master of nature, but a living part of it.

In contrast 19th century pastoral scenes served more as an escape back into tranquil nature from a fetid and industrialized world. William Wordsworth wrote:

"The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending we lay waste our powers;
Little we see in nature that is ours."

Man had lost his touch in being one with nature. Rather than the Chinese ideal of selflessness and balance with nature, nineteenth century philosophy reflected an emerging glorification of the individual, an unrestrained outpouring of emotions — a growing emphasis on man's needs.

Mountains, a component of landscape painting, are an element of nature intrinsically related to man's sense of importance.

All early cultures believed the largest mountain that rested in their particular province was "the center of the world."

India has its Mount Meru, the Greeks their Mount Olympus, the Iranians Haraberzaiti.

By virtue of their mass and verticality mountains imply a loftiness of spirit, or at least a means of ascent to the spiritual world. Consequently, they were duplicated in architecture in the pyramids of Egypt, the mountain Temple Ziggurats of Mesopotamia, the Borobuder of Java.

In ancient China mountains were symbolic of the gret greatness and generosity of the emperor and were the fourth of the 12 Imperial emblems.

The idea of being the "center of the world" is so meaningful to man that Galileo, as late as the 17th century, was branded a heretic for supporting the Copernican Theory that the earth and all the planets revolved around the sun; that the earth, in fact, was not the center of the universe.

The landscapes of the Impressionists capture fleeting, but profoundly important personal moments of time in man's life. Moments when the changing light of day causes familiar objects to take on a new appearance.

These are the moments that the author James Joyce would term "epiphanies" when one gains a sudden, intuitive insight into the essential meaning of something.

The psychologist, Abraham Maslow would call them "peaks of experience" and the poet, Wordsworth, "spots of time" wherein:

"(Nature) can so inform
The mind that is within us, so impress
With quietness and beauty, and so feed
With lofty thoughts, that neither evil tongues,
Rash judgments, nor the sneers of selfish men,
Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life,
Shall e'er prevail against us..."

There is less and less landscape that is nature's.

More and more is the creation of man. Rivers are redirected, mountains flattened, plateaus raised, grasses macadamed, cities reduced to ruins, entire islands sunk into the sea.

Man looms large in the 20th century landscape and controls much of nature. But he does not yet control his own human nature.

Man's landscape and himself in it have a different Perspective when seen from outer space as an astronaut has seen them. Man himself cannot be seen at all. And the world itself is seen in the vast, inky darkness "glowing like a fragile blue-green Christmas tree ornament." It is "in this very world, which is the landscape of us all, the place, where in the end, we find our happiness, or not at all."

some dream in the collective consciousness of the crowd.

Hundreds of red Clark-for- Congress balloons still rose buoyed to the seats, but the totem pole music dwindled out and television crews from three stations packed their gear rapidly. Some supporters began to filter out of the hall.

Others stayed, congratulating Clark on the fight and theorizing on the loss. But for much of what was said the underlying sentiment, as expressed by campaign worker Joe Kelly, was this: "No sense in talking about it; we lost and that's that."

One person who stayed until the lights were literally shut off was Campaign Manager White. He said, "If Mofenson had stayed in the race, Arthur Clark would be the Democratic candidate for congress."

White said the most surprising defeat in the unofficial results was the two to one win for Frank in Newton.

"There was a lot of bitterness in Newton when Mofenson pulled out and we really didn't know which way it would go." Earlier in the campaign, however, White had said Mofenson's withdrawl would work to Clark's advantage.

Robert Shaffer, the other Democratic candidate who pulled out of the race, appeared at the gathering complete with a Clark button on his lapel, and concurred that Mofenson's withdrawl had hurt Clark.

Shaffer also said that Cardinal Medeiros's much publicized letter urging voters to defeat candidates favoring abortion funding had a backfiring effect on Clark, a heavy pro-life supporter.

"As the only issue in the last week of the campaign in an area that's two to one in favor of abortion, what the hell do you expect?," he asked.

Alexader Zampieron, chairman of the economics department of Bentley College and issues director for Clark said the big turnout in Brookline, about 30 percent more than the Clark camp expected, was one of the decisive factors in the election.

Harley Lippman, the foreign affairs advisor who joined Clark's campaign five weeks ago to help secure liberal votes in Brookline, agreed the most surprising aspect of the election was the high, 40-50 percent voter turnout in Brookline.

Lippman said said campaign strategists "had virtually written off the Brookline liberal vote, and what we finally did was too little too late." He sadly poured through stacks of ads he had placed in Brookline papers showing Clark with Senator Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington.

Lippman said Cardinal Medeiros's letter had a backfire effect, claiming that Jewish voters in Brookline were offended the letter came out during religous holidays when Frank couldn't respond. He said the four Catholic precincts in Brookline he had expected Clark to take easily may have lost votes to Frank because, "People don't like their religious leaders telling them how to vote."

Boston surgeon Mildred Jefferson, the nationally known pro-life leader, attended the gathering and agreed the abortion issue played a "big role" in the election. She said, "Barney Frank never ran on his own; he always ran behind the Roman collar.... There is a certain hypocrisy in posing for paid political advertisements with a Catholic priest(Drinan)." She said Frank is "hardly a practicing Catholic."

Jefferson said one reason for the Brookline defeat is "there is no effective right to life group established in the area.... Some of us get too tied up in the city and don't get to starting grassroots movements in the outlying areas; but obviously there's a real need."

Waltham pro-life leader Evelyn Dubel said she contacted about 60 people to attend the Clark gathering "several weeks" before the Cardinal's letter was issued. She said, "I'm confident something good will become of this, I'm not sure just what but something will. The clergy are getting active and that's a good start.

WALTHAM — Republican congressional candidate Richard Jones of Fitchburg anticipates an easier chore raising money and support for his campaign against Barney Frank of Newton in the November final election.

Jones, who was unopposed in this week's 4th Congressional District Republican primary, said "Arthur Clark and David Mofenson both would have been very difficult, even unbeatable candidates" if either had won the primary.

A retired army dentist, Jones calls Barney Frank a "fringe candidate."

Jones added Frank "has been overly preoccupied with social issues to the detriment of the economy of the Bay State. Frank promises to behave the same as a federal legislator as he did as a state legislator," Jones said.

Jones said he plans an aggressive campaign based on economic and defense issues. He calls the country's current defense posture as "weak and embarrassing."

Jones said the mood in the country "is definitely toward putting brakes on big government." He added, "Frank knows that and we're hearing a lot of election year rhetoric from him. His record on tax issues are just out of sinc."

He added, "I think it will be easier for us to raise money and to get the people who supported Clark, (Robert) Shaffer and Mofenson."

Clark lost the Democratic nomination to State Rep. Frank in what proved to be a tight, hard-fought race. Shaffer, a Fitchburg businessman, and Mofenson, a state representative from Newton, both withdrew from the race in the past month. Mofenson threw his support to his liberal colleague Frank, while Shaffer, a conservative, released his campaign workers to the Clark camp.

Jones said Frank has shown a high profile "on a lot of fringe social issues in his tour as a state legislator."

Opinions

Thoughts on abortion

As a member of a highly liberal community, religiously and socially in general, I find that there is a certain across-the-board liberal, if not radical, stance that abortion is okay.

All you have to do is want one. There are no ifs, ands or buts surrounding the question.

I would not categorize myself as a right to lifer, ' but there is a certain callousness regarding any group who simply thinks it all right to take a life that has begun.

Life begins at conception, not at birth. This does not mean that conditions of forced sexual involvement are not factors. It means that there is always a "conscience" involved in the element of life-taking and life-forming and life-creating.

If you look at the records of abortion counselors, it does not take a liberal genius to figure out the heartbreak, emotional suffering and turmoil; the fear that results in planning an abortion and the results of having had one.

There are literally scores of people involved in some abortions or considered abortions. What would the relatives say, especially those who are close to the girl and boy involved? Is it wrong to consider the consequences in the long run on all those involved if an abortion takes place?

If one is callous about life in general, and many people are, then perhaps abortion can take place without any essential regard for life; but if one can feel affection for children, then there must be second thoughts.

Many books are available by women who have gone through abortions. Many men and women, after they have had children, realize only then what they had done and what was sacrificed years before.

Certainly there are good social reasons for abortion, but many rest only within the mind and heart of the individual.

Many liberals lump the ideas of gays, women's rights and abortions together in one big cause. They are essentially three different causes; three different events.

Many believe in women's rights, but not abortion across-the-board. And so with gay rights and interests. They should be all treated as separate issues.

Liberals come in various shapes and sizes. Liberals are individuals who differ from one another and are not a category.

Helping Elaine

To the Editor:

A year or two ago many of your readers must have seen the program on Elaine Bosler's animal shelter on Channel 4's "Evening Magazine."

To bring them up to date, Elaine is still caring, virtually alone, for over 150 abandoned animals, often victims of extreme cruelty.

She never destroys an animal with a chance for survival and successfully treats them for mange, heartworm and severe injuries. But above all, at great personal sacrifice and with no real financial security, she gives them shelter, fenced-in open space to play in, and abundant love.

Her place is unique and truly humane.

These pets can be adopted; they are spayed, neutered and vaccinated for you, but many are so disabled, they must stay with Elaine. Despite people's growing interest, she is always dangerously short of funds. It is rewarding to see her grateful appreciation of even the smallest contribution, which is tax deductible.

Recently there has been a great disaster. She has undergone major surgery and cannot work for three or four months. This means hiring a helper, which she cannot afford without help.

If you care about animals, please send her a contribution, any amount you can. The address is: The Bosler Humane Society, P.O. Box 537, Barre, Mass. 01005.

Home safety

To the Editor:

Our homes would be a lot safer from fire if they were designed differently.

Open stairways, unlike those in school buildings, invite the passage of smoke, heat and flames upward.

Designers of buildings fear that to incorporate enclosures limiting fire spread would not be aesthetically attractive and would inhibit sales..

I, for one, feel a house could be built safer without being unattractive and within reach of our pocketbooks.

We must look more to the architects than to the fire service for progress in this direction because they create the living quarters.

to voters and educate them on how to use them in the voting booth.

Katz, who received 148 votes to Tennant's 319, said he will challenge the election. Katz charged that the voting machine "malfunctioned" and that many of his stickers fell off and were not counted.

Katz, who called Tennant at about 1 a.m. to congragulate him on his victory, said, "It was a rotten system. It just did not work out. There were a lot of errors made."

He said, "I had people telling me stickers were being ripped off the rolls. It just does not make sense."

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, would not respond specifically to Katz's charges. However, he did say, "I think the election went well enough considering the use of stickers. Everyone was under the same handicap."

"Stickers are always a problem in any election," he said. "You are asking people to do something they ordinarily don't know anything about."

Licarie reported a variety of problems with the stickers, including many people putting them in the wrong slots and not affixing the stickers properly.

A total of 20,853 Democrats and 2,100 Republicans voted in the primary. Licarie said that the 47 percent turnout was one of the highest "in recent years."

Licarie, who had predicted a 30 percent turnout, attributed the large number of voters to the controversial 4th Congressional District Democratic primary between Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark and Back Bay Rep. Barney Frank.

"General interest over the past few days spurred a lot of activity," he said.

Katz, who also received 176 votes in the democratic state representative race, had urged both democrats and republicans to vote for him in the two primaries. As a result, he split his vote.

Katz explained, "My mistake was that I made it too simple for people. I did not feel it was fair for me to urge them to vote for me and not be able to vote in the 4th Congressional District contest."

Schur celebrated her devastating victory with more than 100 of her supporters at her home in Waban, where champagne flowed and spirits soared.

Schur decalred her victory at about 10:45 p.m. saying, "It looks as if with this kind of magnificent majority, little doubt remains."

As campaign supporters cheered, Schur said, "The obstacles in the this campaign were as big as they could have been in any campaign."

"The problem with stickers had us all very uncertain about what the results would be." she said, adding, "Today, there was the most marvelous outpouring of warmth and help anyone could want."

Schur, who built a campaign organization of more than 200 people, also thanked her husband, who stood by her side along with their two daughters.

"It would be impossible for a woman to have gone as far as I have in politics in Newton without a husband who is supportive. Without Peter Schur, I don't think I would have gone anywhere in politics."

Schur said the essence of her campaign was the 9,639 stickers mailed to voters in the city.

As Schur was making her victory speech, she received a telephone call from challenger Paul Daley congragulating her.

Tony Croce, Schur's campaign manager, said Schur is looking forward to running against Tennant.

Croce explained, "We will not take anything for granted. We will press until Nov 4. Our problem may be overconfidence."

He added, "We look forward to running against Tennant. We know it will be a good issue oriented campaign."

Tennant, who received the news of his victory at City Hall with several of his supporters, accepted the .... win with beaming confidence.

"The election went as I thought it would"' he said. "Now that the battle is over, we have got to go out and win the war."

Tennant's mild acceptance of his victory was in sharpcontrast to the juhildtion at Schur's home. However, Tennant appeared confident and satisfied.

"I honestly feel regardless of the vote forced out that I can still commandeer enough votes to win the election in November."

He explained, "Tommorow morning we will start a reorganization. I expect with a good retrenching to gain a lot more organizational strength than I have now." Tennant added, "I think experience was the difference. It is too bad because Bob (Katz) is a good aggressive statesman of the future.".

Tennant, who has been an Aldermen for 17 consecutive years, campaigned to abolish Middlesex County government and also supports a state spending cap.

Schur, who has also served several terms ' on the Board of Aldermen, also campaigned for a spending cap. In addition, she favors "sunset" legislation which will act as a watchdog on various state agencies.

Schur swept to victory winning every precinct, including Daley's home precinct ,three, by almost 200 votes.

In addition, Schur defeated Mrs. Walsh in her home precinct, eight, by a margin of 221 votes to 160 votes.

Tennant won every precinct, but freshman Ald. Katz's home precinct, eight, where he lost by a margin of 71 votes to 21 votes.

Close to 50% of Newton voted

NEWTON — Almost 50 percent of Newton voters turned out yesterday to give the nod to Barney Frank in the congressional race and vote in other Middlesex County races.

Voter turnout belied earlier predictions of 33 percent when Newton went more than 2-1 for Frank over Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark in the congressional race, 14,113 votes to 6,398.

Newton also favored Middlesex County Commissioner candidiates S. Lester Ralph and Thomas Larkin over third-place finisher, incumbent Michael McLaughlin.

The vote in the county commissioners' race was: 7563 for Ralph, 6136 for Larkin and 5854 for McLaughlin.

Edward Henneberry, Sheriff William Buckley's heir apparent, was the clear favorite in Newton, garnering 5618 votes. James Breslin and Charles Buckley had the next highest vote totals and almost tied each other — 2355 and 2322 respectively.

Clark, in his bid for Congress, held Newton in only one of its eight wards. He narrowly took Ward 1 by a vote of 1283-1005.

For Frank the only other close vote was in Ward 3 where Clark got 1217 votes to Frank's 1280.

The same held true for incumbent County Commissioner Michael McLaughlin, who won Ward 1 but ran close to winners Ralph and Larkin in the other wards and lost to them in Wards 5-8.

Joint custody

By PETER HARRINGTON

A mother and father who are married to each other both have legal custody of their minor children.

Legal custody is a very broad power which gives the parents direct control over their children in such matters as education, personality development, medical and dental treatment; and day-to-day control over their lives including when they get up, when they go to bed, what they eat and with whom they play.

When a domestic problem arises between the father and the mother and the parties seek a divorce, one of the first issues to be discussed is the custody, care, support and education of the minor children of the marriage.

One of the basic elements in our system of laws is the concept that the court's sole concern is what is in the best interest and welfare of the children.

Over and over again the courts have said that when the question of custody is raised the courts will decide based on the general rule of law that it is the children's welfare and best interests that are the paramount and controlling considerations in all disputes over the custody of a child.

The rights of parents to custody are not absolute and the disposition of the children is not controlled by hard and fast rules of law but by exercise of sound judicial discretion.

By common law and up to the end of the 19th century, it was an elementary principle that the father was entitled to the custody of his minor children.

In the early years of the 20th century, customs began to change and the rights of the father were no longer recognized as supreme.

A growing body of law arose which in large part established a bias in the favor of mothers. From the 1920's on, mothers were virtually assured of the legal custody of their children in a dispute between parents.

This change of opinion by the courts was the result of a change in public opinion concerning the roles of a mother and father. Industrialization, which separated the wage labor of men from the private lalb labor of women, was the substantial factor.

As our culture became both urban and industrialized, the father worked away from the house and left the raising of the childrn children, for all practical purposes, in the hands of the mother. Parallel to that change was the development of the philosophy of "maternal instinct" which made a virtue out of the fact that the mother assumed the homekeeping tasks.

The inevitable result was the tendency of psychoanalysts and others to concentrate their attention on the mother as the influential parent and to minimize the influence of the father and of peers.

Further, during that period, divorce was granted only for fault, and usually to the mother. Depriving the father of legal custody was considered a form of punishment.

Also, divorce was not a socially acceptable solution to domestic problems and it was generally accepted that the mother would not have obtained the divorce unless the father was a person of bad moral character. Such a person obviously was not fit to participate in the rearing of children.

During the past decade we have seen a new change in society's attitude concerning divorce with the acceptance of the principle that a divorce may be granted for irreconcilable differences (no-fault divorce).

In Massachusetts, there is a growing practice to divide the rights of custody between the parents.

This is accomplished by granting the mother and the father joint legal custody of their minor children. The Court then establishes the primary residence of the child and determines which parent shall be responsible

Orient Expressed will be running through Sept. 27

BOSTON — The Orient Expressed, a trade and cultural exposition focusing on Hong Kong and Kyoto, Japan, is being presented in the downtown Boston Jordan Marsh store through Sept. 27. The expo is a gift to the people and city of Boston on the occasion of its Jubilee 350.

Other concurrent Jubilee 350 activities expressive of Boston's international ties include Boston Week, with visits from honored guests such as the Lord Mayor of Boston, England; representation by Boston's numerous consulates at the Official Reception Center, City Hall; and the Great Cities of the World Conference, attended by mayors, urban planners and business leaders of the world's major cities, including delegations from Kyoto, Japan and Hong Kong.

The Orient Expressed was ushered in Friday evening with a black tie party which benefited the New England Medical Center and was held in the Boston store with a preview of the Oriental showcase.

Opening day ceremonies on the Downtown Crossing Saturday, Sept. 13 at 10 a.m., signaled the beginning of the two weeks' festivities at Jordan Marsh. A traditional Lion Dance, signifying good luck, was executed by a group from Boston's Chinatown, and there were colorful appearances by visiting guests, such as the Miramar Hotel Classical Dance Troup from Hong Kong and Japanese Gagaku and Bugaku artists. Visiting and local dignitaries presided over the festivities with Mr. Elliot J. Stone, president and chief executive officer of Jordan Marsh, as he opened the ceremonial kusudama, inaugurating this comprehensive salute to the merchandise offerings and cultural color of Japan and Hong Kong.

On Sunday, Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Waterfront Park was the scene of the Orient Expressed Sports Day, a family celebration of athletic endeavors as well as cultural contributions. There was a 12-mile marathon swim and a five-mile marathon race with Japanese runners, which was open to the Boston-area public and which began and ended in the waterfront neighborhood. Local college crews representing Northeastern, B.U., M.I.T. and Harvard-Radcliffe competed in dragon boat races on the harbor. Two authentic teakwood dragon boats were imported from Hong Kong for this event which, in traditional China, is an annual celebration honoring the spirit of the famous fifth century patriot Ch'U Yuan and symbolizing the desire for rain and a good harvest. Other activities included kit flying by a Japanese team, martial arts performances and artistic presentations by guests from Hong Kong; Kyoto, Japan; and Boston's Chinatown.

The Jordan Marsh downtown store will be transformed into an Oriental environment with displays of ancient Chinese Imperial robes, Japanese kimonos, Oriental kites and festival flags, a dragon boat, a tea ceremony room and exhibits loaned by Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, the Peabody Museum in Salem, Milton's Museum of the American China Trade and Boston's Children's Museum.

Apparel and home furnishings imported from Hong Kong and Japan to tempt the buyer's palate are on all six floors of the store. Set up in the store to represent the Orient will be special shops such as Mikimoto and Matsuya Ginza from Japan; fortune arts and furniture and Robert Tailoring from Hong Kong; and — for the first time ever in the United States — Chinese Arts and Crafts (HK) Ltd. with treasures from the People's Republic of China.

Performances will occur on the first-floor center state along with demonstrations throughout the store by artisans from Hong Kong and from the Kyoto Fair, an element of the Orient Expressed with features the culture and industry of Boston's Sister City.

The Orient Expressed logo is the character in Chinese and Japanese calligraphy which signifies the continual wish for health, happiness and long life.

Since Boston is a city with early roots in the history of China trade and with strong ties to Kyoto, Japan through its Sister City association, the Jordan Marsh Orient Expressed is a tribute to the past, present and future links between Hong Kong, Japan and Boston.

Boston's Mayor Kevin H. White said, "We expect the Orient Expressed to play a major role in further strengthening the already firm ties among our great cities." Katharine D. Kane, deputy mayor of Boston and chairman, Jubilee 350, stated, "We enthusiastically welcome and support the Jordan Marsh Orient Expressed which is a very special part of Jubilee 350 and a unique contribution to our Great Cities of the World Conference.

Thomas M. Macioce, president and chief executive officer of Allied Stores Corporation, the parent company of Jordan Marsh, affirmed that "our unbounded confidence in the vitality of Boston — the nation's sixth largest market — prompted our decision to undertake this extraordinary store event."

According to Elliot J. Stone, "With this two-week exposition, Jordan Marsh, in its traditonal role as an innovative department store, will introduce its customers to an exceptional variety of high-quality merchandise and the latest in fashions from Hong Kong and Japan.

Cultural and special events will all be presented daily in the downtown Boston store through Saturday, Sept. 27.

Financial expert will be speaking at Chestnut Hill

NEWTON — Venita VanCaspel will be the featured speaker at a seminar sponsored by Mitchell, Hoilman & Associates, a Braintree financial planning group, on Thursday, Sept. 25.

VanCaspel is the founder and president of VanCaspel & Co., a Houston stock brokerage and financial planning firm. She will address the question of achieving financial independence and protecting yourself in a changing economic world.

Topics such as life insurance, real estate and energy limited partnerships, triple net leases, market timing and mutual funds, as well as hard assets — gold, silver, diamonds and investment quality stamps — will be discussed.

The seminar will take place at the Sidney Hill Country Club in Chestnut Hill at 7:30 p.m.. The public is invited to attend at no charge. Those planning to come should contact Sue Evans at 848-4150 as seating will be limited.

She studies herself to death

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Kathi Smith's parents had wanted their daughter to go to college. She did, but they were thinking about a different course of studies than what she had in mind.

Kathi is a student in the Kansas City Community College's program for mortuary science, the only accredited mortuary school in Kansas and one of the few of its type in the country.

She lives several nights a week at a local mortuary. Since the mortuary is on call all night, an apartment is set up in the building complete with kitchen, showers and bunk beds.

There was a protest from her parents. But Kathi won out.

"I've wanted to go into the mortuary business for years," she said.

Kathi, from Joplin, Mo., is one of approximately 50 students in the program. Among her classes: "Restorative Art 110," which teaches the art of reconstructing the faces of the deceased; "The Grieving Process," "Mortician's Law," "Pathology" and "Embalming Theory."

Throw in the regular two-year schedule of speech and English composition and a few business courses and a student is almost ready to take his or her exam from the Kansas Funeral Directors Association or the Kansas Board of Embalming.

But before that, the student must go to a funeral home for "the hands-on training" as it's described by Merle Harris, Kansas City Community College's academic advisor for vocational studies.

For two semesters, students work for class credit in one of the approximately 30 participating funeral homes in the area. Like Kathi, many of them have living quarters in the mortuaries where they work.

"It's a significant way for a student to cut expenses," Todd said.

While at the funeral homes the students learn all facets of the business. Embalming is part of the course.

"I have to do six bodies a week," says Kathi. "It's really a lot of work."

Westwood teacher wins grievance fight

WESTWOOD — An arbitrator has ruled in favor of a junior high teacher in a grievance matter that began more than two years ago.

Arbitrator Daniel MacLeod of Boston University Law School ruled that the School Committee had violated the teacher's contract when a junior high principle used sick leave usage to determine health evaluations and that the committee had acted improperly by hearing the grievance in a public meeting on March 9, 1978.

John Sloan, vice-president of the Westwood Teachers' Association, said that the teacher had used five days sick leave when the principal told the teacher that anymore use of sick days would be over the school's average. The principal reportedly told the teacher that this would reflect on the teacher's record even though the teacher's contract called for 15 sick days.

Sloan said that the teacher took the grievance through the administration and then the School Committee which heard the grievance in public.

The aribitrator ruled that the committee violated the teacher's contractual right to confidentiality by holding the hearing in public.

Sloan said that the matter dragged on because the School Committee maintained that just the grievance on sick leave was being discussed and not whether the teacher's confidentiality had been violated.

Sloan also said that he felt the committee delayed in selecting an arbitrator.

The arbitrator directed that the committee post a notice that it recognizes its obligation of confidentiality for 15 days beginning with the first day of school.

Sloan said that ruling was complied with and the notice posted.

Mr. Merchant,

You've been in business for 5, 10, 20, 40 or maybe 100 years

SO WHY ADVERTISE?

Very simply, you should advertise to get business.

But why advertise when business is good? And, how can you afford to advertise when business is slow?

You should advertise when business is good to keep it that way; to keep ahead of the competion; to expand your product lines or sales area; add another location. Remember in business you can't stand still. If you try to stand still your competition is moving ahead and you are then actually slipping behind.

You should advertise when business is slow to attract new customers, to keep your old customers, to maintain your volume and momentum.

Newspaper advertising is a mighty salesman that takes your message right into your customers' homes . . . where buying decisions are made. In a very real sense, advertising helps keep you in business.

YOUR BUSINESS IS OUR BUSINESS . . .

Temple Shalom ushers in festival of Sukkot

NEWTON — On Thursday, Sept. 25, Temple Shalom of Newton will usher in the Festival of Sukkot with a family service at 10:30 a.m.

The service will be conducted by Rabbi Murray Rothman, spiritual leader of Temple Shalom and his assistant, Rabbi Jeffrey Silberman with the cooperation of the children of the religious school. A reception will be held in the Sukkah following the service.

The Festival of Sukkot, one of three pilgrim festivals proscribed by the Bible, commemorates the ancient harvest festival of Israel.

One of this holiday's chief symbols is the Sukkah, a temporary hut used by the farmers during the harvest in ancient Israel. The Sukkah was also the abode of the Jews as they wandered through the desert.

This fragile structure, host to all of nature's vagaries, symbolizes the frailty and transience of man. Open at the top, the Sukkah reminds us to lift our eyes to the heavens, the source of light and life.

Mrs. Phyllis Baron, festival chairman and her committee, are in charge of decorating the Sukkah with the assistance of Mr. Efrain Chayoun. Children of the religious school bring offerings of fruit and vegetables, symbolic of the harvest. At the conclusion of the festival these are distributed to local children's homes and hospitals.

Travel Talk by Josephine Arria

One of the most enjoyable things about traveling is being able to shop in different places. However, before spending money on purchases in another country, check the prices of the things you are interested in buying here. China and crystal, including taxes and mailing costs from England are about one-third of the cost in the United States. Made-to-order clothes in such places as Hong Kong and Italy are great bargains. The biggest savings are usually to be found in local products such as perfume in France, silver work in Mexico and baskets in Haiti.

BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC. 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner, is offering an exciting opportunity to travel to Israel. Reserve now for the trip of a lifetime that will show you the wonders you've read and heard about, allow you to visit the sites that make up the history of the world and to add a unique touch of cultural understanding to the world of today. For the awakening of a liketime, call us today. Open 9-5:30, Mon.-Fri., 'til 8 Thurs., 9-1 Sat. Tel. 244-8460 All standard credit cards accepted.

TRAVEL TIP:

Village women hold a theater benefit

FRAMINGHAM — A performance by The Next Move Theater, Boston's critically acclaimed improvisational revue, will highlight the Tenth Anniversary Luncheon of the New England Villages' Women's Committee Wednesday, Oct. 29, at the Chateau de Ville, Framingham.

Proceeds from the event and the organization's accompanying Program Book, will benefit the Villages, a non-profit organization dedicated to providing a fulfilling way of life for mentally retarded adults. The first Village, which opened its doors at Pembroke eight years ago, offers an opportunity for retarded men and women to live and work in a supportive, non-institutional, community environment.

Mrs. Theodore Alfond of Weston, Luncheon Chairman, described the choice of The Next Move's musical entertainment as "a departure from our usual guest speaker."

"Because this is our Tenth Anniversary Year, we wanted to provide something extra and unusual for the thousands of loyal supporters who have attended the luncheons over the years," Mrs. Alfond said.

Women's Committee, with 3,500 members throughout the Greater Boston Area, is the major fund-raising arm of New England Villages. By the conclusion of the tenth year functions, the . organization hopes to bring to one million dollars the sum of its contributions during the first decade.

Pre-luncheon activities on the 29th will begin at 0 a.m. in the Chateau de Ville lobby, where a completely revamped concept in boutiques, entitled "Gourmet Gallery," will be displayed. Under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Louis Katz of Newton Center and Mrs. John Hesse of Weston, the boutiques will focus exclusively on gifts for the hostess and the home.

The Next Move's performance will begin at 11:45 a.m. with luncheon following. The affair will conclude with raffles and prizes gathered through a committee headed by Mrs. Jack Darman of Sharon.

Mrs. Robert Berk of West Newton is in charge of the program. Past Luncheon Chairmen Mrs. Jerome Pearlstein, Mrs. Marvin Starensier and Mrs. William Widerman, all of Newton, will serve as advisors.

More than 1,000 women are expected to attend the pre-paid luncheon. Reservations for one or for tables of ten persons may be obtained by phoning Mrs. Stanley Lesnick, 899-6384; Mrs. Leonard Safon, 449-1848, or Mrs. Charles Zraket, 235-6499.

High Tar Smokers Convert To Merit.

"Best tasting low tar I've tried," report MERIT smokers in latest survey.

Taste Quest Ends

Latest research provides solid evidence that MERIT is a satisfying long-term taste alternative to high tar cigarettes.

Smoker Tests Offer More Proof

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar.

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed.

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

Tigers tackle Spartans in home opener

By JONATHAN GREENSPAN
Staff Writer

Full steam ahead. Last week, football fanatics only got a glimpse of the upcoming schoolboy season, this week the bulk of the area high school teams will hit the paydirt, giving all locals a better look at the season ahead.

Topping the weekend's agenda will be Newton North's home opener, a non-league match-up between the Tigers and the Bay State League Spartans of Framingham North at Dickinson Stadium on Friday afternoon. Key Saturday contests include Boston College High at Waltham in a non-league confrontation and Watertown in its opener vs. Dedham at Dedham High.

The remainder of the Saturday schedule pits Newton South at Littleton, Wayland at Lynnfield and on Sunday, the Lancers of Newton Catholic tackle Notre Dame away from home, St. Patrick's will play Hudson Catholic in a Catholic Surburban League opener at Victory Field and the Weston Wildcats travel to Providence, Rhode Island to encounter Moses Brown.

Waltham High Head Coach Norm Walker will see immediately just how much his boys matured during preseason play. In Framingham North, his club confronts a big, strong squad both offensively and defensively, one which will hit and will expect to get hit.

If the Tigers fail to intimidate, Newton could be in trouble. The Spartans have a big backfield and two tall ends who give them a balanced offensive arsenal. Look for Walker to have his boys hitting by game time Friday.

Offensively, the Tigers will keep it simple. Al Fortune, John Corsi and Peter Jennings will pound out yardage while strong-armed senior quarterback Bob Billings will go up top.

Forget about last week is about the only thing which can be said about Waltham's disappointing opening day loss to the Natick Redmen a week ago. Saturday is a new day, a new opponent and hopefully easier footing for Bob Conners and corps.

The sole word in the Hawk vocabulary at the moment is execution. BC High's defense is young, only one returning letterwinner, and if Waltham sheds away its mistakes of last week, they could amend themselves very nicely.

BC, a perennial top-notch contender in the Catholic Coference, returns three veterans to the offense, including quarterback Eric Rosso. The 6-1, 175 pound senior provides the leadership and doubles as the club's punter. The meeting between the two clubs is the first since 1929.

"It will be a typical first game," said Watertown Head Coach John Barbati of his club's initial contest vs. Dedham Saturday. "The team that makes the fewest mistakes will come out on top."

If the Red Raiders do not suffer from opening day jitters, they will do all right. During the pre-season, Watertown overcame its relative inexperience with solid, steady ball, including a 14-13 victory over Newton North in the club's final exhibition encounter.

The game will probably be decided in the pits, where Watertown boasts a sturdy corps of offensive linemen. Opposite the trenchmen will be an equally tough Marauder defensive line whose strength is against the run.

"We're going to try and take what they give us," mentioned Barbati. "We'll both run and pass in an effort to better balance our attack." Odds are Dedham will not give the Red Raiders much, each yard gained will be be a yard earned.

The Newton South Lions are cubs until they earn their claws. Inexperience oozes from each position on the Lion squad and in the words of Head Coach Art Kojoyian, the club is "green."

Defensively, the Lions will start 10 first-year men and could have trouble defensing against Littleton's unbalanced front line. The sole experienced defender is all-league safety Michael Kasten whose presense alone gives the Lions a reliable secondary, but they will need more on Sunday.

Offensively, Kasten teams with Mitch Podufaly and Arthur Walton to give Newton South a good group of ballcarriers. Handing the ball off to this threesome will be junior signal-caller Jon Greenburg. Greenburg has done "pretty well" during the preseason but that is all behind him now. Saturday is for keeps.

Kepner to Fitgerald. Lynnfield secondary men will be whispering the names of this duo over and over all week while they toss and turn in their sleep. To stop this combination is their primary concern. In other words, if you're going to get beat, do not let these guys beat you.

"It's no great secret," said Wayland Head Coach Joe Lukis, "We're going to throw the ball to Kepner if possible." In last week's non-league match-up vs. Holliston, the 6 foot, 170 pound Kepner hauled in five Fitzgerald aerials for 114 yards and set up both Warrior scores.

Complementing the stellar air attack, is senior back Scott Knous. Knous, an 800-yard rusher a year ago chalked up 101 yards last week on 20 carrys and if the dynamic duo of Fitzgerald and Kepner continue to make opposition defenses weary, then Knous should continue to pound out yardage.

Lynnfield on the other hand, brings a fine running attack into the contest, one which Lukis considers "difficult" to defend. But he will have all the help he needs on defense where he has 10 returning letterwinners trying to wreak havoc on opposition ballcarriers.

Tony Rossetti last week gained 79 yards on 15 carries; this Sunday all his maneuvering will be on the sidelines, the Co-Capt. broke a bone in his elbow against St. Clements and will be lost to the Lancers for at least a month. Rossetti, the club's workhorse and leader on both offense and defense is perhaps the one guy Newton Catholic could not afford to lose.

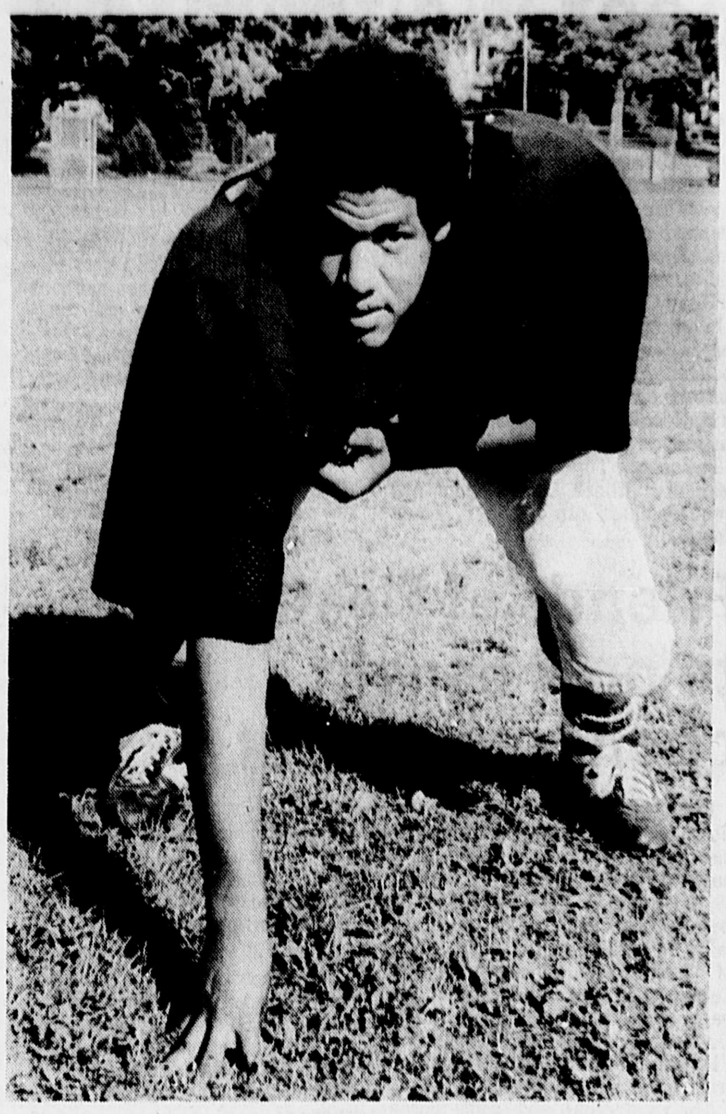
Yet the Lancers have no choice, the show must go on. Now the show has a new head star, however, starting quarterback Dan Conboy will test his damaged finger, replacing the inexperienced Tom Finelli. Another victim of last Sunday's defeat is tackle John King. The 6-3, 225 pounder will not play this week, further deleting the Lancer's reserve corps.

Notre Dame, coming off a 26-13 loss to Tingsboro High, enjoys putting the ball in the air. "They have two good, giant sized ends," said Newton Catholic Head Coach Tom Raeke. "Tim O'Conner will shadow one of them." Yet O'Conner's task is minor compared to the greater one faced by the Lancers, to make up for Rossetti's absence.

Weston will be somewhat quicker off the line than they were against Dover-Sherborn according to Head Coach Pete Hall. The Weston attack, which did not get on track until late in the game should do better against Moses-Brown. If the Wildcats are to come out on the long side of Sunday's contest, then the club can not squander opportunities.

Last week the defense presented the offense with six turnovers, one late in the game on the Dover-Sherborn 30-yard line, but all for naught. The Wildcat offense bogged down and failed to take advantage of the fine field position.

The meeting is the first between these two opponents.



Newton North fullback Al Fortune

St. Clement's gets jump

Aerials sink Lancers, 15-6

By ERNIE JONES
Sports Writer

It was a bad omen of what was to come.

Newton Catholic got through the kickoff all right, but St. Clement's quarterback Jim Macaluso threw a 60-yard touchdown pass to halfback Ray Valezquez on the first play from scrimmage to give the Anchormen a quick 6-0 lead.

Despite some defensive adjustments by Lancer Coach Tom Raeke, Newton Catholic fell, 15-6, in its Catholic Suburban League opener against St. Clement's Sunday at Dilboy Field.

What's a coach to do?

Raeke found himself down at the end of the first half, 12-6, on the strength of St. Clement's passing game. He shuffled his defensive personnel around to stop the Anchormen's aerial attack in the second half but they also made changes and ran Newton Catholic out of time with 120 yards on the ground.

Raeke said, "Pass defense, failure to pressure their quarterback and too many penalties hurt the most."

After St. Clement's first-play score, Newton Catholic came right back. Phil Cappello ran back a punt 18 yards to put the Lancers on the winner's 15 yardline. Tony Rosetti pounded off tackle and up the middle four times to bring the ball to the one. John Venditti went of right tackle John King for six markers and tie the game.

In the second quarter, Macaluso went to the air again and found right end Jack McCarthy zipping up the right side behind a Newton Catholic defender. McCarthy hauled in the pass and went all the way for an 82-yard TD.

The Lancers came to life in the closing minutes of the half with a 46- yard drive on the rushing of Rosetti and Tim O'Connor. Newton Catholic failed on a pass attempt from its opponent's 45 to end the half, 12-6.

Venditti was the defensive standout in the half. He alertly picked off a Macaluso pass on his own two yardline and ran it back eight yards to put the chill on a Somerville Catholic threat.

The Anchormen recovered a fumble on the first play of the second half and tried to pick up where they left off. But Macaluso dipped into the well too often and failed on two passes to hit his receivers, thanks to the adjusted Lancer defense.

But the winners compensated and ground out the yards with off-tackle, counter and trap plays. They put together a 40 yard drive which ended when Macaluso again failed on two attempts in the air and after a Lancer fumble, the team drove 47 yards to the four yardline of Newton Catholic. Tough line play by the Lancers stalled the St. Clement's effort. Clutch tackles by King and Venditti forced the Anchormen to try a field goal.

John Needham had a point after blocked on the first St. Clement's TD, but the Anchormen shored up the holes in the line and Needham put it threw the uprights for three points, a 22-yard effort.

In the fourth quarter, The Lancers got their passing attack untracked with a pair of completions by first-year quarterback Tom Finelli, a seven-yard throw to John Gionnone and a 17-yard pass to Cappello. St. Clement's defense had had enough and picked off a Finelli aerial attempt. Newton Catholic's regular signal-caller, Dan Conboy, has an injured hand and played the game as a running back and defensive saftey.

The Anchormen ate up the clock on the ground to notch a win for their new coach, Phil Perry.

Newton Catholic was penalized for 65 yards in the contest which twice thwarted its offensive momentum.

North girls zip past Waltham, 4-1

The Newton North girls' soccer team netted a goal in each quarter and cakewalked to an easy 4-1 victory over the Waltham Friday.

Like the Tigers had done the Tuesday before against North Quincy, they stormed onto the field, outshooting the Hawks 31-12. "We really dominated the contest," said a pleased Head Coach Barry Howland.

Leading the Tiger attack was center Lori Goldenberg. The striker assisted on two goals and had one of her own on the afternoon, the Tigers' first of the game. Capt. Diane Lewis assisted on the play.

The second Tiger score came off the head of halfback Debbie Quinn and was assisted by striker Linda Romano.

Waltham tallied its lone goal on a penalty shot off the foot of Janis Cormeir but failed to cash in on a another golden opportunity when Tiger keeper Carol Summers stopped a second Cormeir penalty shot in the second quarter.

In the third period, The Tigers added an insurance goal when halfback JoAnne Rossetti took a drop pass from Goldenberg and netted a score from 18 yards out. Goldenberg again entered the scorecard in the final stanza when she earned an assist on Becka Bordin's goal, the club's fourth of the game.

Newton North combats Quincy at 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday in a home contest.

Friends of Floating to hold benefit open tournament

BOSTON — "Raise A Racquet for Boston Floating Hospital," a racquetball and tennis tournament, will be held Friday through Sunday, Oct. 17-19, to benefit the building fund for the new Boston Floating Hospital for Infants and Children, the pediatric unit of Tufts-New England Medical Center. The tournament, which will be held at the Racquetime Club in Dedham, is sponsored by Friends of Floating, a group of parents and friends formed to aid the Hospital.

The racquetball and tennis tournament, approved by both the AARA and the NELTA, is open to all. The entry fee is $20 for singles and $15 per person doubles. Every entrant is guaranteed two rounds of play and the entry fee includes refreshments, a Saturday night buffet and a souvenir T-shirt. Trophies and awards will be given to winners, finalists and consolation round winners in nine racquetball and twelve tennis categories. Deadline for entries is Oct. 4.

Friends of Floating is a group of parents whose children have been patients at Boston Floating Hospital and other friends of the Hospital who formed last year to aid in increasing public awareness of the work of the Hospital and providing funds for the proposed new Floating Building which will replace present overcrowded and outmoded facilities.

For entry forms or more information on the "Raise A Racquet" tournament, call 326-2900 or 956-5070.

YMCA to sponsor fitness test and class

NEWTON — The West Suburban YMCA in Newton will be offering Fitness Testing on Saturday, Oct. 4, to be followed by a 10-week beginners fitness class.

For those men and women beginning an exercise regimen the American Heart Association says "Sudden unregulated and injurious strenous exercise is a serious risk for the sedentary person. This risk can be reduced or eliminated through proper preliminary testing and the setting up of safe monitored exercise classes."

The Y's fitness testing will consist of:

Applicant must first receive signed clearance from his-her personal physician before a test can be given.

Tests will measure flexibility, body composition, blood pressure and cardiovascular endurance.

After tests are completed, applicants will meet individually with certified physical fitness specialist and review test results. At this time you will be placed in a beginners fitness class.

At the end of the ten-week course you will be re-tested at no additional cost.

All testing must be on an appointment basis. For more information and consent forms call Bill Kelley at the West Suburban Y, 276 Church Street, Newton at 244-6050.

Y fees rise

NEWTON — The West Suburban "Y" in Newton (formerly the Newton YMCA) recently announced that due to spiraling costs it , will be forced to raise its membership rates as of Oct. 1.

Director of Public Relations, Steve Tammaro, says, "it is not something we want to do, but a review of our financial situation makes it necessary. We are really feeling the pinch. Our heating cost is up 54 percent from last year and our electricity cost is also up 41 percent over that same time."

The reason that the rate hike is being put off until October is to allow anyone who is wishing to become a member to do it during the month of September at the old rates.

The "Y" will be entering its 105th year of service to the community. It serves the Newtons, Belmont, Watertown, WestOn, Wayland and Wellesley.

For more information on the facilities or membership, contact the West Suburban "Y", 276 Church St., Newton, 244-6050.

Schoolboy soccer round-up

Hawks thwart Tigers 1-0

By JONATHAN GREENSPAN
Staff Writer

A Steve LaForest goal 10 minutes into the second period was all the Waltham Hawks needed to ward off a powerful Newton North soccer squad in top Surburban League action Friday afternoon.

In other weekend soccer, Weston dropped a tough 1-0 decision to Wayland and Watertown dumped Melrose 1-0.

"I couldn't of expected any more of my kids at this point in time," said Hawk Head Coach John Graceffa. "We started the season off with three games in five days and to beat Newton North at anytime away from home is a feat."

Yet the win did not come easy, nor without its victims. The Tigers controlled play from the opening whistle and only an inability to finish off the play kept Newton North off the board. "We did everything we were suppose to except put the ball in the net," said Tiger Coach Tom Williams.

"We had two or three one-on-one opportunities between us and the keeper and we either hit it over the net or wide. I can't fault our overall play, only our ability to finish things off."

The lone score of the contest came off the foot of junior left-wing Steve LaForest on an assist from Bill Gillespie. Gillespie, stationed at his right halfback slot hit LaForest with a pass as he cut between two Tiger backliners from his left-wing position. LaForest controlled the ball on a single bounce, pushed it ahead once and slid it by the onrushing keeper.

"It was an all-out team effort," said Graceffa of his team's solid performance. "At the end of the game we showed a lot of poise in holding them off."

Earning the shutout for the Hawks was senior netminder Bob Fei. The shutout was Fei's third consecutive whitewash of the young season.

Two Hawk starters, fullback John Aiello and halfback Tom Martin both suffered injuries during the contest. Aiello is listed as doubtful for Tuesday's game vs. Brockton and Martin is listed as probable. "Without these two, we'll be in tough shape," said a concerned Graceffa. "We're hoping that they'll both be able to play."

Newton North's next match is Tuesday at Quincy.

"It was a heartbreaking defeat," said first-year Head-Coach Dave Aptaker of Weston's 1-0 loss at the hands of Wayland on Saturday. "The guys played real well and showed that they're improving. We aquitted ourselves."

The loss, Weston's second of the season without a victory, came after a discouraging 4-0 setback to Lincoln-Sudbury in the Warrior's season opener. "We had a rough draw," said Aptaker of his team's schedule. "Lincoln-Sudbury is a perennial power, Wayland won the league title a year ago and Bedford on Tuesday is a Division II powerhouse."

"If we get over these games and our attitude reamins in tact then we'll be all right. We have a lot of young players as well as many without prior experience. We've been forced to age quickly."

Standouts in Saturday's game were central defenders Frank Hamm and Peter DeLong and keeper Rob Collins. Offensively, right-wing Bill McCabe played a particularly strong game pointed out Aptaker.

Inside forward Raffi Agahririan scored from 11-yards out late in the first period and the single goal was all that was needed for the Red Raiders to best Melrose 1-0 in a Saturday encounter.

According to Arone, it was a team performance which enabled Watertown to bounce back from a 5-2 defeat at the hands of Winchester earlier in the week. "Our defense was good and our entire row of first string forwards played a strong game," said Arone. "The forwards kept enough offensive pressure on Melrose so that their forwards couldn't come up. As a result, they couldn't play their usual game."

Offensively, Agaharian, Fandro Lanni, Kapriel and Harry Cinar each played a fine game and defensively, halfbacks John Georgeoplous, Armand Keuchkarian and fullback Todd Wilson earned praise from their coach.

In the nets Al Fanara notched the shutout thwarting 17 Melrose shots.

Watertown is now 1-1 in Middlesex League competition and on Tuesday travel to Burlington to tackle the Red Devils.

Enos named Brown coach

PROVIDENCE — Maureen Enos, one of the most successful women's high school basketball coaches in Massachusetts, has been named coach of women's basketball at Brown University. The announcement was made by Athletic Director John Parry. Enos replaces Gail Klock who resigned last July to take a coaching position at Colorado School of Mines, in her native state of Colorado.

For the past four years, Enos has been women's basketball coach at Newton North High School, and during that period developed a very weak program into one of the strongest in the state. Her 1979-80 team reached the State finals before losing to Salem High. For her efforts, Enos was named the Boston Globe's "All-Scholastic Basketball Coach of the Year." Her 1978 team reached the state quarter-finals, while her 1979 and 1980 teams were both South Sectional State Champions. Enos was also the varsity field hockey coach at Newton North last year, and the assistant tennis coach for four years.

A graduate of Billerica High School, Enos received her B.S. in Physical Education from Northeastern University (1972) and her Masters degree in Educational Psychology from Boston College (1973).

"Maureen brings a great deal of experience, enthusiasm and knowledge to her new position at Brown," Parry added, "and she is the type of person who can develop our women's basketball program to a highly competitive level. We feel very fortunate to attract someone of her experience and background to Brown."

Prior to her arrival at Newton North in 1976, Enos was a swimming instructor and coach of volleyball, synchronized swimming and softball at Brandeis University in 1973-74, and a physical education instructor and varsity field hockey and lacrosse coach at Pine Manor Junior College (Chestnut Hill) in 1974-75.

Enos also had a long association with Boston College while working at Brandeis, Pine Manor and Newton North. She was the women's varsity basketball coach at B.C. from 1972-76, the women's varsity field hockey coach from 1975-78, the women's athletic trainer there for six months and she also served as interim coordinator of athletics for a four month period. Her B.C. basketball teams were always competitive and in 1976 participated in the Eastern Regional Tournament.

Enos is associated with a number of national, regional and state organizations, and is listed in the United States Registry of Tennis Professionals. She has had articles published on basketball and tennis in a number of national publications relating to coaching and physical education.

THERE IS HOPE FOR THIS COUNTRY YET!

Of all the letters we've received from residential clients, one which came in recently from a Carlisle resident was especially significant to us because of its reference to youth and a hopeful future for our country. The letter concludes as follows:

"Your two installers did an outstanding job, threading wires in impossible places and hiding all but a foot or two. Where they were forced to drill or cut, they patched so expertly that it is almost impossible to detect. They went about their work cheerfully and quietly never stopping for endless "coffee breaks"....using drop cloths and cleaning up after themselves as the went. I was most impressed with all aspects of their work. In a time when so few people seem to care, it is refreshing to see two young men who obviously take pride in a job well done. There is hope for this country yet!!!!"

Because automobile engines are less prone to "knock" in higher altitudes octane levels in mountainous regions often are likely to be lower than elsewhere. For example, in the southern mountain states, according to a recent nationwide survey, regular gasoline had an average octane number of 92.4; to achieve equivalent performance in New England, a similar grade gasoline there had an octane number of 92.4; to achieve equivalent performance in New England, a similar grade gasoline there had an octane number of about 94.9. Within a given region, however, brands of gasoline of the same grade seldom vary by more than one or two octane points.

Langione choreographs Players 'Company'

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The Newton Country Players have selected Joanne Patriarca Langione of Watertown as choreographer for the opener of the silver anniversary year, the multi-award winning musical comedy "Company."

With music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim and book by George Furth, the show will be produced and directed by Danny Kosow of Chestnut Hill, with musical direction by Don M. Boroson of Needham.

Performances of "Company," a love-hate song to marriage, New York and New Yorkers, are slated for Nov. 13-15 and Nov. 20-22 at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln St. The musical, sized up by Douglas Watt in the Daily News as, "so brilliant it passes over one like a shock wave," will be available for programming at reduced rates to sponsor groups and theater parties interested in fundraising for bookings from Nov. 12 to Nov. 23 at the church, with its seating capacity of 200.

In her capacity as choreographer, Mrs. Langione is credited with the dance in "Guys and Dolls" for Temple Beth Avodah, Newton Centre, "The Pajama Game" for Warren JHS, "Pull Up the Ladder" and "Wipe Your Feet and Come In Again" for the Arlington Couger Club, and "How to Succeed in Business" with the Randolph Country Players. Director, choreographer, and head teacher of Dance, Inc. at Newton's Pomroy House, she is certified to teach through the Dance Teachers' Club of Boston, Inc. with the American Society.

For further information regarding theater parties call 332-6512.

Recuperative center opens

ROSLINDALE — The Recuperative Center in Roslindale, a non-sectarian hospital facility, is doubling its capacity and construction is now in progress, getting ready for the Cornerstone— laying Ceremony scheduled for Sept. 28.

The original dining room is being replaced by two beautiful semi-circular areas in a lovely garden setting. Doubling the space in the original building, the reinforced concrete core has been completed and the three floors have been covered over. New and extensive parking has been provided.

When completed the Center will be able to serve 81 patients, for whom the skilled nursing staff will continue to provide the special sympathetic care for which it has become known over the past 25 years.

The Center's experienced therapists administer physical, speech and occupational therapy so that each patient will learn again how to be independent wherever they may live.

Across the street from the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center, The Recuperative Center specializes in short-term admissionS, normally limited to 2-3 weeks.

Its expansion dollar needs have already attracted the attention of hundreds of individuals, Foundations and corporations in the Greater Boston area. With a goal in excess of two million dollars more than 80 percent has already been raised since last December, and The Center seeks the balance in additional gifts now.

It offers a descriptive brochure about its program and plans, and invites inquiries to 1245 Centre St., Roslindale, MA 02131 or by calling its Development Office, 325-1440.

Orson Welles
takes a long, hard look at pay TV.

Is there anything worse than going out and paying for mediocre entertainment? Yes. There's staying home and paying for it. But you show me only the finest, first run films and specials. All in the privacy of my own home, uncut and uninterrupted, and I'd call that pay TV worth paying for. They call it Preview.

Blockbuster Movies. Without commercials. Preview brings you up to 40 first rate, first run films like "10", "Every Which Way But Loose" and "Superman©" each month. Late night R-rated, adult programming on Preview Late Night. Plus award winning foreign films like "Bread and Chocolate". Right in your own home. All uncut and commercial free. And each attraction will be scheduled just often enough to make sure you don't miss anything you want to see.

Specials. You'll see hit plays. Vegas spectaculars. Concerts with super groups like Chicago. And occasional sporting events you won't see anywhere else. On Preview.

See–and hear–the difference. Preview guarantees you good reception wherever you live. Our high powered signal is transmitted from one of New England's tallest TV towers. And we'll equip your home with a special antenna.

Get your money's worth. For less than the cost of a single night at the movies for you and your family, you can enjoy almost 200 hours per month of commercial-free entertainment. Premium programming without the premium price, the hassle of traffic or the long lines. Our low monthly subscription fee is an extraordinary entertainment value. Our installation fee is a lot less than you'd pay for other services. And there are no hidden charges, like large deposits, either.

Or get your money back. Preview is the only pay TV service that offers this unconditional moneyback guarantee: if within two weeks of installation you are not absolutely delighted with Preview, we'll refund your money in full.

How to get it. To find out how to have Preview installed in your home or apartment–even if you have a pay TV service already–just send in the coupon below to Preview, 51 Morgan Drive, Norwood, MA 02062. Or call 617-769-7700 until 11PM.

Leonard Bernstein

Reception next week honoring Bernstein

BOSTON — The Institute of Contemporary Art, announces the appointment of Leonard Bernstein as a member of the museum's newly formed body of honorary trustees.

Bernstein will be honored at a reception to benefit the ICA's Performing Arts Program on Thursday Sept. 25, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. The event will be held on the evening of the world premiere of Bernstein's "Divertimento for Orchestra," commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to open its 100th anniversary season.

Under the leadership of its founder Nathaniel Saltonstall, the Institute of Contemporary Art developed a longstanding commitment to the presentation of emerging young artists from the region.

It was in this tradition that on April 21, 1942, the institute presented the premiere of Leonard Bernstein's first published composition entitled "Sonata for Clarinet and Piano." The concert featured David Glazer, clarinetist and Bernstein, pianist.

In that same year, the institute presented a two-piano concert of new works by Leonard Bernstein and Harold Shapero, and the opera entitled "The Second Hurricane" by Aaron Copland, which was directed by Bernstein.

Born in Lawrence, Bernstein has been associated with Boston throughout his life. He has been widely acclaimed as a conductor, composer, pianist, lecturer and author.

Goodwill urges public to donate

NEWTONVILLE — Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries urges the public to donate clothing and housewares to its attended donation center in Newtonville, at the First National, 647 Washington Street.

Residents of Watertown and Weston as well as Newtonville are all served by Goodwill's attended donation center, (yellow trailer).

"We are in dire need of household goods," said Jim Delaney, Goodwill's Director of Industrial Operations.

The more household goods and clothing are donated to Goodwill, the more handicapped people Goodwill can employ and rehabilitate, Delaney explained.

Goodwill has replaced all of its boxes with attended donation centers throughout Greater Boston to ensure protection of all donated goods. The cn centers are attended Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

After sorting, repairing and packaging at the BostOn facility, the donated goods are sent to the various Morgie's thrift stores in Greater Boston. The closest store to Newtonville is in Waltham at 436 Moody Street.

Nothing is FOREVER . . .most people forget that when buying a home . . . and become painfully aware of it when selling. Sure, it's your home and that place where you can "do your own thing" but someday you'll move. Most people do every 5-8 years. When decorating or making improvements keep in mind that somebody else will someday have to either love it or discount the price enough to change it. — David Wluka, Realtor

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breathtaking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just strcll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

Fund believes in progress

Nova invests in high tech

By PAUL DINGER
Staff Writer

WALTHAM — What oil is to the Arab nations, high technology is to America. And the highest concentration of diversified high tech companies in the world pulses alongside Route 128's "Golden Crescent."

In a Hobbs Brook office, some 300 yards from 128, is a mutual fund, founded a year ago this month, which tracks and invests exclusively in high tech companies. The Nova Fund, Inc. is in its infancy as a mutual fund, but is managed by two investment veterans with impressive track records.

Jack Granahan and Bruce Everitt have followed high technology companies for 20 years for separate Philadelphia companies. Their paths crossed frequently. The "luck of the draw," as Granahan puts it, situated them both in Boston firms.

In a year, their no-load fund has grown from the principals' $100,000 seed money to a million dollar fund with 21 companies in its portfolio.

Granahan was a former Wellington Management Co. fund manager and senior vice president who managed three different Wellington funds at one point. Everitt helped found G.S. Grumman Associates Inc., a Boston firm specializing in institutional investment in science-based industries.

The goal of the Nova Fund is not a regular 12 percent return on investment, but rather growth, cautions Granahan. The typical Nova investor is in his or her late twenties or early thirties. The person invests an average of $3,000 to $5,000. The minimum initial amount a person can invest is $2,000. With little advertising except word-of-mouth recommendations from their legion of contacts, the mutual fund has gathered 125 investors.

Granahan explains why they chose the name Nova by framing the word in the air with his index fingers: which often reduces costs for the company, is another argument for investing in high tech businesses. "The ability for a 'chip' to do more things each year means the customer can get more bang for the buck," explains Granahan.

Everitt illustrates the point by pulling out a set of figures he's compiled on calculators. "A big clunky pre-1966 calculator with no separate logic sold for $1700," he points out. By 1976, the cost of a calculator with more functions had dropped to $6. The cost of the logic plummeted from $170 to 50 cents. Granahan answers the stock market doomsayers by referring them to the market. "In spite of the economy's siege by foreign competition and inflation, there is growth in the stock market.

"By most methods of valuing," he says, "stocks are under-valued as assets — in relation to assets like real estate and gold. Stocks haven't caught up to inflation yet."

"Nova means 'new things'in Latin, and it's part of the word 'innovation.' Also, the most brilliant stage of a star's existence is the latter, called the Nova stage."

The universe of companies they track are divided into three broad categories: established growth companies, emerging growth companies, and special opportunities. They are then further divided up into types of high technology companies — instruments, communications and commercial equipment, aerospace/defense, medical, energy, industrial, components, office equipment, and specialty chemicals and materials.

Among the local firms they track are Data General, Digital Equipment, Hewlett-Packard, and Raytheon (established growth comapnies companies); Augat, Coln Conrad, M/a COM, Teradyne, and Charles River Breeding (emerging growth companies). They recently purchased Charles River Breeding stock.

Granahan and Everitt believe high tech companies are strong investments for the future because of the critical need for solutions to energy, defense, medical, labor, conservation, and inflationary problems facing the country.

The liberal bent of the federal government during the 70s was not particularly sympathetic to technology, Granahan maintains. "Defense spending was soft and government regulations made pharmaceutical companies defensive," he says. "But still, the 70s were a good period for technology. We feel the 80s will be more hospitable.

"We're now in a period of acceleration in medical technology. You can see it in the development of things like synthetic insulin and interferon. The 80s may be to biology what the 70s were to micro-processors."

The high degree of efficiency that high tech companies tend to generate,

Boston Pops concert on TV Sunday night

The world premiere of "Jubilee 350 Fanfare," a musical tribute to Boston's summer-long birthday celebration composed by Boston Pops Orchestra Conductor John Williams will be a special highlight of the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra concert Sunday, Sept. 21. Broadcast live from City Hall Plaza, 8 to 10 p.m. on WBZ-TV Channel 4, the program will be simultaneously carried on WBZ FM 106.7 for stereophonic listening at home.

The two-hour television and radio program, hosted by WBZ-TV's Linda Harris and Chris Marrou, will feature musical selections chosen by Boston Pops Conductor Williams for each song's particular relevance to Boston's history and culture, in keeping with the Jubilee 350 spirit.

Additionally, one hour prior to the concert, from 7 to 8 p.m., WBZ-TV Channel 4 hosts Harris and Marrou will take a retrospective look at the summer's Jubilee 350 events, including the Tall Ships, the Transatlantic Race and WBZ-TV's KIDSFAIR jamboree celebration, which took place on the Boston Common.

The opening program selection will be John Phillip Sousa's "Fairest of the Fair," a march composed for the early 1900's Boston Food's Fair. Other selections will include "Candide Overture" by Brookline-born Leonard Bernstein, and "Pioneer Dances" by Peggy Stuart Coolidge, also a native Bostonian. The Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra will play Leroy Anderson's "Irish Suite," a piece commissioned of the one-time chief arranger of the Boston Pops by the Eire Society of Boston.

Conductor Williams' special contributions to the concert will include his compositions, "Love Theme" and "March" from the movie "Superman," and the world-premiere presentation of Williams' "Jubilee 350 Fanfare," composed expressly for the Sept. 21 concert.

The program will conclude with Morton Gould's "American Salute," which contains the popular patriotic tune "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." Finally, a syncopated laser light show will wind up the concert.

Former Playboy bunny resigns from Boston Police

BOSTON (UPI) — A former Playboy bunny has resigned from the Boston Police Department after 8 ½ years on the force charging women were not given an equal chance at promotions to top posts.

Beverly Veselenv Kennedy, 38, a trained lawyer and former employee of the now defunct Boston Playboy club, said Tuesday in her resignation letter that "conscience and principles of justice will not allow me to remain a part of the Boston Police Department."

Art dealer gets jail for fraud

BOSTON (UPI) — Art dealer Steven Straw has been sentenced to 40 months in prison for bilking private art collectors and dealers out of millions of dollars by selling paintings he did not own.

Judge Andrew Linscott imposed the two consecutive 20-month sentences Wednesday in Suffolk Superior Court, where Straw earlier had pleaded guilty to two counts of embezzlement and four counts of larceny.

Indictments charging the Newburyport art dealer with obtaining signatures under false pretenses were placed on file.

Straw, 29, was scheduled to appear in court in Tennessee today on charges stemming from the alleged embezzlement of $500,000 from a Chatanoonga businessman.

Next Thursday, Straw faces sentencing by U.S. District Judge Joseph L. Tauro on fraud charges in connection with interstate theft. Those charges involve $5.5 million embezzled from three art dealers in California, Tennessee and New York.

Straw faces a maximum sentence of 15 years and $11,000 in fines on the federal charges.

He was ordered to begin serving the sentences Monday morning at the Lawrence House of Correction.

escapee at large

BILLERICA, Mass. (UPI) — Detectives continued the search Wednesday for five of the six men who managed a nighttime escape from a third-floor holding area at the Middlesex County House of Correction.

The sixth escapee was found Tuesday. Edward Galli, 25, was captured in his hometown of Marlboro about 6 p.m. by police. Galli, who was awaiting trial for kidnapping, was returned to the Billerica jail shortly afterward.

Middlesex County Detective Lt. John Dwyer said authorities were counting on the remaining fugitives to leave clues about their whereabouts when they "hit the street."

"When these kids hit the street — that's the only time they're going to get caught," Dwyer said Wednesday.

The six cut through a third-floor window about 7:15 p.m. Monday, climbed over two roofs and jumped to the ground outside the prison.

Ossinger will take a lie test

NEWTON — Diana Ossinger, who will stand trial before a jury of six beginning Oct. 6 in Middlesex Superior Court on charges that she stole more than $24,000 from Mayor Theodore Mann, will take a court appointed lie detector test within the next two weeks.

Judge John Murphy accepted a motion from Mrs. Ossinger's attorney, Thomas Troy, in Middlesex Superior Court asking for the lie detector test.

Mrs. Ossinger, who was Mann's personal secretary for nearly eight years until she was dismissed after a police investigation, was found guilty of stealing 58 paychecks from the mayor over a 44-month period.

Mrs. Ossinger allegedly crossed out the restrictive endorsements on the checks and cashed them at the Newton Treasurer's Office where she was supposed to deposit them in Mann's account.

Judge Murphy also denied a motion by Troy requesting a court appointed lie detector test for Mayor Mann Wednesday.

In addition, Murphy accepted a motion by Dist. Atty. Laurence Hardoon calling for the jury to visit the scene of the crime, the Newton Treasurer's Office.

A motion by Hardoon requesting a psychological test for Mrs. Ossinger was also denied by Judge Murphy.

Furthermore, a motion by Troy asking for all checks issued by the city of Newton from 1972 to 1980 was denied.

Troy said he wanted to show that the method of crossing out restrictive endorsements was being employed as far back as 1972 and into 1980.

Judge Murphy did instruct Dist. Atty. Hardoon to review the checks and report back to the court .

W. Newton library move delayed

By JONATHAN ROBBINS
Staff Writer

NEWTON-The proposed move of the West Newton library to the Davis School was held up by Newton aldermen on Monday night pending a public hearing.

The Finance committee will wait for the Oct. 8 meeting before approving the $10,000 needed to move the library. The full board allowed $21,000 to be used to move other city departments into the Davis School. . . .

Opposition to the transfer of the library comes from Ward 5 Ald. Paul Coletti who said, "I see this as a beginning of the demise of the branch library system."

In favor of the transfer are the Executive department, several members of the Board of Aldermen, head librarian Virginia Tashjian and several West Newton residents who attended a Human Services committee meeting before the full Board session.

The Oct. 8 hearing was called for by the Public Facilities committee chairman Richard McGrath. McGrath said the public should be given a better chance to respond to the idea of the library's closing its current facility.

Much of the debate centered on whether or not the residents of West Newton had been adequately informed about the proposed move to the Davis School.

Ald. Robert Tennant from West Newton felt sure there was no neighborhood objection and suggested the go-ahead be given for the transfer.

Mayor Theodore Mann had said that the Chamber of Commerce, librarians, library trustees, and area aldermen had been consulted about the move and the response was uniformly positive.

Despite reassurances, some aldermen insisted the public hearings be held anyway to make sure there was adequate neighborhood input. By law, no public hearing is required on the matter. James Hickey said the board's delay will not affect negotia-

Davis sale agreement

NEWTON-Newton Community Service Center and the city reached a verbal agreement on the sale of the Davis School.

A purchase and sale agreement is expected to be completed within two weeks. Some NCSC programs will be moved in "as soon as possible" according to President John Eller.

The agreement came after the Board of Aldermen approved funds for the transfer of the city's Health and Community Schools offices in the school.

The selling price of the Davis School is $225,000. NCSC will pay the city $100,000 immediately and $125,000 over the next 20 years for the building. In addition, the city could net another $60,000 if NCSC sells its Cherry Street headquarters and Pomroy House for more than $350,000 after expenses are deducted. John Eller said NCSC will try to expedite the sale of the Cherry Street site to strengthen the group's financial situation. Mayor Mann said "Through the NCSC there will be expanded services to not only the West Newton community but to the entire city of Newton." As part of the purchase agreement the city offices and the West Newton library can operate out of the closed-down school without paying rent. The city will pay a share of the buildings heating and maintenance costs. The police department will use the school's gymnasium.

Aldermen compromise on Rte. 9-Elliot St. plans

NEWTON — Aldermen Monday night reversed themselves on the Route 9 Elliot Street intersection development plan, quickly approving a compromise designed to ease traffic strain in the area.

In meetings held with Purity Supreme, Inc., which is a supermarket on the site, and Massachusetts s Department of Public Works officials, aldermen decided a redesign of the market's access drive was necessary.

They also insisted that Elliot Street be wired for a possible signal light, which may have to go in once the construction is completed. Whether the signal would be necessary would be determined by traffic in the area upon completetion of the project.

Other measures to ease traffic include an investigation of the feasibility of two lanes on the Elliot Street approach to the development and relocation of various traffic markers.

Leo Kahn, President of Purity Supreme, thanked the board for its work on the compromise in a letter to the body, and called the result "a substantial improvement over the original plan."

The issue arose as a result of Alderman Cynthia Creem's move for reconsideration. The aldermen approved the original plan two weeks ago. According to officials, the intersection has a high accident rate and is in dire need of improvement. Purity Supreme officials, however, were concerned that the changes could become a hindrance to their shoppers. They were worried that this could cause a loss in business.

A solution to the problem has been sought for three years.

In another matter, the board voted a bond issue to raise $190,000 to replace a Newton Fire Department ladder truck. The measure had been approved easily by both the Finance and Public Safety Committees.

Tax rate going up to $177

NEWTON — Property taxes will be going up $7.80 to $177 per thousand of assessed valuation.

The $7.80 increase is the second largest since 1976 when the rate went up $9.

Mailing of property taxe bills is expected to begin Friday.

Last week, the Board of Aldermen reviewed a Board of Assessors preliminary report, and asked for changes which lowered the projected tax rate from $177.50 to $177. Aldermen were concerned that estimated receipts for the coming year were too low. Some suspected the mayor is trying to build up a surplus which will allow a tax cut in 1981 when he is up for reelection.

James Hickey, an administration aide, strongly denied the idea that the administration was trying to manipulate city finances for political purposes.

He did say there would be surplus cash next year, but that is a normal of city operations. In a statement from Mayor Mann, the "combined pressures of double digit inflation, reduced state aid, and significantly increased MBTA and Middlesex County assessments" were blamed for the 4.5 percent increase.

The mayor stressed that even though the tax rate has been contained, "had it not been for the combined effects of reduced state aid and increased assessments, the tax rate increase would have been several dollars less."

The mayor had been predicting a $15-$23 increase in taxes earlier in the summer. David Wilkinson, city budget officer, said MBTA assessments to the city have increased 29.4 percent. Middlesex County assessments have gone up 12.2 percent and state aid has decreased by 1 percent. Salaries are a major portion of the city's budget and recent contract talks have given workers an average 7.5 percent raise.

Mann aide James Hickey said it was "an achievement" to keep the tax rate down to the four and a half percent increase figure. Hickey pointed out that the rate of increase in the tax rate is significantly below the 12.5 percent increase in the Boston area "all urban consumer price index", a measure of inflation in the region.

Ald. Mark White said last week he believes the tax rate could have been $1 or $2 lower than the $177 figure. He objected to this year's rate, saying, "There's no penalty if we set the tax rate too low."

Newton custodians get new contract

NEWTON — The School Committee approved a new contract giving school custodians an almost 16 percent pay increase over a two year period at a meeting Monday night.

The custodians, who had threatened further "job action" if a settlement was not reached this week, ratified the new pact at a union meeting Sunday by a vote of 55 - 18, with 12 abstentions.

The custodians, who were not working any overtime as a protest, rescinded the 40 hour work week upon accepting the agreement.

The contract, which provides custodians with a 7.5 percent pay raise for the first year, a 7 percent hike at the beginning of the second year, and a 1 percent increase after 6 more months.

The salary package is approximately the same as the pay raises approved by Newton teachers in a contract ratifeid last week.

The union rejected the the 16 percent salary increase at a union meeting Sept. 14. The package was tabled and approved after School Custodians Union Pres. Robert Robards met with School Supt. Aaron Fink last week.

Robards said he was not fully satisfied with the contract package.

He said, "Once the majority of the city settles, the die is cast and you can not change it."

Robards continued, 'Somebody receives 7.5 percent; so everybody receives 7.5 percent. If you are making $50,000 a year, 7.5 percent can put a down payment on a Cadillac. But if you are making $14,000 a year, then when the tax rate goes up, let's hope we have enough to cover it."

He added, "It is not everything I wanted to see, but we did make some strides in safety."

Under the new pact, a joint a safety committee will be formed between the union and the school department. Thecommittee will meet four times a year and make recommendations to the school department.

"There is a re-opening clause to be sure that the safety committee is operated in a proper fashion," Robards said. "This is to be sure that we are making the best possible use of the committee."

Robards stressed that the issue of asbestos taping in the schools has still not been resolved.

Robards said that "minor details" need to be worked out if the custodians are going to tape asbestos in the schools' noting that the custodians are "exposing themselves and school children to danger."

Numerous studies have connected asbestos, which has been removed

Newton nemesis: Where to park?

NEEDHAM — Parking availability in business districts is an unrelenting source of anger and aggravation for both shoppers and merchants which is never easily resolved.

However, this was the problem tackled by local officials at a Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce panel discussion Tuesday morning.

Newton Police Chief William Quinn and City Planning Director Barry Canner were among the panelists who addressed an estimated 75 local businessmen. The panel also included Needham Police Chief Louis Roman and Needham Planning Director Thomas Fennessey.

Canner pointed out that Newton's parking problems are different than other "quasi-urban centers" because there are a series of villages rather than one center.

"Every village has a different problem that needs to be looked at," Canner said. "And there are no easy solutions."

Canner said a Planning Department study concluded there is not a real shortage of parking in the city, but an "appearance of a shortage."

He noted there is an "underutilization" of major lots, such as the Pelham Street lot behind Garb's Drug store, because they are not as visible or conveniently located as other parking facilities. He said this must be solved through public relations by the city and merchants to get people to use these spaces.

Canner contends the parking problem is most "acute" in Newton Centre, West Newton and Newton Corner.

He also said there is a tremendous conflict between residential areas and business districts.

"You cannot tear down a house to put up a parking lot. It is particularly tough for Newton where nice residential areas abut nice retail areas."

Fennessey stressed that there needs to be more public education about parking.

"I think there is a question of public perception, " Fennessey explained. "There are a lot of issues that relate to parking which are purely psychological."

He said, "We have to educate our public to walk more."

Fennessey said cities and towns must adopt reasonable parking regulations which include the metering of all on-street parking to assure turnover.

Furthermore, he said, long term parking should be on the fringe of business centers.

Chief Quinn pointed out that ticketing is necessary and also a source of revenue for the city.

He explained, "Enforcing parking regulations hurts our community relations but we have to do it."

Quinn said the back-log of tickets in the courts makes enforcement of parking regulations difficult.

Chief Roman agreed that enforcement is a major problem. "In order to enforce parking regulations in city lots, it means a patrol officer has to go through and check the lots and then go back two hours later," he said.

Roman also pointed out the Police Department is forming a committee to come up with more creative solutions to the parking problem.

Several businessmen had suggestions to improve the parking situation in business centers. One Newton merchant proposed a permit for system off-street parking. He said, "I think it would be good for business and shoppers."

Several businessmen also expressed anger with the lack of parking in Newton business centers.

A Newtonville landlord said he has been putting up with an outrageous parking situation since 1960 despite repeatedly asking the city for help and offering financial backing to increase parking spaces in the area.

Another merchant suggested a lot be designated specifically for commuters who take up needed parking spaces for the entire day.

And one local business man proposed church parking lots be used for additional parking in business centers where it could be arranged.

Trash Talk

Mandatory paper recycling

By BETSY LEWENBERG

The Mayor's Advisory Committee on Recycling with the help of the Newton League of Women Voters has proposed an ordinance to make paper recycling mandatory in Newton.

There are compelling reasons, both economic and environmental, for a mandatory paper recycling program. In economic terms, a changeover from a voluntary to a mandatory paper recycling program will, for the first time, make paper recycling profitable in Newton.

Since city trucks already collect newspapers, there will be no additional collection cost. The projected increase in participation; however, will result in an increase in revenues as well as additional savings in avoided transfer-haul fees (since newspapers will not be hauled away with refuse at over $18 per ton). It is estimated that the paper recycling program, which currently costs Newton approximately $9,600 per year, will net a profit of up to $42,800 if a mandatory program is instituted.

The environment also benefits from our recycling program.

Recycling reduces the volume of waste disposed of (15 percent of what we throw away is newspapers, or 6800 tons per year). Recycling also saves disappearing landfill space (Newton has already had to close its landfill), as well as conserving natural resources (every ton of recycled newspapers saves 17 trees from being cut down).

Last but not least, recycling saves energy. The more we recycle, the greater the benefit to our environment.

Mandatory recycling works well in other communities. Environmental Protection Agency research has shown that 59 percent of mandatory programs have participation rates of 50 percent or better, while only 19 percent of voluntary programs have participation rates in the same category.

Similarly, only 11 percent of the mandatory programs have participation rates of 19 percent or less as compared to 36 percent of the voluntary programs.

Enforcement varies from community to community. Penalties range from the ticketing of offenders, to levying of fines, refusal to collect trash, phone calling and letters of reminder. The Newton proposal calls for a written notice for the first offense and a $25 fine for succeeding offenses.

The Mayor's Advisory Committee on Recycling and the Newton League of Women Voters agree that mandatory newspaper recycling will not present a burden for residents.

Newspaper collection has been and will continue to be weekly on trash day. Paper may be placed in double grocery bags or tied in bundles. A small amount of effort is involved; however, separation of paper from trash reduces the amount of trash to be thrown away and thereby makes trash disposal easier. Furthermore, recycling converts have attested to the fact that once they pick up the recycling habit, they "feel good about helping Newton and the environment." Because the benefits of mandatory paper recycling are great to both our environment and economy and other communities have proven that similar programs can succeed, the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Recycling and the Newton League of Women Voters hope that Newton residents will let their aldermen know that they support the proposed ordinance.

The first step was a hearing before the Public Facilities Committee of the Board of Aldermen on Sept. 24.

MDC bans wood chopping

BOSTON — The Metropolitan District Commission has announced that a wood cutting program allowing the public to remove trees from MDC property will no longer be conducted as in past years.

When widespread fuel shortages occurred throughout Massachusetts in recent years, the MDC issued permits to the public to cut down dead trees and to remove dead wood from various MDC reservations and forest areas. The ban on such wood cutting has been instituted because of abuse by the public to the point where live trees were damaged and-or removed from MDC wooded areas and there was illegal entry of vehicles on MDC lands.

In view of the fact the wood cutting ban is now in effect, should individuals trespass on MDC property for the purpose of removing trees or limbs, they will be in violation of the law, MDC officials pointed out.

Distributive education comes to Newton North

Distributive education has been in area high schools since 1960, but it is new this fall to Newton North High School.

The program, entitled "Marketing and Management," offers juniors and seniors an opportunity to study merchandising, management and marketing. The program is also designed to develop job skills in these areas.

Leona Mallidis, teacher coordinator for distributive education at Newton North, has begun to recruit students. Having previously worked with D.E. at Taunton High School, Mallidis recommends the program as a builder of confidence and self-esteem.

She adds that D.E. helps students develop business contacts which give them "a step ahead" when they apply for jobs after high school or to college business programs.

During their junior year, D.E. students attend an exploratory class which covers the basics of salesmanship, career exploration, merchandising and marketing.

The senior course is an upgrading of the junior course with more focus on management.

However, seniors will also be involved for another class hour in running a boutique in the school which Mallidis expects to open November 15.

The store will sell many items made by students, such as crafts, clothing or plants, but can expand to suit whatever market the seniors determine is there.

The seniors will set up all the policies and procedures for the store, according to Mallidis. She says that they will also have a mini-computer available to keep track of stocks of merchandise.

Specific jobs such as manager, bookkeeper, display person and adveritising will be assigned each month on a rotating basis.

Seniors will also work 15 hours a week in co-op jobs with area businesses. Mallidis says that this is a chance to gain work experience towards a career and to make some money at the same time.

According to Mallidis, students can either co-op by leaving school two hours early or by working after school and on weekends.

Mallidis, whose hometown is Worcester, holds an associates degree from Garland Junior College in Boston, a bachelor's degree in retailing and marketing from San Francisco State University and is working on a master's degree in career education at Boston University.

She has held positions in managenent on the sales level and was co-owner of a dental laboratory.

An employee of Newton North, interested students can discuss the program with her in room 2238 on the main street corridor.

Newton teachers give and take in new contract

NEWTON — A two-year contract for Newton teachers that provides a salary increase close to 16 percent was unanimously approved by the School Committee Monday night.

The new pact, which must still be approved by the Board of Aldermen, provides teachers with a 7.5 percent pay raise for the first year, a 7 percent hike at the beginning of the second year, and a 1 percent increase after 6 more months.

The Newton teachers ratified the contract by more than 200 votes last week.

The teachers had reportedly been looking for salary increases of 8.5 percent and 9.25 percent over a two year period.

The new contract removes a clause requiring physical education teachers to coach for at least two years.

In addition, the contract provides teachers with a reduction of one personal day from two to one. The contract stipulates that teachers must receive special permission in order to take another personal day.

Furthermore, the contract calls for a study of the use of sick days. The School Committee maintained that teachers were abusing sick days.

Upon approval of the contract, School Committee member Honora Kaplan praised the committee's negotiators, Sandy Fleishman and Nancy Mann, saying, "This is a contract we can all be satisfied with."

The School Committee also approved a new contract with school department secretaries. The two year pact will provide secretaries with salary increases of 7.5 percent for the first year and a 7.25 percent pay hike at the beginning of the second year. In addition, the contract provides a $100 increase in longevity payments for employees with 10 and 15 years of experience.

Newton School Board vows to fight tax cut plan

NEWTON — A resolution to join with other "recognized groups" in an effort to defeat Proposition Two and a Half was approved by the School Committee Monday night.

Proposition Two and a Half, which will appear on the November ballot, would limit property taxes to 2 ½ percent of the full and fair cash value of property in a community. Communities over this limit would be required to roll back their taxes 15 percent per fiscal year until the limit is reached.

City officials are maintaining that 2 ½, sponsored by the Citizens for Limited Taxation, would result in a severe cutback of services, including a possible reduction in school personnel.

CETA group will get to vote about union

By STEVEN BURKE
Staff Writer

NEWTON — After almost a year of legal action, a group of Newton area administrative CETA employees is going to be allowed an opportunity to form a union.

CETA is the Comprehensive Employment Training Act which is a federal jobs program.

Despite the protests of city officials, the State Labor Relations Commission recently upheld the right of the employees to hold a secret ballot election in order to determine if the majority of administrative personnel want a union.

The commission ruling comes after a February decision by a commission officer was appealed by the city to the full board.

An election, under the supervision and direction of the State Labor Commission, will be held within the next few months to determine sentiment for a union.

The city has already complied with a Labor Commission order to submit a list of all possible eligible voters to assure they are contacted.

In 1974, the city entered into a contract with the State Executive Office of Manpower Affairs (EOMA) to act as a subgrantee for CETA funds for itself and nine other communities.

Although Mayor Theodore Mann specified that the city should retain complete fiscal and administrative control of all programs under the act, the city denied it was the employer of the CETA workers.

City officials argued that the CETA personnel served not only Newton but other communities. Also, the city contended the state and federal government controlled all meaningful conditions of employment.

In the Commission ruling, Chairman Phillips Axten and Commissioner Gary Altman wrote: "It is true that the state issues many guidelines and memoranda that cover the working conditions of the employees. Nevertheless, the record demonstrates that these memoranda do not circumscribe the city's ability to bargain independently over the terms and conditions of employment."

Furthermore, the decision read: "The personnel policies for the administrative staff are based on city ordinances and in fact the Newton Personnel Department approved these policies, and benefits that exist for these employees are parallel to those of city workers. In sum, we find that the city of Newton, and not the state or federal governments, has sufficient independent discretion to bargain about the terms and conditions of employment with respect to administrative CETA employees."

Union organizers also pointed to the fact that the CETA administrative director is hired upon recommendation of the Mayor, who establishes both initial salaries and pay scales for the CETA workers.

Mayor Theodore Mann said the ruling raises many question of "jurisdiction."

He explained, "This is a matter that has been argued throughout the United States — that Mayors have been appointed by the State to take responsibility for not only their respective communities, but other communities."

Mann said the question of evenly distributing "liability" to all members of a group of communities involved in an agreement is presently being discussed by the National Conference of Mayors and the Federal Department of Labor.

Mann added, "If these matters are not worked out, I have indicated to the State Executive Office of Manpower Affairs that I would like to relieve myself of responsibility for the CETA consortium or limit my responsibility to Newton."

Saying 'no' in Newton

Katz won't ask for primary recount

NEWTON — No candidates in the primary election held last week in Newton have asked for a recount of the voting according to Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission.

Alderman Bob Katz, who lost to Ald. Robert Tennant in the Republican 12th District state representative primary, was going to ask for a recount but backed off.

Katz was concerned about problems with the complicated sticker election. He said he may have lost votes because of stickers falling off the rolls and other problems with machines.

Katz said he was talked out of asking for a recount. He did not expect a recount to prove him a winner. He said he "wanted to do it out of curiosity."

Mofenson won't oppose Mann

NEWTON — Former congressional candidate and local attorney David Mofenson Tuesday denied rumors that he his considering running for mayor, but would not rule out the possibility.

"I am not running against Teddy Mann for Mayor," he said, adding that a race against another opponent "at this point remains to be seen."

Rumors have it that during the congressional race Mofenson was offered backing for a mayorial bid if he pulled out of the race and endorsed fellow liberal Barney Frank. But Mofenson denied this flatly, saying saying, "My withdrawl was related strictly to a $30,000 deficit, and we're still trying to work our way out of that."

Newton paperboy upset

Hard-earned scanner stolen

NEWTON — When Tommy Binnall, 11, returned home from school last week, he was more than a little disappointed.

Binnall, a police and fireman enthusiast, discovered the pocket police and fire scanner which he bought with $200 he earned from his paper route and running errands, was stolen.

"I was really upset," he said.

Binnall, who lives at 129 Rowe St., is asking whoever stole his police and fire scanner to return it.

"I am not going to call the police," he pleads. "I would just like it back."

Tommy, who would eventually like to become a policeman, said, "I think someone from the elementary school stole it. It was the only thing taken from the house and there was a portable radio and tape recorder right next to it."

A seventh grader at Warren Junior High School, Tommy has been an avid police and fireman watcher for several years.

"I like the action," he exclaims. "When there is a police or fire call, I like to see what's going on."

"The most exciting call was the Warren Junior High fire in December 1979," he explained. "I was up to about midnight listening to it. And then the next day when I went there, they were still putting it out."

However, Tommy, who saved his money for almost three months, is now unable to follow the action of local police and firefighters.

Tommy is urging whoever stole his scanner to return it. No questions asked.

With a sigh of hope, he adds, "I just want back what is rightfully mine."

Why not?

Newton aldermen this week take up a proposal to make newspaper recycling mandatory here.

The proposal is being made by the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Recycling with the aid of the League of Women Voters of Newton.

Newspaper recycling began in Newton in 1972 with monthly curbside collection. In 1976, newspaper recycling was started on a weekly basis. Clear and colored glass and cans are also collected here on a weekly, voluntary basis.

The advisory committee's report on its proposal clearly outlines why the program should be made mandatory.

The committee surveyed recycling programs nationwide and concluded that mandatory programs provoke a significant increase in participation.

"Reports of comparable socio-economic communities show that participation and revenues from collection of newspaper almost doubled when programs became mandatory," the report states. "For example, Montclair, N.J., reports that newspaper collection alone increased by 38 percent in 1979, approximately one year after the program moved from voluntary to mandatory participation."

Under current market conditions, Newton would make a profit on mandatory newspaperrecycling.

Using Environmental Protection Agency estimates, the advisory committee foresees a net profit of $42,8000 if the program is instituted now.

City trucks are already used to collect newspapers, so there will be no additional cost on that end, and the profit results from the savings in transfer-haul costs ($18 per ton) and the revenue from sale of newspapers to recyclers.

How would the mandatory program be enforced? The committee has asked that a written notice be issued for the first violation of the ordinance and a $25 fine be imposed for succeeding offenses. Newspapers for recycling would be collected on the regular trash day, just as they are now.

We have often used this space to discuss the importance of a change in the national attitude on our resources in general. Resources are finite, and we must learn to deal with them on that basis.

Voluntary recycling is a step in the right direction. Mandatory recycling is the next step.

We support the advisory committee's proposal for mandatory newspaper recycling in Newton, and urge the Board of Aldermen to approve it.

A real awareness of the limits of our resources will probably not come to fruition until the next generation comes of age. Until then, the rest of us need regulations to help us do what we can to preserve our environment.

My Turn

When the meek inherit the earth

By SARAH CLAYTON

The beatitudes predict that the meek will inherit the earth. I've finally discovered the answer to that puzzle.

What is meek and green and prolific?

The answer is obvious — houseplants! All manner of lacy, waxy, shrublike, spidery or flowering houseplants!

In fact, since houseplants now rule most homes and offices, ideas for new horror pictures should spring up at any time. One such film could be an account of an amaryllis whose huge, deep and enchanting flowers with their long proboscis-like stems suck up pet cats and dogs of the lonely and the elderly.

And there are other horror stories to be told as the inherent compulsiveness of plant care and propagation take their toll on the quality of human life.

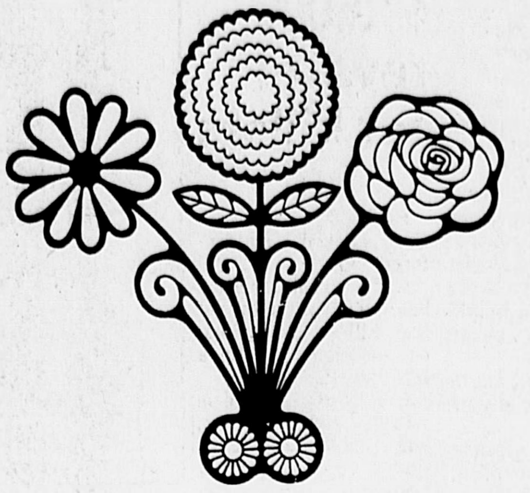
For example, is your mother less concerned with your possible appendicitis than with the appearance of scale on her prized kentia palm?

"It took my baby three years to grow to that size and I'm not going to let scale kill it now!" she exclaims.

Houseplant compulsiveness (a term sure to appear very soon in medical journals) is clearly running that mother's life.

Two recent incidents brought me to an understanding of my own problem with houseplant compulsiveness.

The first time that I realized that I had become a houseplant compulsive was when I heard myself gleefully tell someone that my goal for the year was to make sure that at least one of my flowering plants was in bloom every day of the year.



As I watched the blood drain from her face, I knew that I was a houseplant compulsive. I vowed to get this problem under control.

My efforts to understand houseplant compulsiveness led me to discoveries of other examples of my illness.

I was horrified when I realized that I waS compulsively furnishing my new apartment with plants before chairs or a coffee table. I was even planning "plant schemes" to suit each room and its environmental conditions.

Although I desperately needed fall clothes for work, I found myself spending hours shopping for a healthy ficus instead of a skirt. My agonizing over choosing plant food was endless.

One woman that I know of (who I now recognize as being very sick) spent hours each week rearranging her ferns and schefflera as one does new furniture.

Houseplant compulsiveness is frightening because it is a far-reaching illness. It can strike even the most rational and practical people.

I can only offer my own success with self-analysis as a means of regaining control. My recovery has been so complete that instead of giving houseplants as presents, I now give socks.

Lois Pines knows how to push

May set sights on lieutenant governorship

Commentary
By Loring Swaim
State Columnist

The New England regional office of the Federal Trade Commission will learn soon whether it can conduct a formal investigation of alleged construction and warranty defects by builders of condominiums in this area.

The probe, if it goes forward, could lead to new industry-wide regulations.

Regional Director Lois Pines,a former state representative from Newton, will go to Washington to argue her case in person before the five-member commission. She will ask for a majority vote to proceed. She is likely to get it.

This summer, Pines' office won commission approval to file a price-fixing complaint against the Massachusetts Furniture and Piano Movers Association. It alleged that association members colluded in setting virtually uniform tariffs for their services within the state in violation of FTC anti-trust regulations. It goes to pretrial hearings this fall. It could affect a $60 million industry nationwide.

Pines, just turned 40, took over the Boston office 19 months ago at a time when it was generally regarded as the worst run of the FTC's 10 regional offices. Today, FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk calls it the best run. Last month, he came to Worcester to participate in a small business conference Pines sponsored to spread the message of the resources available to keep the marketplace open, honest and responsible. Pertschuk will be on hand for a similar conference in Springfield Oct. 15. President Carter, having also been invited, may drop in as well on his way to a fundraiser in Boston that night.

"A few years ago, the FTC was attacked by Ralph Nader as 'the little old lady of Pennsylvania Avenue,'" Pines told the Malden Rotary Club last week. "Congress then decided to give it more powers and more mandates, and today it's called 'the John Wayne of business — brave, bold, tough and sassy.'"

Pertschuk picked Pines for the Boston assignment when he learned of her work on consumer issues during three terms in the House. She had pushed through the landmark easy-to-read insurance policy bill, another requiring emergency medical technician training for ambulance attendants, others strengthening the credit rights of divorced woman, and she battled valiantly for a bottle bill. But two years ago, she lost out in a close race for Secretary of State so was ready for something new.

Former Rep. Lois Pines

> 'Pines, just turned 40, took over the Boston office 19 months ago at a time when it was generally regarded as the worst run of the 10 FTC's regional offices. Today, FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk calls it the best run.'

"She's dynamic and she's dedicated to consumer issues," said a colleague in the regional office who respects her ability.

"She's very competent and very diligent," said someone close to House Speaker Tom McGee, who admired her conviction. "She got a lot accomplished, and she knows how to push when she has to. In a man, that's expected; in a woman, it sometimes gets misinterpreted."

"Look," explained Pines without hesitation. "I expect people to produce and to work as hard as I do. When I came here, I had to fire people and I've hired some good people." Has she been approached by politicians to find slots for cronies as has been the notorious case in certain federal agencies in Boston? "Sure, and I tell them if they can produce and we need them, I'll consider them. If they can't produce, we don't want them. Politicians have no problem with that."

An average of 40 complaints or questions pours into the office every day. They provide the grist either for calls by an agency staffer to offending individuals or companies to straighten out a misunderstanding or clarify the law or for more formal studies to detect violation patterns with national implications. A country-wide computer network helps pinpoint problem areas where regulations would be helpful. Under Pertschuk, each regional office must do 90 percent of the legal work necessary to proceed with the local complaint that will ultimately apply nationwide. And under him, regional offices have been equipped with the sophisticated technical and professional resources necessary.

The Boston office is quietly looking at the exploding high-technology computer manufacturing industry that proliferates in the area, not because of suspected violations but "because it's big, it's growing and it's here to stay," as an aide puts it. Questions are emerging about alleged practices in the fiercely competitive and booming cable television business where future revenues for those on the scene first have enormous attraction.

"Our mandate is to enforce anti-trust laws," said Pines, "to prevent unfair competition and deceptive advertising and to protect consumers from unfair practices in the marketplace. If we're criticized nowadays, it's perhaps because we're doing our job too well."

Pines regards these 19 months at the FTC as "a valuable experience with substantial national impact, but in many ways limited to law enforcement matters, to anti-trust and consumer law violations."

She is restless. She is thinking of getting back into elective office "where one can deal with broad policy issues that affect large segments of the country, other issues that I care very much about."

The slot in sight at the moment is that of Lt. Governor.

Childish behavior by both candidates

Commentary
By Arnold Sawislak
National Columnist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — No wonder people are disgusted with politicians. The 1980 presidential campaign is rapidly descending to the level of an alley cat fight over possession of a garbage can.

The campaign to date has been a mess and there seems little prospect that it is going to get better with the Carter people hanging on every Reagan utterance hoping for a disastrous slip of the tongue and the Reagan forces scanning into every economic statistic and foreign news item looking for some awful development to blame on Carter.

So the Democrats are accusing the Republicans of slurring the South and playing racist word games; the Republicans are accusing the Democrats of playing politics with national security and trying to buy ethnic votes with military decorations.

The reason for this childish behavior seems to be that both candidates assume that they will lose the election if they treat voters like adults and tell them that there is a price to pay for every goodie they promise.

For example, Carter could tell the truth about his economic policy of the last year. As events have made clear, the President has used the federal government to fight inflation by causing a business slump and, of course, additional unemployment.

If Carter has the integrity and courage his campaign commercials trumpet about, he could admit that recession was the only cure he and his advisers could find to slow inflation and ask the voters to go along with his policy until it seems safe to loosen up a bit. He might even find people who admire a president with the guts to admit that he can't solve the country's problems painlessly.

Reagan, in turn, could give some straight answers about his economic proposals. He is calling for a big tax cut, increased defense spending and a balanced budget. He knows, and so do most of the voters, those things can't be done unless he is talking about some drastic reductions elsewhere in federal spending.

If that means aid to education, welfare payments, farm subsidies or some other specific federal handout is going to be ended when he gets to be president, Reagan ought to say so. He might even find voters who will rally to a candidate who is up front about whose ox is going to be gored if he is elected.

But these probably are fantasy suggestions. The political campaigns are controlled by people who operate on the theory that the voters will respond only to glowing promises by their man and slashing attacks on the opposition.

Much is being said and written about debates this year, with everyone seemingly assuming that such confrontations would elevate the tone of the campaign. That may be fantasy too: if Carter and Reagan just want to sit back and knock each other around, this voter for one would just as soon watch re-runs of Philadelphia Flyer hockey games.

Opinions

Thanks to supporters

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the voters of Middlesex County who cast their ballots for me in the Democratic Primary for Sheriff. I greatly appreciate your support.

To those who voted for another candidate or did not vote in the Democratic Primary, I hope you will consider my background and viewpoints on the issues affecting this position when making your choice in the November general election. If I am successful in the final, I will work hard to merit the trust placed in me by the voters of Middlesex County.

I also would like to thank this newspaper for printing my views during the campaign and allowing my ideas to reach area citizens. It was an important part of our victory.

My success is shared by many concerned citizens who worked hard on my behalf and the thousands of county residents that I met during my campaigning every day this summer. I wish my opponents well. They all conducted themselves as gentlemen throughout the campaign.

Finally, I have enjoyed running for this office in Middlesex County. It remains the greatest experience of my life. I look forward to meeting more voters between now and November.

Obscuring the problem

To the Editor:

The belief in personhood at conception is a religious belief held by the Roman Catholic Church. For the Pope to believe that he is so high and mighty so as to have the sole right to decide the issue of abortion for the rest of the world is to make a grandiose claim that has no basis in reality.

I find it very callous of those who would deny Medicaid funds for abortions for poor women, and of those who would make abortion a crime, to consider of utmost importance the existence of the fetus of an unwanted pregnancy, and to ignore the emotional circumstances, health and rights of women who have unwanted pregnancies.

The original intent of Medicaid was to equalize medical services between the rich and the poor, to help the poor become independent and self-sufficient. To make them ineligible for abortion defies justice, common sense and rational policy. Women burdened by unwanted children cannot get job training or go to work and are trapped in the poverty-welfare cycle.

Right to Life disnisses unwanted pregnancy as mere annoyance. The urgency of a woman's need to end unwanted pregnancy is measured by her willingness to risk death and mutilation, tospend huge sums of money, and to endure the indignities of illegal abortion. Women take both abortion and motherhood very seriously.

Trying to solve a complex social problem such as the need for abortion by attempting to legislate it out of existence, far from removing the problem or its causes, only worsens it and obscures the problem of unwanted pregnancy.

To be rational then, is to ask what can be done tominimize the occurrence of unwanted pregnancies? And what can be done to minimize their disastrous effects on women and society when they do occur? Dana Smith,

Pro-choice victory

To the Editor:

We, the NARAL-PAC (National Abortion Rights Action League Political Action Committee), would like to take this opportunity to examine some of the reasons for the stunning victories of the pro-choice candidates.

NARAL has become enormously effective through our Impact '80 program by turning out our vocal and visible pro-choice majority as workers, contributors and voters in both local campaigns and across the country.

We know that the best method for activating the pro-choice majority is to inform, alarm (via exposure to the anti-abortionist tactics) and then involve. The Catholic church mandate served to inform and alarm that majority. Our organization provided the network ready to be activated.

Behind our slogan, "I'm Pro-Choice, and I Vote," are not only voters, but also workers and contributors. Our national political action committee contributed 10 times as much money to our congressional candidates in the 4th and 5th districts as the Right to Life PAC provided theirs.

Our contribution was $2500 to each candidate; theirs was $250.

NARAL-PAC also provided 300 volunteer workers for Barney Frank and over half that number for Jim Shannon. The Democratic convention was the testing ground and the victory has been produced in the Massachusetts elections. We know that to reach our goal of taking the abortion issue out of politics, ironically, we must first engage in politcs.

Our victories as a pro-choice political force here last week were stunning, ranging from state representative races to the congressional races.

We have seen pro-choice candidates run and win in wins which represent a turning of the political tides for the pro-choice issue and which make Massachusetts a leader in the pro-choice issue.

Bonnie Foz,

Election

To the Editor:

I am writing concerning the article on last week's election.

There were two statements that should be corrected. I am not the president of the Ward 8 Democratic Committee. There is no such position. I am, however, as my literature states, current secretary and former vice-chairman. .

Also, I did not lose in my own precinct (8-3) but won very handily.

I also would like to take this opportunity to thank those who voted for me. It is a genuinely nice feeling to know that effort is appreciated.

Animals

To the Editor:

Over the years I've heard people speak of their affection for animals. How they resent man's lack of compassion in the killing of baby seals, systematic extermination of whales and displays of bear rugs or mounted deer heads.

It never impressed me until I listened to my daughter speak of her concern for fish in glass tanks that are just for people to look at and mice that are killed in traps or poisoned. She talked of dolphins and deer and even, affectionately, of sharks.

Perhaps I haven't been really listening all these years, and it probably will be even a longer period of time before I fully appreciate our friends in the animal kingdom.

Thanks to my daughter Laurie, I'm a little closer to reaching that goal.

$10,000 reward for killers

BOSTON (UPI) — Gov. Edward J. King offered Tuesday a $10,000 reward for information leading to the capture of the killers who "executed" four men in a bowling alley robbery.

Half of the reward is King's own money, while the rest is from his campaign fund, a spokesman for the governor said.

The police department, which has few leads, has set up a special hotline to receive information on the grisly killings. Investigators are especially interested in any goings-on seen between 6:17 a.m. and 7:55 a.m. Monday, when the killings were believed to have occurred, Boston Police Superintendant Anthony DiNatale said.

Police found the victims lying in a pool of blood inside a machine shop at the back of the bowling alley. "Executed — that's the only word to describe it," Police Superintendent Edward Connolly said.

The hands of three of the victims were handcuffed behind their backs. The fourth victim was tied with a belt.

Autopsy results indicated the men were each shot once in the head with a .38-caliber handgun. In a "couple of instances," there was evidence the bullets were fired at close range, said Dr. George Katsas, Suffolk County medical examiner.

Katsas said the victims also appeared to have been struck in the head with a blunt instrument before or after they were shot.

Several bloody bowling pins were found near the safe, said police, who theorized two or three of the pins may have been used to beat one of the victims, Donald Doroni, 41, until he recited the safe's combination.

Police said information received on the homicide division's hotline, 617-247-4470, would be kept confidential.

THE ART OF DISCOVERY

By Dorothy Keilt

The Center

For the earth to be displaced as the center of the universe is a form of culture shock. For the idea of each small principality being "the center" traverses all times, all cultures and all disciplines from religion to government to psychology to art.

The inherent meaning of center is the source of something, a point from which everything else emanates. It denotes a place of order and symmetry where all things are held in a balance of harmony. Mainly it suggests where the true essence of a thing may be found.

The center is represented in art in many forms.

In China it is the round jade disc with a hole in the middle called a "Pi."

In Japanese Shinto religion the mirror is the correspondent of the hole, as the mirror is an object for self-contemplation and therefore becomes a passageway through which the soul may pass.

The ancient Indians made an image of two large gold intersecting circles that formed a mandorla through which they ritualistically passed to insure regeneration. Mandorlas are repeated in Hindu and Buddhist art as the background to many objects, symbolic of the gateway of the world through which one passes to be released from an earthly cycle.

The present cosmic theory maintains that there is a "black hole" in space wherein the matter in space is drawn and held — possibly to emerge elsewhere.

The ancient world was filled with centers. In Ireland they were known as Raths, historical tribal meeting centers for laws and rituals.

Iona, off the west coast of Scotland, is made up of the oldest exposed rock strata of the earth, and was known in Gaelic as Hi, Y, or I and in the west as the Isle of DreamS or Isle of the Blest, a numinous center of power "where it is always spring, no aging, no disease, no work, all is happiness, peace and glory."

The Hindus built temples only where the spot was considered to have been a sacred center, and in Old Testament literature the center is the paradisaical state, the Garden of Eden, also a place of bliss and perfection.

The Greeks marked the center of the earth with a conical stone at the temple of Apollo at Delphi and it was called the omphalos. Omphalos also means navel, and it is at this juncture of the human body that the Chinese and Indians establish the "prana" (breath) as the center of balance, of energy, of life. To the Egyptians the heart was the center of the human body as mediator between the instinctual sex organs and the rational mind.

Through the centuries many of the ancient understandings of the universe filtered down in the form of fairy tales. The search for the "hidden treasure" in fairy tales became debased as the search for gold and jewels. But the original meaning of "hidden treasure" was as the center, the secret of life. This mystery of life as center and hidden treasure is reflected in religious art with the placing of a jewel in the center of the cross. It often appears as "the pearl of great price" on Chinese crowns and guarded by dragons. In Buddhist art it is "The jewel in The Lotus"—OM.

In psychology, Marie Von Franz has stated that there is a definite kernel in the human psyche, an organizing center that regulates and balances the psyche. She refers to the Nashapi Indians, still living in the forest of the Labrador Peninsula, who call this center "my friend" or "the great man."

Finding the center of the universe or the human psyche or of phenomena is not an easy task, nor perhaps definable. Maria Meyer, who shared the Nobel Prize for physicS in 1963, described the constituents of the atomic nucleus as similar to the layers of onion skins wherein concentric rings of neutrons alternate with protons but whose center has not yet been found.

This search is similar to Henrik Ibsen's Peer Gynt who mentally peels the layers of his personality to find his center, his true self. He recalls his days as a fur trader, a digger of gold, a poor man, a rich man, a lonely man, a powerful man, but never finds the center of the real man. He comes to the conclusion that "nature is witty." The search for the center is illusive:

"For what the center brings
Must obviously be
That which remains to the end
And was there from eternity."

Boys' Club reopens

NEWTON — Newton Boys' Club will open the doors for its 1980-81 Fall and Winter season program on Monday Sept. 29 at 2 p.m. it was announced today by Eliot K. Cohen, newly elected President of the Newton Boys' Club.

The Club will be open daily Monday thru Friday from 2 to 5 p.m. and from 6:30 to 9 p.m. for the membership. On Saturdays the hours range from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All boys between the ages of 7 thru 18 years are eligible for membership and are advised to enroll soon as possible. Early registration will give the opportunity to sign for the favorite activities they plan to undertake for the coming season.

President Cohen said the main objective of the Club program is to "provide boys with an opportunity to develop basic skills in areas of interest to them and to others. We feel that by stressing qualities such as sportmanship, cooperation, perseverance and honesty we can help boys not only to build better lives for themselves, but also to become valuable assets to the community. The degree to which we can accomplish this goal is our measure of a successful season."

A total membership of approximately 600 boys and young men were served on a daily basis last year. New equipment has been installed in the complex, alterations have been made in the Club rooms and the newly renovated playground area to insure the best possible accomodations for the membership.

WHAT'S A YMCA DOING IN THE LIFE INSURANCE BUSINESS?

FITNESS TESTING

It isn't as if the West Suburban YMCA in Newton is selling insurance policies. What we're offering is something better - A physical fitness evaluation test to be followed by a beginner's fitness class. You see, we're in the business of preventative health care. We want to stop the serious health risks connected with being overweight and out of shape before they start - and that's the best insurance policy of all. The testing clinic will be held by appointment only on Saturday, Oct. 4th starting at 8:00 A.M. The applicant must first receive signed clearance from a physician. The test will measure flexibility, body composition, blood pressure and cardiovascular endurance. This will be followed by a meeting with a certified physical fitness specialist to review test results. At this time applicants will be placed in a beginner's fitness class for ten weeks. At the end of the session they will be retested to determine progress. Contact Physical Director, Bill Kelly or Donna Tartaglino for consent forms and info on class times at 244-6050. Then come down to the West Suburban Y, 276 Church Street and put your "John Hancock' on one of our "Policies."

Small Claims Court

By PETER HARRINGTON

Did you know that "Small Claims Court" was set up to help you, the non-lawyer, have a judge settle your claims without the expense of hiring a lawyer?

Small Claims Court, often called a "People's Court," allows any person to go before a judge and explain his or her problem. The atmosphere is informal and the strict rules of evidence used by lawyers are not applied.

The only requirement is that your claim be for $750 or less.

To start a small claim you must go to the court in the city or town where the other party lives. The person bringing the small claim is called the plaintiff and the other party is called the defendant.

The people who use small claims court can be generally divided into two classes, creditors and consumers.

Typical consumer claims include:

— Complaints about a TV or refrigerator that does not work shortly after it is purchased.

— An individual who lent money to a friend or relative who refuses to pay the money back.

— A homeowner who is upset because of poor or incomplete repair work to his house.

— Tenants who want to recover a security deposit.

Creditors are those who have done work or provided a service and have not been paid and they include gardeners, carpenters, doctors, store owners, hospitals, telephone and utility companies.

Oftentimes, there is a dispute as to the quality of the service provided or the condition of the goods sold. When defendants claim they do not owe the money to the plaintiff, they must file an "Answer" in writing setting forth their reasons.

Defendants also have a right to file a counter claim against the party who started the small claim against them. For example, if you are being sued by a garage for the cost of repairing the brakes on your car, you may counter claim saying that on the way home from the garage the brakes failed which caused you to bave an accident and resulted in $565 damage to your car.

If you win, you don't pay for the brake job and you recover $565 to have your car repaired.

No one should be afraid to use Small Claims Court. There are many disputes that can only be settled by an impartial third person. A judge is trained to listen to both sides and make a fair decision.

The judge's decision will be based upon the facts presented to him, not on what he may have read in the paper or his experiences dealing with similar problems.

If you claim to have paid $565 to repair your car, you should bring in cancelled checks or paid receipts. Do not expect the judge to say, "We had a case like this last week and I know it costs about $565 to fix the type of damage you had to your car."

There are several steps you can take to protect yourself before you go to Small Claims Court.

First, be prepared, know the facts of your own case, write them down so you don't forget to tell the judge.

Second, bring in any evidence that you think will help your case. Such evidence may include contracts, cancelled checks, leases, photographs, paid bills or receipts, or a witness who was present or is aware of facts important to your case.

Finally, don't be afraid. The judge understands that you may be nervous. He will give both sides a full opportunity to present their cases and make a fair decision based upon our principles of law.

Peter Harrington is a Newton attorney.

Armed theft of Newton bank

NEWTON — The Newton Cooperative Bank, 210 Boylston Street, was robbed of $4,450 by an armed man early Wednesday afternoon.

According to Newton Police, the robber was a white male, six feet tall with dark curly hair weighing about 250 pounds and was wearing a blue windbreaker.

The robber presented a teller with a brown paper bag and demanded the money. He then fled out a back door of the bank. No car was seen leaving the parking lot in back.

Jacob Rosenthal, age 79, of Prince Street in West Newton was injured when he ran against a MBTA trolley while crossing the tracks at the Newton Highlands MBTA station.

Rosenthal was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital for an injury to his left elbow.

An unidentified 22 year-old man suffered a broken leg and hand when he fell underneath a city-owned truck on Wednesday afternoon at the corner of Winston and Littlefield Roads in Newton Centre.

Library

tions with NCSC.

The Executive department stated the advantages of moving library and city facilities into the NCSC-owned Davis School. Payment for utilities and custodial service would be charged on a pro rated basis.

The city would not have to pay for other maintenance to the Davis facility. The current West Newton library would be made available for commercial sale. An estimated selling price is $200,000 according to Mayor Mann. There are indications that the Needham-Newton Chamber of Commerce is already considering purchase of the building. Departments which are now crowdedinto City Hall could be moved over to the Davis School.

The Newton Police would be allowed to use the gymnasium during shift changesand at night. The greatest benefits are expected to be had by the West Newton library, traditionally one of the most underutilized libraries in the city. The superintendent of schools, Aaron Fink agreed to leave all shelving and furniture in place at the Davis library. Additional shelving would be purchased for the section of the Davis auditorium which would double as an adult section during the day and meeting hall when needed at night.

Head librarian Virginia Tashjian predicted an increased activity program including films and lectures would be made available by using the auditorium facility. The main advantage according to Tashjian is the increased use of the library because as she puts it "We'll be where the action is."

A resolution by Ald. Joseph DePasquale that called for a moratorium on any transfer to the Davis School until after the November vote on Proposition Two and a half was killed by the aldermen. DePasquale was concerned about the expenditure of city funds to expand into the Davis building when Prop. Two and a half could drastically cut the number of people employed by the city. The alderman from Ward One also wanted the hiatus to await the results of a study being conducted on the use of space in City Hall. The approval of the $21,000 will allow the Health and other city departments to move to the second floor of the Davis School by October. As for the $10,000 necessary to move the West Newton library to a new home in the Davis School, aldermen will have to sit tight and wait for the public opinions gathered at the Oct. 8 hearing before making their final decisions.

from Newton North High School, to many respiratorial diseases and scarring of lung tissue. Asbestos pipelagging must be taped in all Newton public schools. Noting that the school department has shown concern that proper safety precautions are taken, Robards said, "If it is not done properly, you can contaminate M a whole room."

Robards explained, "We feel for our own safety and the safety of the children that more knowledge needs to be given out in terms of how to handle the asbestos."

Robards noted that the asbestos torn or broken in pipes overhead pose a greater concern among custodians.

The new contract also provides a reduction in hours by allowing custodians to begin work at 9 a.m. rather than 10 a.m.

Robards asserted, "This was very important to us because men were getting home at 7:30 p.m. and this was impacting greatly on family life."

In addition, the contract has a "just cause" clause which provides that no custodian can be disciplined or discharged without "just cause."

The custodian's union, which also represents the school system's cafeteria workers, is still negotiating a contract for the cafeteria employees.

Norwood's Little Portugal

They've found life here much easier than in their homeland

By TOM BOWMAN
Staff Writer

NORWOOD — John Preto stood in the backroom of his bakery in South Norwood surrounded by trays of freshly baked bread and rolls.

"I love Norwood," he said in his thick accent. "It is a wonderful town."

Preto is one of nearly 200 Portuguese who have emigrated to Norwood over the past two decades. Most have come in search of greater opportunities — a goal which for centuries has spurred immigrants to America.

Born in Arcos de Valdevez, a mountainous farming community in northern Portugal, Preto journeyed to America in the mid-1960's and settled in Fall River, a city with a large Portuguese community. He came to Norwood to visit friends and here met his wife.

He said that Portugal is more peaceful than greater Boston. "But in Portugal you must have a lot of money," he said. "It's much easier to live here."

In 1976, Preto purchased a bakery in South Norwood with his brother Tony. It is called, appropriately, Brother's Bakery.

Last year his mother came over from Portugal and he hopes another brother will soon follow. Like Preto, many Portuguese sponsor members of their own families. Countless brothers, sisters, mothers, fathers, and in-laws have followed in close succession, usually after the first has settled and become financially stable.

Most of the immigrants in Norwood came from northern Portugal and many from the same town: Arcos de Valdevez.

As a result, the Portuguese in Norwood are more a permanent family reunion than an ethnic community.

Preto recalled the exam he took to become a U.S. citizen. For weeks he studied an English language record borrowed from a friend in Fall River.

"You must know the name president, vice-president and governor," he said. "Sometimes they ask you a question you don't know."

His only criticism of his new home concerns the pace of life. "The people live faster here," he said. "In Portugal people relax more and live longer." His uncle back home lived to be 103.

Preto has two children, a boy, 10, and a new-born daughter. Asked if he was concerned about them losing their heritage, he said simply: "I don't want them to forget Portuguese." He said that while the children speak English, Portuguese is almost always spoken at home. His son John Jr. has already been to Portugal twice.

On weekends Preto often meets friends at the Portuguese Club, housed in a store front across from Abdallah's store on Washington Street. The flags of Portugal and the United States hang in the windows that flank the front door. The membership is limited to men and nearly 80 belong. The men play pool or a Portuguese card game, known as "sueca," at the club.

While the Portuguese have many American friends, they prefer to stay together as a group. They are, for the most part, still whetted to an old-world culture of hardwork, discipline, frugality and close family ties.

On holidays, families often gather at the club for traditional feasts. At times there are native dances, which resemble the American square dance. Women in brightly colored skirts and scarves are accompanied by men in black pants, sash, and white shirt.

Joe Barboza, who recently became president of the Portuguese Club, explained that it was the outgrowth of a soccer team organized over a decade ago. Since Portuguese and others in the town participate on the team, it is called the Norwood International.

Barboza came here as a teenager in 1968. "Everybody wants to come here," he said. "The average income is low in Portugal and they want the opportunity."

He said his father arrived the year before to find work and then filed the necessary immigration papers for his family.

Barboza explained that it was difficult at first. "The language was the first problem," he said, "and the second was the kids." He found it hard to be accepted by his classmates. "But some of the kids eventually became my good friends," he added.

He soon left school to help with the family finances and worked at various jobs around town. At work he "picked up the language by talking and listening to Americans." He is now employed at Masoneilan as a stock clerk.

Like Barboza, most of the Portuguese are employed at the many factories and businesses that rim the town.

One of them is Tony Barreira, who has lived in Norwood since emigrating from Arcos de Valdevez in 1962. He attended night school for English at the Guild School and now works for a heating firm in South Norwood.

He said when he first came to Norwood he was plagued not only by language problems but also by the harsh winters of New England. "The weather is much more mild in Portugal," he said.

Like Preto's, Barreira's son has been to Portugal. "It's good for him," he said. He often tells his son stories about his native land. But Antonio Jr. seems to be more interested in the Portuguese soccer team.

One of the ways the Portuguese maintain ties with their homeland is through the native dishes they enjoy, such as "corido a Portuguesa," made with meat, chicken, linguica, and vegetables. Another is a meal of codfish, eggs, and potatoes called "balchao a goues de' sa."

While most of the Portuguese have emigrated in recent years, the first Portuguese came to the town in the 1920's.

Tony Gomes, who is now in Portugal visiting relatives, travelled to America by steamship at that time. He landed in New York and soon left to meet a friend at a pre-arranged spot in Cambridge, Mass. He was put on a train by immigration officials: a note with his name and destination was pinned to his suit.

Soon after arriving in the area, he moved to Norwood. "I still don't know why he came here," recalled his wife Mary. "But he had a real rough time." She displayed the passport he had used nearly 60 years ago. The ink has begun to fade on the yellowed booklet.

A photograph shows a young man with his dark hair carefully combed. He is dressed in a suit complete with a vest and gold watch chain. By his side he holds a wide-brimmed hat.

There is a look of determination on his face. "See how handsome he looks," Mrs. Gomes said, pointing at the photograph. "It's no wonder I fell in love with him."

Besides the difficulties of a new language, he was unable to find work for many months. He eventually found "pick and shovel work" at 35 cents an hour. In the evenings he would take English classes at the junior high school.

Years later, he started Sunnyside Bakery on Dean Street before working for two Norwood firms: the American Brake Shoe Company and the Boston Pattern Company. He would often send money to his family in Arouca, his hometown to the north of Lisbon. In 1941 he became an American citizen.

Although many of the first emigrants moved back to Portugal, Gomes and another South Norwood resident, Joe Portas, decided to remain.

"He liked the area," said his wife, "he never wanted to go back there to live." Today they have two sons, 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Indeed many who have come to Norwood have the same dream that brought Tony Gomes here as a young man.

"As long as you work you can get anything," said Tony Afonso, who along with his wife emigrated here in the late 1960's. Both were raised on farms in Arcos de Valdevez and found the work exhausting with few rewards. "If things are bad forget it," he said, "you work all year for nothing."

His wife Flavia recalled that everything was made on the farm and there was rarely money left even for small purchases. They work for companies in South Norwood and recently purchased a home on Douglas Avenue, where they live along with their parents.

Most of the Portuguese live in South Norwood, an area which has known many ethnic groups in this century: Syrians, Lithuanians, Italians and Greeks. Housing became available when these ethnic groups began moving to other sections.

It was not long before Portuguese like Manuel Gomes began purchasing some of the three-decker homes and starting their own businesses. Gomes came from Lisbon in 1970 and bought a jewelry store five years later across from Brother's Bakery.

"I like the town," he said, "I have many good friends here." As with many of his other countrymen, he learned English while at work. "The life is much better here," Gomes said. Although he has many fond memories of his homeland, he has yet to return home for a visit. "It costs too much money," he admitted.

As he stood behind the counter, his six-year-old son played nearby. He said his son speaks English but rarely Portuguese. "Some day he will speak it better," Gomes said hopefully. He teased his son by saying that when he grows up he would send him to Portugal to see if he could fend for himself.

Asked if he would ever return to his homeland, Gomes gazed out the window of his shop. "Good question," he said "I really don't know."

Behind him on the shelf there were two flags in a small holder – one of Portugal and the other of the United States.

People Power

Rev. Eugene Pickett to speak

NEWTON — The president of the Unitarian Universalist Association, Rev. Eugene Pickett, will be the main speaker at the installation of Rev. Gerald Krick as minister of the First Unitarian Society in Newton on Sunday, Sept. 28 at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Eugene Pickett

Rev. Pickett's speech is entitled "A Statement of Faith" and the public is invited to attend.

The church in West Newton has experienced considerable growth in membership under Rev. Krick, who assumed his ministerial duties there in November 1979.

Most recently Minister of the Unitarian Universalist church in Oak Park, Illinois for nine years, Rev. Krick served at one time as Director of the Unitarian Universalist ministry for undergraduate students in Greater Boston.

As chairman of the civil rights committee for Boston's Junior Chamber of Commerce, he challenged the judiciary powers of Boston to remove cages where defendants were forced to sit during trials.

Other participants in the service to install Rev. Krick will be the Rev. Rhys Williams of the First and Second Church in Boston Unitarian Universalist, the Rev. David C. Pohl, Director of Ministry of the Unitarian Universalist Association, and Mrs. Melissa Teixeira, Chairman of the Board of the First Unitarian Society in Newton.

As part of the service selections from Bach, Palestrina, and Gabriele, as well as a Joplin rag, will be performed by the Brassworks, a brass quintet including Robert Peterson and Robert Berardino on trumpets, Peter Witt on the horn, Richard Johnson on the trombone and James Damoulakis on the tuba.

Also performing will be Duo Violinists James Nagy of the Boston Symphony and his wife, Paula C. Nagy, who will play pieces by Schutz and Bruckner.

Reverend Grauel to speak

CHESTNUT HILL — The forum of Congregation Mishkan Tefila, Chestnut Hill, will hold its opening dinner meeting on Sunday evening, Oct. 5, in the Social Hall, on Hammond Pond Parkway.

The featured speaker, Rev. John Grauel, is a living legend — his career spans his having been a pastor of a "sea" parish on the coast of Maine, to his membership in the American-Christian Palestine Committee, followed by his membership in the Haganah and appearing as a mysterious figure in the underground in Europe (and known as John the priest). His most celebrated exploit remains his participation as leader of the vessel EXODUS during World War II.

For over three decades he has continued his unceasing efforts on behalf of the State of Israel. He still preaches and functions as a churchman, has a deep concern for the "generation gap," has served on Drug and Racial Tension Committees, has been a regular lecturer for Operation Joshua in Israel, and tours the U.S. speaking on college campuses.

This program commences with cocktails at 6:15 p.m., followed by dinner and the speaker. Forum Presidents are Roberta and Robert Brener, and Chairmen are Laurie and David Feinberq. For further information and reservations, please call the Congregation office 332-7770."

Hebrew College Women's Association committee members met recently to plan the 49th annual scholarship dinner-dance scheduled Saturday, Nov. 1, at Temple Mishkan Tefila in Chestnut Hill. Attending the meeting were (from left): Bette Levine, Roz Frim, Sylvia Antelman and Mildred Levitt.

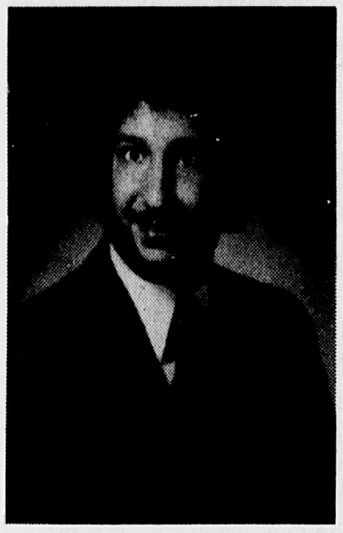
WEST NEWTON — The Newton Job Matching Center, 995 Watertown St., will have an open house Wednesday, Oct. 1, from 2 to 4 p.m. Employers and the general public are invited to attend.



William Lichtenstein, formerly of Newton Centre, has been promoted to senior production associate for 20-20, the ABC news magazine show. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lichtenstein of Newton Centre.

Gov. King praises local blind sailors

NEWTON — The members of the sailing program at the Carroll Center for the Blind, Newton, were presented a trophy for their acconplishments by Gov. Edward King on behalf of the Pleasure Bay Sailing Program, South Boston.

The Carroll Center's special program (called Outdoor Enrichment) allows the blind to participate in a variety of outdoor physical activities, and throughout the summer they learned the fundamentals of sailing from Pleasure Bay Sailing Program Director, Harry McDonough.

"Harry has really given our blind participants an opportunity they never would have had" said Arthur O'Neill, Carroll Center Recreation Director.

Also on hand for the ceremonies was Senator William Bulger, in whose district this unique program took place.

The Outdoor Enrichment Program at the Carroll Center for the Blind is the only one of its kind allowing the blind to participate with sighted volunteers in activities which also include skiing, skating, canoeing, bicycling and hiking as well as sailing and is available to the blind throughout the New England area.

Program Director O'Neill says that the biggest difficulty in losing your vision is losing confidence in yourself as a capable person. "Many of our blind people never participated in these activities when they were sighted, so you can imagine the joy and newfound self-confidence they experience when handling a sailboat by themselves."

The program operates with the use of volunteers for each blind person. "Without them," says O'Neill, "this program would not be possible." Volunteers are constantly needed.

The success of the Outdoor Enrichment Program throughout the past year has led to the program receiving a grant from the Mass. Commission for the Blind allowing them to expand their services to blind for this year. .

Trips include local activities as well as several overnight trips to the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

College nights at Newton North

NEWTON — The Counseling Department of Newton North High School is planning two School and College Nights for this fall. They will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 30 and Tuesday, Oct. 21 at 7:45 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Both evenings are open to all Newton North High School students and their parents.

As in the previous school year, there will be no single college visits scheduled during the day for 1980-81. Instead, at these evening programs students will be able to learn about many colleges and universities at one time as well as be exposed to some schools they may never have previously considered. In addition, this will afford parents the opportunity to become better informed about a large number of educational institutions.

All schools and colleges that have visited Newton North during the past few years have been invited to participate. Among those that are planning to attend the College Night on September 30 are: Amherst College, Aquinas Junior College, Babson College, Barnard College, Bentley College, Boston University, Brown University, Bucknell University, Carleton College, Clark University, Colby College, College of the Holy Cross, Connecticut College, Dean Junior College, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Fitchburg State College, Hampshire College, Lasell Junior College, Lesley College, Mass. Inflation top problem facing nation's colleges

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Wooing non-traditional students may be the survival route for private as well as public colleges around the nation, say college presidents assessing the new school year.

As the schools open up, top educators seem to agree on that, and on the main problem facing them: inflation.

They said getting in more students means more money from tuition and more leverage in the battle against inflation.

Another problem is faculty retention, a check of selected presidents of colleges showed. This is a problem in light of increasingly higher salaries paid by industry.

"Inflation is the 'devil in the congregation' and, unfortunately, the universities cannot solve that nationwide problem and must tighten their belts for yet another period of austerity," said Dr. John E. Cribbet, chancellor of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Dr. Charles H. Samson Jr. of Texas A&M University in College Station seconded that assessment. He said the inflation problem is compounded for institutions which are continuing to expand.

"We have to do more — serve more students and support more research, for example — with dollars that are continually worth less," the top administrator at Texas A&M said.

University of Missouri President Dr. James C. Olson adopted a philosophical attitude when asked to size up the new school year.

"Higher education has no corner on the market when it comes to problems," he said.

"Many of the difficulties facing higher education are not unique to higher education — such as inflation, energy and population shifts. These outside forces continue to determine our destiny. The days of collegiate autonomy are over."

Olson cited adjustment to demographic changes as a problem second only to inflation in importance.

"As the 18- to 22-year-old group declines in numbers and the over-65 age group increases, higher education must adjust to a broader spectrum of the population," he said.

Samson echoed other college presidents when he warned of continued encroachment into the affairs of higher education by various agencies of the federal government.

"Texas A&M is spending hundreds of thousands of dolars in paperwork and related activities to comply with a myriad of federal regulations and associated reports," he said. "And I am sure our institution is not unique in this respect. These are funds that we think could be put to better use in the educational process."

Some studies claim the paperwork connected with complying with layers of federal regulation costs higher education more than $2 billion a year.

Olson also stressed the need to upgrade faculty salaries.

"Faculty generally are falling behind, both in terms of keeping pace with inflation and keeping up with salaries offered by industry," he said.

"While few people enter the teaching profession because of monetary considerations, we can expect them to be willing to sacrifice only so much — and we are rapidly reaching the point where many of them may draw the line."

Parents sacrifice, too, when it comes time to get up the money for the college tuition bill. So the sacrifices along the academic trail are many in these inflationary times, college officials said.

A compromise student-loan plan voted by congress may help.

According to this proposal, interest rates on federal student loans would be increased and Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler would be given expanded authority to make direct loans to poor students.

The student-loan reform legislation was adopted by a House-Senate conference committee only after the solons agreed to cut back federal interest subsidies in the Guaranteed Student Loan program, the Chronicle of Higher Education reported.

The compromise plan would continue the direct-loan program in its present form — loans financed from campus funds and Congressional appropriations.

But an alternative financing mechanism would be created.

"The Secretary of Education would be given authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury to provide capital to campuses for direct loans," said the Chronicle report.

Another provision of the student-loan compromise:

The government would make guaranteed loans available to students' parents at the rate of 8 percent interest if they started repayment within 60 days after getting the money. Otherwise, interest would be 11 percent.

Shirley Hufstedler

Education head says cooperate

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Cooperation rather than confrontation" should be the theme this school year in the grade, high schools and colleges, Secretary of Education Shirley Hufstedler believes.

She said parents and even businesses must enter into the education partnership marked by cooperation.

"What everybody wants for his and her children is quality education," she said, noting the goal is more easily reachable through cooperation.

She was critical of "turfdoms" — special interests protecting given territories along the academic trail.

She said people with a stake in education should be able to talk across the turfdoms: parents to teachers, school board members to teachers and parents, taxpayers to the superintendent and so forth. And students? They should be heard, too.

On other matters, from the continuing controversy over school prayer to violence in the classroom and better service to youths who do not go on to college, Mrs. Hufstedler has no quick fixes.

"Cooperation rather than confrontation" is a major theme of her administration, said Mrs. Hufstedler, a petite lawyer and former judge who served on boards of many colleges before President Carter named her as the first head of the newly created U.S. Department of Education.

Her name is the one most often mentioned when talk is of the President appointing the first woman to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Asked about that, Mrs. Hufstedler said:

"That is only known to God and President Carter," she said, her eyes lighting and her lips forming a quick smile.

Then, in a show of wit that marked much of the interview, she added:

"Of course, neither one of them has told me a thing."

In a wide-ranging interview including discussion as well as specific answers to a laundry-list of questions touching on some deep education issues, Mrs. Hufstedler pulled no punches.

Throughout the interview she repeated many times that the role of the federal government in education is that of "catalyst."

She does not envision, for example, that the fledgling department with a budget of $14 billion a year, will grow into a czardom that will dictate to the 16,000 local and 50 state departments of education.

Following are some of the questions put to Mrs. Hufstedler and her answers:

Q. Do you feel the schools teach values, should teach values? If they lag, what is the price society pays.

A. Within the framework of the law and the Constitution, the local communities and states should determine what is to be taught. It is difficult to see how a student can study history without exposure to values, or study literature without encountering valus, or dissect a frog without a moment's reflection on the value of life itself. But debates and decisions on values are best left to the communities.

Q. What are the three biggest problems in the new school year?

A. Probably the most severe challenge to schools will be how they can provide quality education, adequate facilities and enough personnel while facing budget restraints. The responsibility for financial support is primarily a state and local responsibility, and inflation and local tax cuts have limited financial resources for some school districts. It is important to remember that the Federal Government only provides approximately eight percent of each school district's budget, and that money is directed primarily to programs that assist low-income students, such as Title I. While general financing for the schools must be generated locally, the Education Department is trying to help fiscally troubled districts through its school finance study and through the provision of technical assistance to school districts to show them cost-effective ways to comply with federal education standards.

Careers behind the scenes in the arts

By the Arts Council

BOSTON — "Not everyone is a talented dancer, actor or violinist," noted Anne Hawley, the arts administrator who heads the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities which is headquartered in Boston. "But all organizations, theaters, museums, symphonies, ballet companies and the like, require people with many different skills.

"The State Arts Council is interested in seeing people with a variety of abilities move into the arts and humanities. Without those who work behind the scenes, no organization can prosper. The dancers, actors and violinists are not enough, no matter how great their talent," she said.

Many high school students who find the arts and humanities attractive are unaware of the diversity of jobs available. More than 14,000 people hold jobs within the arts industry here in Massachusetts.

Three of those 14,000 are Michael McCurdy of Lincoln, Mary Todd Glaser of Andover, and Jodie Kiser of Wellesley. What do they do?

Michael McCurdy studied graphics and then sold his illustrations to book and magazine publishers. Now he owns and operates a small press. Mary Todd Glaser completed four years of graduate work that taught her how to conserve art on paper. Now she saves crumbling World War I posters, town records and rare books at the New England Document Conservation Center in Andover. Jodie Kiser completed studies in physical therapy and spent the next seven years working with physically and mentally handicapped children. Now she goes to the Franklin Park Zoo every morning where she tends baby animals as the infant care specialist.

Michael McCurdy

As a child, the toy that fascinated McCurdy most was a printing press. That early interest in printing and his love for ink and paper led him to decide to become a book illustrator.

In college, he studied etching, woodcuts, and painting. After graduating from Tufts University where he attended the Museum School during his senior year, McCurdy knocked on many doors, selling his illustrations to publishers, just as he had intended.

"When I was young, I was surrounded by people who had gone around with Ernest Hemingway," McCurdy recalled. "And I remember a party one year that my mother threw for John Cheever's 19th birthday. Later, I found myself drawn to the work of contemporary authors, and I began to use evenings and weekends to print books, only 100 copies of each title, in a small home workshop."

That effort grew into a full-time business called the Penmaen Press. Every day, one can hear the type being set on a linotype nachine, listen to the pages as they come off a press, and watch new books appear. Two editors, an assistant printer and office help now share the work load. McCurdy, however, is happiest when "alone and working on a wood block, completely lost in myself." Nearly every Penmaen book contains original graphics.

Mary Todd Glaser

Paper doesn't last forever, and yet it is used for countless important things — to record wills, keep town records, draw up plans for buildings, to paint and watercolor, for maps and posters. When documents or works of art on paper are crumbling with age, some turn up at the New England Document Conservation Center in Andover and come under Mary Todd Glaser's care.

Perhaps the paper has been accidentally torn or light has faded the inks or the chemicals in the air have combined with the paper to produce sulfuric acid, which, in turn, destroys the paper. At the center, water baths are used to rinse out the acids, if the inks do not dissolve. Other solutions are used when inks do run in the water. A final bath in an alkaline solution neutralizes the paper and stops the deterioration.

A staff of eight working under Glaser is currently involved in cleaning and repairing Currier and Ives prints, a Henry Moore intaglio print and several 18th century newspapers.

Behind Glaser are eight years of college with "lots of chemistry, art history and practical art courses." Only three graduate programs of the type she pursued are available in the United States, and several of the people on her staff have trained on-the-job.

"A commitment to art conservation is like a commitment to medicine, requiring every bit as much expertise," Glaser said. Her tone softened, though, as she remembered one of her most satisfying jobs — conserving a collections of Frank Lloyd Wright's drawings. She said, "They were not only very challenging because they were done on extremely thin tracing paper, but they were absolutely beautiful."

Jodie Kiser

Every spring, Jodie Kiser called the Franklin Park Zoo to inquire about jobs. "And one spring, I was lucky — they had just created a job for an infant care specialist, a person who would collect information about mothers and infants and raise any orphaned newborn animals.

"The orphans have to be raised in ways that closely resemble the natural setting. For instance, if it is a goat, one bottle feeds it from above, imitating the mother. If the animals were treated like human babies, they would have trouble when reintroduced to their own kind at the zoo."

Kiser's job often begins before babies are born. She recently spent a lot of time with Toto, the zoo's pregnant lion, who had neglected cubs born to her several times in the past. Kiser, knowing that abnormal animal behavior is often caused by stress, isolated Toto from the public and monitored the birth by video camera. Because of Kiser's efforts, Toto took over the care of her cubs. And Kiser had three less babies to raise.

An average workday might find her administering medicine to an ailing monkey, using the portable x-ray machine on a limping gazelle, or readying a blow pole and dart to anesthetize a tiger who needs a checkup. Kiser has found her niche as part of the team that operates a major city zoo.

People now searching for jobs in the arts and humanities can take advantage of an offer from the Metropolitan Cultural Alliance of Boston. Resumes of those seeking jobs are sent each month to all those on their mailing list. The charge is $15 for a three-month period. Those interested can call 247-1460 or write the Alliance at 250 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. 02116.

Tigers get off on right foot

Jennings scores twice

By ERNIE JONES
Sports Writer

There was no hurry...

The Framingham North band bus arrived late and its members along with the cheerleaders ran to get into the gate before the opening kickoff. It was the only comotion to be heard from the Spartan side all day.

Newton North bested its opponent in every depatrment to walk away with a 22-0 shutout in its non-league opener Friday at Dickinson Stadium.

The Tiger offense went over, around and through Framingham North's defense.

Newton North Coach Norm Walker said, "I've never had this many elements on offense before."

The Tigers were successful in all of the triple-threat columns, the run, pass and kick.

It didn't take long.

A major factor in the Tiger success was Kenney. He gave Newton North optimum field position throughout the contest with his punt returns. Kenney didn't bobble one. He tucked the pigskin under his arm, scooted around defenders and registered runbacks of seven, 25, 15 and 32 yards. Two of them initiated Newton North touchdown drives.

The Tigers went airborne in the second half. Newton North took the ball on its opponents 40 thanks to Kenny's 35-yard return and proceeded to the goal line.

Quarterback Bob Billings was on target and hit three aerials in a row. The senior rifle targeted a pass to Armando Proia for 18 yards and followed with a loop to Jennings coming out of the backfield for eight more yards.

Billings displayed coolness and composure under pressure. With a Spartan lunging for his midsection, he arced a pass to the left corner of the endzone over a defender into the waiting arms of Paul Howley for the score.

Walker said, "He's as good a passer as we've ever had at Newton."

Paul Westerkamp put the skin between the uprights for a PAT and shut the door on Framingham North with the Tigers leading, 19-0, in the third quarter.

Westerkamp followed in the fourth stanza with a 28-yard field goal to put the icing on the cake.

In sum, the Tiger runners ate up 120 yards on the ground and Billings was nine for 13 in the air for 89 yards.

Bob Kenney started the ground assault with a 25-yard runback on the first Spartan punt to put the ball on the Framingham North 40. Fullback Al Fortune got the nod and racked up 21 yards in three carries to put the Tigers on the two. Halfback Peter Jennings administered the 'coup de grace' when he plunged over the left side for six.

Three plays later, Tiger defensive back Scott Thaxton picked off a Dave Nickerson aerial and the winners were threatening again from the 35. On the next play, Jennings went up the middle, broke tackles and pranced 35 yards to the goal line to give Newton North a 12-0 lead before the first-quarter whistle blew.

Why such success?

Give some credit to the Newton North offensive line. Billings got the time he needed thanks to a lean but determined pit crew. The five man cast of center Steve Gilson, guards Mark Katre and John Davis along with tackles Kevin Connell and Kevin Troy put up their own version of the 'Iron Curtain.' The quintet's efforts also provided the daylight for the successful Tiger running attack.

Defense?

Framingham North never got beyond Newton North's 45 yardline. Up front, the Tiger defensive line kept the pressure on Nickerson all afternoon. The Framingham North signal caller found himself going down for the count more times then he'd care to remember. He was thrown for losses seven times.

Add to that interceptions by Thaxton and Brian Quinn and one can understand the frustrations of Spartan Coach Vin Caputo.

"We tried to pass and rush against them, but it just didn't work," he said.

Walker commented, "We still have some growing to do on defense. They didn't have a complex offense and we were not severely tested."

Newton North escaped injuries, first-game jitters and turnovers in the opening triumph. The team travels to Medford on Saturday to warm up with a Greater Boston League opponent.

Only one question remains....will the Tigers burn as bright in the forests of the Suburban League?

Littleton's speed the difference

Lions tamedin opener

By JONATHAN GREENSPAN
Staff Writer

A poor snap from center on a third quarter Newton South punt deep in their own territory and an ensuing 25-yard touchdown drive by the Littleton Tigers assured an opehing day victory for the Tigers in a Sunday game staged at Littleton High.

"The snap as well as a few other bad breaks took away our momentum on several occassions," said a disappointed Lion Head Coach Art Kojoyian. "The score is misleading, we certainly didn't get blown off the field. They came up with the big plays and we didn't."

On the Lions' initial drive of the day, it looked as though the club would be able to pound and slash their way through the Tiger defense almost at will. Taking possession on their own 34, the Lions marched down to Littletons' 25-yard line on the strength of the legs of Capt. Michael Kasten and Mitch Podufaly.

The Lions, however, would be their own worst enemy. On second and seven Kasten, playing his first game in the backfield in two years, busted off left tackle only to fumble away both the drive and South's momentum.

After trading possessions, the Tigers put the half's only points on the board on a beautifully executed deep slant pattern over the middle. Alan Brown, the Tigers' strong-armed veteran quarterback hit Gary Harnumn in full flight and all the receiver needed was a fine block by right end Steve Magee to reach paydirt.

The remainder of the first quarter, as well as the second and third periods were defensive. The longest drive during this period was 47-yard march by Newton South which stalled out on the Tigers' 30-yard line after a loss of six yards on an unsuccessful fourth down screen play to Kasten.

"We had some key drives killed by penalties," mentioned Kojoyian. "These mistakes stalled our offense and took away our momentum each time we got something going." Even the Lions' most consistent drive took a detour on its march up field; a fifteen-yard clipping penalty momentarilly thwarted the offensive charge.

In the third quarter, the Lion offense again plugged away at the penetratable Tiger defensive line on the fine blocking of Carl Shishmanian, Ben Porter, and Peter Alexander on the left side of the offensive line.

On a quick pitch around the left end, Kasten broke free only to be cut off by safety Steve Magee darting over to knock the 170-pound all-purpose back out of bounds. The 26-yard scamper placed the Lions at their own 47 where Art Walton banged out 10 yards and another first down. Newton South again, however, fell victim to the penalty marker, this time a holding call canceled the drive.

Punting from their own 44-yard line three plays later, the center snap floated over Jim Hanelin's head and a host of Tigers swarmed on the frustrated punter at the Lion 25-yard line.

On the strength of five consecutive carries by Matt Pindara and a second successful point after by Alan Brown, the Tigers upped the score to 14-0. Pindara, who gained 105 yards on 10 carries was soon to be heard from again.

After substitute quarterback Mike Pappas was tossed for a nine-yard loss on the ensuing Lion drive, Newton South punted, handing the ball over to Littleton at its own 40-yard line.

It did not take long. On second and eight from the 42, Brown faked a dive up the middle and handed off to Pindara breaking around left end. Once beyond the line of scrimmage, the 160-pounder was home free, coasting to his second tounchdown of the afternoon.

A final fury by Newton South almost averted the shutout but a Pappas pass from the eight with 52 seconds remaining bounced off David Hill's hands and Littleton had both the shutout and the ballgame.

Next Saturday, Newton South opens up its home season tackling Weston at 1:30 p.m.

Lancers fall victim to pass

By ERNIE JONES
Sports Writer

There was another explosion in Fitchburg this weekend.

Not at the chemical plant but in the passing duo of Notre Dame quarterback Mike Leger and his favorite receiver Jay Hebert. The pair connected for three touchdowns to lead the Crusaders to a 20-12 triumph over Newton Catholic in a non-league contest at Fitchburg.

Hebert, a 6-4, 200-pound tight end, announced his presence on the first play from scrimmage. Leger lined up in the halfback position, and took the ball from temporary quarterback Jeff Gronet.

Hebert went long , outdistanced his opponents and hauled in Leger's pass for a 62-yard six-pointer.

The duo was not through however. In the second quarter, Hebert pulled down his second reception for a 72-yard paydirt effort. On the next set of downs Hebert pulled down the Leger aerial out of a crowd of Lancer defenders and went 36 yards for the Crusaders third touchdown.

Just to add insult to injury, Hebert leaped to snatch a pass in the end zone for the conversion.

Hebert's performance was even more amazing when one considers he was shadowed by a Lancer defender throughout the contest in order to beef up the Newton Catholic zone defense.

The Lancers were anything but dead. Except for the Leger-Hebert connection, the Newton Catholic defense stopped Notre Dame cold. Coach Tom Raeke must have given an inspiring speech at half time because the Lancers came out and stopped Hebert from scoring for the rest of the contest.

But the damage was done.

Hebert's second score took the zip out of the Lancer offense. Newton Catholic's spirit didn't surface again until halfback Marc Hung was brought in. Hung, a 5-5, 140 cannonballer got the Lancers rolling in the second half.

Hung ran around end and off tackle to put Newton Catholic on the four yardline in the last minute of play with his team behind, 20-12. A TD and a coversion would have tied the contest. But a costly 15-yard bench penalty and an incomplete pass put the Lancer hopes to rest.

Newton Catholic was temporarily in command in the second quarter with two quick touchdowns to take a 12-6 lead.

The Lancer's Jack Connell started things off when he pounced on a Notre Dame fumble on the Crusader 29 yardline. Dan Conboy was at the quarterback slot for the first time since his hand injury in pre-season. Conboy found Phil Cappello open and hit him with a bullet for a 14-yard gain. Four plays later slotback Mike Walsh went four yards around end for the first Lancer TD.

Newton Catholic held the trenches after the kickoff and forced the Crusaders to punt. John Venditti burst through the Crusader line to block the kick and the linebacker picked up the loose ball on the four to race across the goal line for Newton Catholic's second six-pointer.

Corwins pace Tiger golf

Last season Paul and John Jepsen helped the Tiger golf team to the Suburban League Championship with a 9-0 record. Paul Jepsen graduated and in total only six players from both the varsity and jayvee squads were expected back for this season's confrontations on the links.

The oddsmakers wouldn't give you much that the Tigers could come up with a winning season.

But some surprise new blood has surfaced to put a smile on Coach Jack Neville's face. Topping the list is Bruce Corwin.

The sophomore has burst into the lineup in the number two position, one slot higher than his older brother Eric.

Newton North will try to extend it's winning streak on Tuesday when the team travels to the Ponkapog course to face Weymouth South.

Tennis tournament results

The Newton Recreation Department hosted its annual citywide adult tennis championship at the Newton North High School Tennis Courts Sept. 12-14.

A record field of over 165 residents entered the five events. Included were men's and women's singles, men's doubles, mixed doubles, and men' s 50 and over singles. Men's Singles Tournament play started with the largest men's singles field, 73 contestants.

Nine qualifying matches were played first to complete the championship draw of 64 players. Each contestant played two matches until the men's field was down to 16 players. Third round play was completed with no major upsets. In quarterfinal action, Dick Levenson of Newton and Bob Bernstein of Waban were matched in a three set match with Bernstein prevailing. The score: 6-2, 5-7, 6-2.

On Sunday morning Bernstein continued tournament play in a semi-final match with Steve Brooker of Newton Centre, the 978 champion, 1979 runner-up and the tournament number 1 seeded player. Bernstein proved too much for Steve Drooker and scored an easy victory to gain a spot in the men's singles final. The score was 6-1, 6-1.

In the match-up in the other semi-final play, Jim Rosenthal of Chestnut Hill faced Gene Dressler of Newton Centre. Rosenthal gained the men's singles final. The score: 6-2, 6-4.

Rain Sunday forced the men's championship to be shifted indoors to the Charles River Indoor Tennis Center. The shift to the carpeted surface had little effect on Rosenthal. His consistency in all phases of the game made the difference in defeating Bernstein i n the finals 6-3, 6-4. Women's Singles

In women's singles action a strong field competed. In the finals, Tavi Noble of Newton faced Sally Smith of Waban. Noble, who throughout the tournament displayed a superior ground stroke game, wore down Smith with steady base-line play to win the women's championship 6-2, 6-2. Men's Doubles

In the men's doubles championship Steve Drooker and Gary Markoff of Newton Centre faced the father and son team of Faul and Jim Rosenthal of Chestnut Hill. In the end the team of Drooker and Markoff came out on top with a score of 6-3, 6-4. Mixed Doubles

In the nixed doubles competition the husband and wife team of Lidia and Jerrold Rosenbaum defeated the team of Grace Muscrella and Low Horvitz of Newton Centre by a score of 6-2, 6-4. Men's 50 and over

For the first time Newton held tournament competion in the 50 and over category. Manfred Goodwin of Newton defeated Mel Mark of Waban by a score of 6-4, 6-7, 5-4 tiebreaker, retired.

Newton North harriers win opening meet

The Newton North cross country team won its opening meet of the season on Friday against North Quincy High School, 15-49.

Newton North dominated the top 10 positions, as nine out of the top 10 runners were in Tiger uniforms. The winning time was turned in by Cam Laing. Laing ran the 2.5 mile course in 12 minutes and 22 seconds.

Finishing directly behind Laing at 12:23 was George Fulk and Peter Leary.

The only North Quincy finisher in the top 10 was Gary Morin, who finished in the seventh spot with a time of 12:52.

North Coach Joe Connolly was pleased with his team's showing. The Tigers use a box style to run their races and that allows for the possibility of any one of five or six of the top runners finishing in the lead.

CAR Talk

by John Borelli

The four tires are your car's only contact with the road. As a result, every driving maneuver, starting, stopping, turning, is thus accomplished through the four "footprints" where the tires meet the road. Because of their importance to your safety, driving ease, have them checked frequently. Modern tires use a combination of materials and several types of construction to contain pressurized air and insure a firm grip on the road. The structure is composed of plies, or layers, of rayon, nylon, polyester, steel or other types of cords within the rubber sidewalls and under the grooved tread to provide controlled flexing and strength. Today's tires are available in three basic types, bias-ply, belted bias-ply, and belted radial tires.

For the "contact" that will leave an everlasting favorable "impression" on you and your car, come to NEWTON CAR RADIO, 873 Walnut St., Newton Centre. In addition to an experienced, friendly and concerned staff, we offer the alarm systems and installation that can protect you from theft while reducing your insurance premiums at the same time. Let your car "footprint" it over today to NEWTON CAR RADIO where we have three bays available to provide drive-in service with minimum waiting. Open 9-5:30 Mon.-Sat., Tel. 332-2487. American Express, Master-Charge and VISA accepted.

AUTO TIP:

The basic difference between the three types of tires is in the number of cords and general construction design.

Newton South JV gridders prevail

Jim Hanlon's nine-yard romp through the Littleton High line provided the winning margin as the Newton South Jayvee gridsters took a 6-0 win in a contest Monday at Newton South.

The Lions maintained ball control throughout the second half. Quarterback Joe Spagnola sparked the Lion offense with six completions on 10 attempts. Newton South might have won by a greater margin but a costly penalty blunted a first-half scoring drive.

Hanlon went over for six in the third quarter and was aided by backs Steve Anglin and Bill Bracken. Mike Antonellis, a junior, pulled down Spagnola's aerials to keep the winning offense on the move.

South girls swim past Blue Hills

Five first-place finishes pushed the Newton South girls past Blue Hills Regional, 95-76, in a swim meet Monday at Canton.

Laura Rosenthal took the honors in two events for the Lions. She outdistanced her opponents in the 50 butterfly with a winning time of 38.7 and in the 100 individual medley she stopped the watch at 1:21.

Lotti Lent copped the 200 freestyle with a 2:48.8 performance. Newton South swept the event with Joyce Oppenheim in second and right behind was teammate Cathy Strange.

Rhonda Rothman grabbed the winner's laurels in the 100 free style with a time of 1:39.9. This was Newton South's second victory in a row.

The 200 relay saw the Lion team of Carla Chavelotti, Becky Hartman, Lotti Levitt and Heidi Klein post a victory by stopping the watch at the 2:31. Chavelotti also was first in the 100 backstroke with a clocking of 1:26.5.

Other top performers for the Lions included Erica Schnitzer with a second in the 100 breast stroke and Sissy DeRosa registered a second place in the 100 backstroke.

Newton South will face the iron when it takes on Wellesley Friday night at the Newton North pool.

Health experts to debate new law

BOSTON — "How much does the consumer have a right to know?" — That question, as it relates to complaints filed against Massachusetts physicians, will be the subject of a special educational forum cosponsored by the Health Planning Council for Greater Boston and the Massachusetts Health Council.

The conference will take place Oct. 2, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Gardner Auditorium at the State House, Boston.

Recently enacted state legislation provides for the confidentiality of complaints filed with the Board of Registration in Medicine against physicians in the Commonwealth. The statute prohibits public disclosure of any information involving these complaints until the Board has taken final action on the matter under investigation.

At the educational forum, a panel of five experts will debate this new law and its implications for consumers, physicians, hospitals, the press, and the Board of Registration in Medicine. The audience will be encouraged to submit questions to the panelists.

The panel will include: William B. Munier, M.D., Executive Vice President of the Massachusetts Medical Society; George Annas, Esq., Board of Registration in Medicine; Patrick Carroll, Esq., Legal Counsel, Massachusetts Hospital Association; Lawrence Kirsch, Executive Director, Consumer Health Advocacy Program of Massachusetts; Richard Knox, Medical Writer, the Boston Globe. The Honorable Theodore Aleixo, Chairman, House Committee on Health Care, will moderate the session. Joanne B. Bluestone, Executive Director, Health Planning Council for Greater Boston, will give opening remarks. Closing comments will be made by Bruce E. Marquis, Vice President, Massachusetts Health Council.

Registration will be held at the door, starting at 9 a.m. The fee is $3 (students: $2). For more information, call Hooky Darack, 332-4269 or Nancy Larsen, 426-2022.

The Health Planning Council is the federally designated Health Systems Agency for 65 towns and cities in the Greater Boston area. The agency is comprised of 231 area residents concerned with planning for a more efficient health care delivery system.

Agoraphobia is N-W fall lecture topic

NEWTON — Dr. Gerald Groves, director of the Boston University Behavior Therapy Unit, is the featured speaker for the annual fall meeting of the Boston Phobia Group on Monday, Sept. 29, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Ellison-Pratt Building.

The Boston Phobia Group is a self-help support group which deals primarily with agoraphobia. According to Dr. Gilbert Kotzen, a psychologist affiliated with Newton-Wellesley Hospital, agoraphobia is a much publicized but little understood problem. Mislabeled as "the housewife's disease," it actually affects men as well as women.

The name of the illness is derived from a Greek word meaning "fear of the marketplace," and the illness is primarily defined as a fear of experiencing severe anxiety in a situation which is perceived to be entrapping or threatening. Attending church, dining in restaurants, flying, shopping in open malls, and even going to the movies may trigger an agoraphobic's anxiety attack. Symptoms of these attacks often include lightheadedness, palpitations, and fear of losing control.

Recognizing how limited and debilitating the phobia can be has prompted the formation of the Boston Phobia Group, members of which offer each other support through a telephone network.

The Boston Phobia Group urges anyone who has experienced the symptoms of agoraphobia to attend the meeting. Those persons who feel they would benefit by learning more about the illness are also welcome to attend.

The meeting is free of charge and open to the public.

Recycling for profit

NEWTON — If you or an organization you belong to is looking for a way to earn money and help conserve energy and natural resources, maybe you should recycle aluminum.

Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company will pay consumers twenty-three cents per pound; and in certain markets pays a bonus price, depending on market conditions.

Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company buys all-aluminum products. Besides all aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum such as pie plates, foil, frozen food and dinner trays, and dip, meat and pudding containers, Reynolds recycles certain other items — including siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, lawn furniture tubing and aluminum tubing and aluminum castings.

This aluminum must be free of all foreign materials, cut to lengths not exceeding three feet and should not be mixed with aluminum cans.

In 1979, Reynolds recycled more than one million pounds of aluminum in New England. Reynolds maintains a recycling service center in Framingham, Mass., and has 18 mobile unit stops throughout New England.

Recyclers may take aluminum to the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Plant in Framingham on Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9-4:30 p.m. The Framingham Plant is located at 4 Tripp Street, Framingham, Mass.

For further information call 800-228-2525.

Newton Art Association features Jack Callahan

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A treat is in store for Newton Art Association members and guests on Thursday, Oct. 2, at 7:30 p.m. at the Women's Workshop, 72 Columbus Street, Newton Highlands for the season's first open meeting.

Program Chairman Eugene G. Faucher and his committee have planned the program and urge members and guests to attend. There is a guest fee of $1 and no fee for members. A social hour will follow the lecture-demonstration and refreshments will be served.

Guest speaker and demonstrator will be Jack Callahan (of Rockport) whose portraiture, and other works, in oils, pastels, and watercolors may be seen in museums throughout the United States. His commissioned portraits are also hanging in universities, private collections, and public buildings throughout the land. He has received more than thirty major awards in national shows over the past few years, including the Hudson Valley Gold Medal of Honor, and the 1978 Gold Medal from the Rockport Art Association.

Mr. Callahan is listed in "Who's Who" in the east and holds membership in many professional organizations. Some of these groups are The Pastel Society of America, The Hudson Valley Art Association, Allied Artists of America, Academic Artists, the Boston Watercolor Society and the Rockport Art Association. A featured article, "Jack Callahan — the Portrait Art" appeared in the 1979 August edition of the American Artist magazine.

At this meeting awards will be given to the winners of the recent exhibit by Newton Art Association members — "Art on the Green."

The 1980 scholarship winners presented by the Newton Art Association to Newton high school students are already at work in the schools of their choice: Andrew Kessler, first prize winner for his photography, is attending the Rhode Island School of Design. Carol Hsiung, second prize winner, for her drawings and graphics, is at Cornell, majoring in Art.

Newton Art Association exhibits continue in banks in the area.

Morse visits symphony

NEWTON CENTRE — The Newton Symphony Orchestra will open its 15th concert season Oct. 5 with a gala Young Artists Concert featuring Newton talent in a program that includes music of Weber, Mozart and Brahms.

Headlining the program is Newton's own Robert Morse, who is in the area with the production of "Sugar Babies" with Carol Channing. As certain individuals in the Newton Public Schools can attest, you never know what he's going to do next, and the exact nature of his performance with the NSO is being kept a closely guarded secret.

Also featured on the program is the brother-sister, violin-viola duo of Elizabeth and Evan Wilson. Coming from a very musical family, the two distinguished themselves on their instruments at an early age. They have performed as members and-or soloists with the Greater Boston Youth Symphony, the NEC Chamber Orchestra, Newton North High School Orchestra and the All-Newton Music School String Quartet.

Evan was soloist with the Newton Symphony and the Boston Symphony while still in high school and both participated in the Yale University Chamber Music Program in Norfolk, Conn. this summer. Elizabeth is currently enrolled at Harvard and Evan attends the Julliard School.

For their appearance with the NSO, they have chosen the Mozart Symphonia Concertante, a work they performed several years ago with GYBSO.

Continuing under the leadership of Michel Sasson, NSO should also benefit by the addition of BSO violinist Ron Knudsen as concertmaster and associate conductor.

The orchestra will play the curtain-raising "Oberon" Overture by Carl Maria von Weber and Brahms First Symphony, which brings the conert to a close.

Tickets are $5. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. at Meadowbrook Junior High School. For tickets and information call 965-2555.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Nothing is FOREVER . . .most people forget that when buying a home . . . and become painfully aware of it when selling. Sure, it's your home and that place where you can "do your own thing" but someday you'll move. Most people do every 5-8 years. When decorating or making improvements keep in mind that somebody else will someday have to either love it or discount the price enough to change it. —David Wluka, Realtor

In 1956, they accounted for only 26 percent of the $43.5 billion in sales of general merchandise, apparel and furniture. By 1976, they earned more than 44 percent of the $154.3 billion in sales of those kinds. Over the same period, the share of business earned by specialty shops and variety stores declined. Mail order houses also showed gains

DETROIT---The V-8-6-4 digital fuel injection engine incorporates an electromechanical system, controlled by a microprocessor, that automatically calls up eight, six, or four engine cylinders depending on driving requirements.

By doing so, the engine operates in a more efficient manner and represents a significant technological step forward.

This 6.0 liter digital fuel injected V-8-6-4 engine (a GM engine produced by Cadillac), is standard on 1981 De Ville, Fleetwood Brougham, Limousine and Eldorado models. It is an available option to Seville.

The selective operation of eight, six, or four cylinders is provided by four engine valve selector units controlled through a microprocessor.

As the number of cylinders in operation is reduced, the engine is effectively converted from 6.0 liter displacement with all eight cylinders in use, to 4.5 liters with six cylinders operating, to a 3.0 liter engine with four cylinders providing power. By varying the size of the engine in this manner, significant reductions are achieved in the internal work the engine has to do.

Engine valve selctor units are electromechanical devices that are capable of simultaneously deactivating both the intake and exhaust valves of a cylinder. The operating principle designed into these units is to provide control for the point of rotation of the rocker arm assembly and, in doing so, cause the rocker arm to open the valve or allow the valve to remain closed while the remainder of the valve gear is allowed to operate through its normal travel.

During active operation, the fulcrum point is near the center of the rocker arm and as the cam reaches its high point, the valve is brought to an open position, allowing a fuel charge to enter the cylinder. During the inactive stage, the valve will not open because the selector is commanded to release the rocker arm pivot, allowing it to move upward. This in effect shifts the fulcrum point to the top of the stationary valve. With the valve being held closed by its spring, the cylinder is rendered inactive.

Florists idea for men

NEW YORK (UPI) — A florist group has come up with an idea it says can be a help to men who have trouble getting across a message to the women in their lives.

It's the "tickler" bouquet, which F.T.D. florists will deliver in a little vase. In the center of the inexpensive bouquet is a "tickler", a steam of dried grass that looks a little like a soft cattail.

The flowers symbolize different messages: a daisy-carnation combination means "I'm innocent and I'm telling you the truth"; white clover means "Think of me"; french marigolds or yellow roses mean the man is jealous; red tulips are a declaration of love; a four-leaf clover means "Be mine"; and a little ivy stands for marriage.

Biomass by 2000

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty percent of the nation's industrial energy needs in the year 2000 will be met by technologies that are only just emerging now, an energy-oriented publication forecasts.

The publication, Energy User News, estimates the industrial demand for energy that year will approximate 35.9 quadrillion BTU's. Of the 20 percent from new sources, the journal predicts 11 percent will come from biomass, consisting mostly of wood and agricultural waste; the remainder from co-generation (the production of two forms of energy such as electricity and power steam from a single source), geothermal energy including solar; and other sources such as industrial heat pumps.

Two pessimistic forecasts from the journal: the contribution of solar energy by the year 2000 will be "negligible" and the United States will not be energy self-sufficient even by 2020.

Goodwill urges public donations

NEWTONVILLE — Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries urges the public to donate clothing and housewares to its attended donation center in Newtonville, at the First National, 647 Washington Street.

Residents of Watertown and Weston as well as Newtonville are all served by Goodwill's attended donation center, (yellow trailer).

"We are in dire need of household goods," said Jim Delaney, Goodwill's Director of Industrial Operations. "The demand is there. Donations of housewares have dropped considerably and the lag must be made up immediately." Likewise, customers' demand has also risen for clothing, and more donations are needed to assure a full line of fashions throughout the season.

The more household goods and clothing are donated to Goodwill, the more handicapped people Goodwill can employ and rehabilitate, Delaney explained.

"They can really work here and make progress," said Sandra Hebert, Manager of Goodwill's Wares Department in Boston. "The work requires little training and provides steady employment to mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped adults," Hebert added.

Camp Fire girls organizes new clubs in Newton

NEWTON — The Council for Greater Boston Camp Fire has started a new recruitment campaign to organize new clubs in Newton. Flyers will be sent to parents through the Newton Schools in late September, with interested parents invited to an information meeting in early October.

Although the organization is 70 years old this year, making it the oldest one for girls in America, it has a new name, a new image and new goals and new, younger members than ever before. Camp Fire programs are now open to boys as well as girls, and the organization has programs for youngsters as young as six — and a place for adults of any age who want to help.

Persons interested in having their children join Camp Fire or who would like to have information about Camp Fire club leadership should write Camp Fire, 38 Chauncy St., Room 912, Boston, Ma. 02111.

Overnight parking? Not yet in Newton

NEWTON — Overnight parking in Newton has not been officially approved as reported in yesterday's News-Tribune. Newton Ward 1 Alderman Joe DePasquale pointed out that only the public safety and transportation committee approved of a report urging legalization of overnight parking in the city.

Before the suggested measure becomes law, it must be approved by both the legislation and rules committee and the full board of aldermen. Pasquale said he expects a decision to be made before the end of November.

Orson Welles
takes a long, hard look at pay TV.
"Is there anything worse than going out and paying for mediocre entertainment? Yes. There's staying home and paying for it. But you show me only the finest, first run films and specials. All in the privacy of my own home, uncut and uninterrupted, and I'd call that pay TV worth paying for. They call it Preview."
Preview brings you up to 40 first rate films like "Superman©" and "The Amityville Horror" each month. Late night R-rated, adult programming. Plus award winning foreign films. All uncut and commercial free.
You'll see hit plays. Vegas spectaculars. Concerts by super groups like Chicago. And occasional sporting events you won't see anywhere else. On Preview.
And if within two weeks of installation you are not absolutely delighted, we'll refund your money in full.
To find out how to get Preview, just send in the coupon to Preview, 51 Morgan Drive, Norwood, MA 02062. Or call us at 617-769-7700 until 11 PM.
